PREFACE.

IT is perhaps natural that a member of the Cathedral Church of Carlisle should take a special interest in the Register of the Priory of Wetherhal, whose property was transferred to that Church 350 years ago. A careful examination shewed that this Register had a more than ordinary value. It did not merely present the ancient deeds of certain lands and privileges. Its early charters, of older date than any local documents now extant, had historic importance. A very incorrect opinion of these charters has been formed even in later days, and from them very erroneous deductions have been drawn. Again, the number of local references was found to be large; and the names of persons recorded in the charters unusually numerous. Some of these are persons who are here mentioned for the first time; others are characters well known in early English History. Much of this importance is, no doubt, due to the connection of the Priory with the famous Abbey of S. Mary at York.

The error in the local histories, which ascribed the conquest of the district to William I. instead of William Rufus, has been refuted by Lappenberg and Dr Luard. It received some support from the ridiculous addition to the Register termed "Distributio Cumberlandiæ" (No. 245), which was quite at variance with the early charters. But the local histories contain other errors which made it impossible to reconcile many of the statements in this Register. Two may be mentioned, as each is dealt with later in an Appendix. The foundation of the Priory of Carlisle as early as 1102 seemed very improbable; and the episcopate of the second Bishop of Carlisle, Bishop Bernard, placed in the 12th century, whether beginning in 1156 or 1186, was equally improbable. Further investigation has shewn that these assumptions were clearly mistakes. By their correction, many local characters and incidents fall into their true position, and not a few problems are solved.

Some confusion is caused by the great variations of spelling, both in place names and personal names. When references or quotations are given, the spelling there used is retained and not necessarily that of the charter.

There are mistakes in the language and in the letters of the words of the charters, due to the transcriber or the original writer. These in some very glaring instances have been corrected.

The local histories, ancient and modern, give hardly any authorities for their statements; it is therefore difficult, often impossible, to verify them. I have endeavoured to give early authorities in many cases, such as have come under my own notice, enough to shew how much has yet to be done. Few references are given to the well-known writers of the 17th and 18th centuries; where possible, earlier sources of information have been used.

Great assistance has been obtained from some of the unpublished local manuscripts, which I have reason to think will not long remain in manuscript only.

(1) The Register of Lanercost (to be carefully distinguished from the Chronicon de Lanercost) is a valuable Transcript now with the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. Its charters date from about 1169, but their chief interest consists in the local references and in the very large number of witnesses who attest the deeds.

(2) The Register of Holm Cultram contains charters dating from 1150, but unfortunately the names of very few witnesses are entered. Some of the charters are of considerable interest. One manuscript, probably of the 14th century, is with the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle; and to this the references in the notes have been chiefly made. Two other old Manuscripts and a Transcript are among the Harleian Manuscripts in the British Museum (Nos. 3891, 3911, 1881). These three differ in many points from one another.

(3) The Register of the Priory of S. Bega (Harleian MSS. 434) contains a number of deeds, nearly all of only local importance. Beyond the early charters, little use has been made of this.

(4) The oldest Registers of the Bishops of Carlisle, viz. of Bishop John Halton, Bishop John Rosse, Bishop John Kirkby, Bishop Gilbert Welton and Bishop Thomas Appleby. These Registers are in two volumes and cover a period from 1293 to 1386; but there are no entries from 1345 to 1353. They contain much valuable information often difficult to decipher. The extracts made from them by Bishop Nicolson were simply copied by Nicolson and Burn in their History; and it will be noticed that most of their definite information as to parishes refers only to this period.

Advantage can now be taken of the excellent publications of the Record Commission and of the Rolls Series, as well as of the great facilities offered to persons who are anxious to search at the Public Record Office. All these have been largely used.

The principal note on any place or person will, as a rule, be found under the first mention of the same in the text of the Register. These notes, though some of them are long, do not pretend to be exhaustive, but rather to point out the directions in which further information may be found. The General Index and the Index of Personal Names will, it is hoped, be sufficiently copious for all purposes of reference.

I am indebted to the late Rev. James Raine, Canon of York, for some valuable criticisms, especially on the Foundation of the Priory of Carlisle (Appendix B); also to my friend, Dr Henderson, Dean of Carlisle, for not a few important suggestions.

This book cannot be expected to have many readers, but I trust that some may find here matters of value to them, and information which cannot be found elsewhere or which is not readily accessible. There are few parts of England whose history, from Roman days onward, exceeds in interest that of this district. We may look for a more complete and accurate account than any that has yet appeared. To this desired end, the present work is a small contribution.

INTRODUCTION.

THE Register of Wetherhal throws light upon an important point in the early history of the district in which the Priory of Wetherhal was placed. A very few years before the Monastery was founded, the boundary of the kingdom had been extended. In the year 1092, William Rufus had swept over this north-western corner of the country, and made it part of England. Its previous history is involved in no little obscurity. The old Stræclod, or Strathclyde, of the Britons had passed through many changes and troubles. This Strathclyde, when we find its limits more defined, in 1069, stretched from the Clyde to the Duddon, and afterwards only to the Derwent. It was known also by the name of Cumbria, though this was a later designation, not appearing before the 9th century. After the Romans left at the beginning of the 5th century, it had been harried by Pict and Scot, by Angle and Dane. At length, in the 10th century, in 945, Eadmund, King of Saxon England, who had ravaged the land of Cumbria, ceded it to Malcolm I., to be held as a fief of the English crown. This somewhat uncertain vassalage prevailed until the great expedition of William the Conqueror into Scotland along the east coast in 1072. The outcome of that incursion was that Malcolm III., Malcolm Ceanmor, King of Scots, did homage to the Norman and promised to "become his man." This pledge of homage bound Malcolm but little. Whenever opportunity offered, he laid waste Northumbria, whether the

William II.

Conqueror or his successor was King. We can therefore well understand the desire of William Rufus to secure a "scientific frontier." He attained this object when he seized the southern part of Cumbria, began to rebuild Carlisle, and made the Solway Firth the northern boundary on the western side of his kingdom. He gave the lordship of the district to one of his followers, Ranulf Meschin, Viscount of the Bessin in Normandy. This limit we find mentioned in a royal charter 30 years later as the "boundary of Ranulf Meschin" (Appendix A, p. 476). There can be little doubt it was William Rufus who put the warlike Norman Baron in charge of the new territory, though none of the Chroniclers register the appointment.

Ranulf
Meschin.

Ranulf was the nephew of Hugh, Earl of Chester. Earl Hugh was the staunch friend and supporter of William, and, only the year before, had ceded to the King the fortress of Avranches in Normandy, a portion of his brother Henry's dominion. We know that, the year after, in 1093, Ranulf was present at Chester when Earl Hugh refounded there the Abbey of S. Werburgh. And now a few years later, our Register brings him before us. He was not an Earl, but he was in full possession as Lord of the district, the "power" or "honor of Carlisle" (Appendix A, p. 471). At his castle of Appleby up the valley of the Eden, he commanded the roads into Yorkshire and the valley of the Tees, which had been so often trodden by the invading Scots. Some 30 miles lower down, just where the river valley opens out and debouches on to the plain in which rises the City of Carlisle, he founded the Monastery of Wetherhal, for a Prior and twelve monks of the Benedictine Order (Illustrative Docum. LI.).

The situation is well chosen. It is beautiful, like so many of the sites of the early convents. It is only some 4 or 5 miles from the ancient city which his Royal Master lately ordered to be rebuilt out of the ruins in which it had lain for 200 years. It is close to the direct road, shortly after known as the Via Regia (No. 5) from Carlisle to Appleby, and it is near the eastern road which runs through the dip in the fells to Hexham and Northumbria.

Just underneath runs the lovely stream of the Eden, and he takes care that the mill-bay and salmon sluice are secured to the monks by a separate charter. He endows them with the manor and Church of Wederhal and certain lands near, with the Chapel of Warthwic and the Churches of S. Michael and S. Laurence at Appleby, which his chaplain Radulph has held, also with two-thirds of the tithes of his demesne at Appleby on both sides of the river and of the tithes of Maiburne and Salchild. All these he grants to the Monastery as a Cell, or dependent, of the Benedictine Abbey of S. Mary at York, to which his King, William Rufus, and members of his own family have been liberal benefactors. He names in these charters two of his brothers, Richard and William Meschin, and his wife Lucia, probably present at the time.

Lucia was, no doubt, the link which connected Ranulf more directly with the Abbey of S. Mary. She was the widow of Roger de Romara, and we believe the only daughter of Ivo Taillebois (Appendix A), who about this time endowed the Abbey at York with Churches and tithes in what was afterwards the Barony of Kendal, which he held immediately to the south of the territory of Ranulf (Illust. Docum. xvi.). Ivo Taillebois, as he is called in Domesday Book, had no lands near this district at the time of the Domesday Survey in 1085-86, though he possessed some in Lincolnshire and in Norfolk. These possessions on the border of this newly acquired land were at that date in the hands of the Crown, and were, there is little doubt, given to Ivo somewhat later by William Rufus in return for service done. And we can well believe that about the time William made this grant to Ivo on the former border of England, he placed Ivo's son-in-law, Ranulf Meschin, in command of the newly conquered district which he had now included within its bounds.

There is no record of any other monastery existing in the district at the beginning of the 12th century. The Convent of Augustinian Canons at Carlisle was not founded before 1122-23 (Appendix B). The religious House at Hexham on the east had never recovered from the destruction of the Danish inroads, but was to be refounded a few years later, and then to be turned into an Augustinian Convent by Archbishop Thurstin. Of the several monasteries which were to rise around them during the next hundred years, not one was now existing. Much good could be wrought by the monks in those rough and troublous times. There was a call for religion and hospitality, for healing and agriculture, in that comparatively rude state; and these the brotherhood supplied. It was a wise thought which led the Lord of the new district to place here this outpost, and to connect it with the centre of culture and society in the important city of York. The country round was not the barbarous and desolate land which some historians have supposed. War-trodden and harried it had been; some of its towns, like Carlisle, had been left in ruins on the ground. But many Churches were certainly existing, as at Appleby, Kirkby-Stephan, Morland and Wetherhal. Even in the neighbouring wild district of Gillesland, there was a Chapel of wattlework, at Treverman, in the days of the Saxon Bishop Egelwine (1056-1071). The local incidents which Bede gives us connected with S. Cuthbert, and the famous Saxon cross at Bewcastle tell us the same story¹. In the earliest records, we have mention of mills and highways, pastures and cultivated lands. And as we go on a few years, there are marks of civilization and social life which must have long existed.

Ranulf
Meschin.

We learn from other sources that Ranulf Meschin founded certain Baronies in the District, three upon the northern border. These Barons were to guard the way against the Scots, especially when Ranulf was absent in Normandy with his Royal Masters, William Rufus and Henry I. At the great battle of Tinchebrai in September, 1106, he was far away from his northern charge. The wreck of the White Ship in 1120 made a great change in his fortunes. He then became an Earl, succeeding to the Earldom and to the estates of his cousin Richard, Earl of Chester. But he had to yield the lordship of Carlisle to the King (Appendix A, p. 470). This is borne out by our Register, where the charters of Henry I. granted some 10 years later shew the land to be in the hands of the Crown (Nos. 5 and 8), and speak of the time when Ranulph, Earl of Chester, held the "Honor of Carlisle." In the year 1122 an important event took place. Henry I. came down Henry I. into the north in October, and, turning aside from York toward the western sea, inspected the city of Carlisle, and ordered it to be further fortified. Soon after, it seems clear, the Priory of Carlisle was founded by the King under the advice of Archbishop Thurstin, and not as wrongly stated in 1102 (Appendix B). This was a House of Regular Canons of S. Augustine, and Athelwold, Prior of Nostell and later the first Bishop of Carlisle, was the first Prior. Carlisle being made the See of the Bishop, the Prior and Convent of Carlisle were brought into business relations with the Priory of Wetherhal, and often appear in this Register.

Henry I. endowed Wetherhal with valuable privileges and certain rights of pasture (No. 5). Other early grants were made by men of note in their day (No. 14). These grants and privileges were confirmed by Henry II., and the three succeeding Kings; but there is no confirmation charter of King Stephen. This Stephen. omission we might expect. On the death of Henry I., David, King of Scots, took up arms against Stephen in support of his niece, the Empress Matilda. He invaded England in 1136, and seized the newly fortified city of Carlisle. He passed on into Northumbria, and was then met by Stephen at Durham, where, however, terms of peace were arranged. The city and a great part of the District of Carlisle were ceded to David, and became for a time Scottish possessions. The effect of this cession only lasted about 20 years; for in 1157 the grant was recalled by Henry II. and he ruled up to the former boundary of England. Hence Stephen would have no power to grant a charter to Wetherhal. But there is during that period the confirmation of a grant of Adam son of Suan by King David of Scotland (No. 198). Besides his general confirmation charter, Richard I. specially confirms the grant given by Henry I. of pasture between the River Eden and the Via Regia within the bounds of the Manor. The charter of Henry III. is a confirmation and Inspeximus of a charter of Henry II. to S. Mary's at York. There is no charter of Edward I. in the Register or of any succeeding King; though we know that charters were granted in later times (p. 431).

Early
jurisdiction.

There were naturally frequent relations between this monastery and the Bishops of Carlisle, and not always of the most pleasant kind. It is not easy to determine the ecclesiastical jurisdiction under which the land of Carlisle was placed in early times. At all events, from the days of S. Cuthbert until 1092, it would seem to have been under the Bishops of Lindisfarne and their successors the Bishops of Durham. Many a memorial connects the name of the seventh century Saint with the district. The Fons Sti Cuthberti near the monastery, so accurately defined in the Register (No. 43) and now called the Holy Well, is an instance. The Diocese of Hexham, which ceased to be a See in 821, never came west of the Eden (p. 399). The claims of the Diocese of Glasgow, which were pressed during the 11th and 12th centuries, and even up to 1258, seem never to have been allowed; and we know that the Solway Firth was the acknowledged boundary of that Diocese under Earl David in 1120 (Appendix A, p. 475). From amid the confusion of the time when this district was added to England, York emerges having established her jurisdiction, and that, probably at the very beginning of the century under the influence of King Henry I. We find Michael, Bishop of Glasgow, who was consecrated by Archbishop Thomas II. between 1109 and 1114, acting as the suffragan of York in the district, and even holding ordinations in the old Church of Morland, where he later found his grave (p. 43 n.). One of these charters of Henry I. (No. 9) is addressed to the famous Archbishop Thurstin, or Thurstan, a year or two before the foundation at his instigation of the Bishopric of Carlisle by the

Thurstin.

King in 1133. We have then two charters by Athelwold, the first Bishop (Nos. 15, 16). He occupied a strange position. He took an important part in English affairs, and, an English Bishop, he discharged his episcopal functions for many years in a Diocese which was under the rule of a Scottish King (Appendix B, p. 488). His charters afford an early instance of the impropriation of parish Churches and of the mention of "ancient synodals and archidiaconal dues."

This Register affords strong evidence of the existence of Bishop Bernard, the second Bishop of Carlisle, and of episcopal work done by him in the Diocese. Serious doubts have been entertained of both one and the other. Most of those who have admitted his existence have placed his episcopate at two impossible dates, 1156, when Bishop Athelwold died, and 1186, when Henry II. was in Carlisle and endeavoured in vain to fill the See on the supposed death of Bernard. It seems clear now that for the long period until 1204 the Bishopric was vacant (Appendix D). Some of its custodians, during the vacancy, such as Archdeacons Robert, and Peter de Ros, are here brought before us. Then Bernard, Archbishop of Ragusa, was collated to the See by Geoffrey, Archbishop of York, at the command of King John. This post was begged of the King by Pope Innocent III., and here Bernard remained for about 10 years receiving, besides other emoluments, a royal annuity of 20 marcs. Thus the second Bishop of Carlisle was a poverty-stricken foreigner, foisted upon the district by the Pope of Rome.

Bishop Bernard confirmed (Nos. 117, 122) a remarkable composition (No. 119), which had been entered into not long before between the monks of Wetherhal and the Canons of Lanercost, concerning the patronage of the Church of Nether Denton. This had been a matter of dispute between the two Priories, and the series of documents in the Register shews the interest which it had excited.

The Priory of Augustinian Canons at Lanercost had been founded on the banks of the river Irthing, some 8 miles distant from Wetherhal to the north-east, by Robert de Vallibus, Baron of Gillesland, about the year 1169. The Barony had been granted to his father Hubert by Henry II. in 1157 (Illustrative Docum. xxii., xxiii.); and it extended along the banks of the Eden opposite to Wetherhal. Naturally, there were matters and persons of common interest to the two Houses; and our Register receives frequent and valuable illustration from the extant Register of Lanercost. Another monastery had been founded in the district, the Abbey of Cistercian monks at Holm Cultram on the Solway Firth, by Earl Henry of Scotland, in January 1150. With this Abbey, Wetherhal seems to have had little to do.

Hugh.

The third Bishop of Carlisle, Bishop Hugh, appears in several charters, chiefly confirmations. He was the Abbot of the Cistercian Convent of Beaulieu in Hampshire, not, as often stated, of Beaulieu in Burgundy. He was consecrated in February, 1218-19, after a nearly 4 years' vacancy of the See; and, when his episcopate ended, the succession seems to have been clear and continuous.

Bishop
Walter.

The fourth Bishop, Walter Malclerk, has but one charter (No. 211) in the Register, and that a grant of land in Morland to a private individual, Nicholas Legat. He filled the See for above 20 years, from 1223 to 1246, and was more engaged in the public affairs of the country than in the work of his own Diocese.

Bishop
Silvester.

The fifth Bishop, Silvester de Everdon, confirmed (No. 26) in 1247 the impropriation of certain Churches in the Diocese belonging to the Abbey of S. Mary at York. To this Bishop, in the following year, the Abbot and Convent of S. Mary made over the advowson of the Churches of Ormesheved (Ormside), Musgrave, Clibburn and Burgh (under Stanemore), also of the Vicarage of S. Michael, Appleby, reserving the pension of 20 marcs annually received by the Prior of Wederhal (No. 240).

Bishop
Thomas
Vipont.

The next Bishop, Thomas de Vipont, or de Veteriponte, left only one mark on the Register during his short episcopate of a few months. This was an award (No. 27) in March 1256 between the Abbot and Convent of S. Mary and the Vicar of S. Michael's, Appleby, by which certain curious items of income were assigned to the Vicar and his successors.

Ten years later, the seventh Bishop, Robert de Chauncy, executed a remarkable document (No. 34). A controversy had arisen concerning the institution of the Prior of Wetherhal and the custody of the Priory during a vacancy. The Bishop agreed to yield all claim to such custody, and to admit such monk as the Abbot of S. Mary's at York should present, the Priory giving up the annual pension of 2½ marcs which they had received out of the Church of Nether Denton since it had passed into the patronage of the Bishops of Carlisle. There is also a strong letter of excommunication (No. 200), directed by the same Bishop in 1274 against certain "sons of iniquity" who had destroyed the pool and water supply of the mill of Culgaith, in the parish of Kirkland, which belonged to the Priory. No later Bishop appears in the Register.

There are but few Papal documents. The earliest is an Indult (No. 33) of Pope Alexander III., dated 1165, allowing the Abbot and Convent of S. Mary at York to appoint Chaplains to serve their Churches which have no Vicars with special pensions from the said Churches. There is a confirmation (No. 18) in 1226 by Pope Honorius III. of the charters of Bishop Athelwold and Bishop Bernard. Pope Gregory IX. in 1240 confirmed (No. 25) to the Abbot and Convent of S. Mary the right to enter upon the Church of S. Michael, Appleby, on a vacancy, notwithstanding the opposition of the Bishop, and allowed the right of patronage which they had for the use of the Priory of Wederhal. Some dispute on the subject appears to have arisen with Bishop Walter Malclerk. This is one of the frequent instances where King, or Bishop, or monk, no doubt for a consideration, secured the Papal sanction in order to further their own ends. The Pope was never unwilling to interfere, as it increased the Papal influence and brought money into the Papal treasury.

Among other ecclesiastical matters, there is a curious contract (No. 44) entered into with great solemnity in 1161-65 between

Robert de Chauncy.

Papal
Documents.

Corkeby
Chapel.

Abbot Clement and William son of Odard. He was the Lord both of Warthwic and of Corkeby, the latter a small demesne just opposite the monastery on the bank of the River Eden; and he had built a Chapel at Corkeby within his own curtilage. It was agreed that Mass should be celebrated there on Fridays and Sundays, the proper Chaplain or one of the monks to officiate. The Prior was to have the key, and no one was to enter without his leave. The service was to be for William and his wife, and the servants of his household, and any guests who might happen to be present. But all parishioners of Corkeby, male and female, great and small, were forbidden; they were to go with their offerings to the mother Church of Wederhal. On the principal Festivals, William, his wife and all his household were to go with their oblation to the Church of Wederhal to hear the Divine Office. If they were absolutely prevented by the inclemency of the weather, then, the same day, they were to send their offering to the Prior, on every occasion 13 pence at the least. When they were away from home, the Chapel was to be closed. William, moreover, undertook to pay for ever the tithe of his mill whether in the territory of Warthwic or of Corkeby; this he appears of late to have detained. This is an early instance of a private Chapel, and shews the tight hand which the monastery kept upon its dues.

Strickland
Chapel.

Somewhat later, about 1235, we find the record of another private Chapel at Strickland (No. 201) in Westmoreland, and Walter de Styrkeland obtained the concession of a Chantry in his Chapel, the rights of the Vicar and the mother Church of Morland being carefully guarded.

Altars.

There was in the Church of the Priory of Wetherhal an altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary and an altar of the Holy Trinity. This perhaps accounts for the fact that in the charters the dedication of the Church is sometimes given "S. Mary and S. Constantine," sometimes as "Holy Trinity and S. Constantine." For lights before these altars, or in the Church generally, numerous gifts were made: 12*d.* annually, lands in Denton, in Melmorby, in Ulvesby (Nos. 63, 126, 181, 182, 183). John de Wederhal gave land in Kabbergh that one wax light of 8 lbs. weight should burn every day before the altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary while Mass was being celebrated there (No. 178). Roger de Bello Campo gave his body to be buried in the Church, and with it Burials. land in Cringeldic to find a vestment and light for ever at the altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary (No. 172). Alan de Langewayt also gave his body to be buried there, and with it gave all his land in Warthwic (No. 57). Similar grants of land were made by Walter the porter at Wetherhal, who is such a frequent witness (No. 86), and by Anselm de Neuby (No. 141) to secure the right of sepulture there.

We have, in the first grant of Ranulph Meschin, an early Manors. example of the territorial jurisdiction of the Norman "Manor" or Manerium. Though the name is Norman, no doubt the Manor itself really represented the ancient township, which had existed long before the coming of the Norman. The change from the old English village community had begun before the Conquest; and in the Domesday Survey this territorial lordship, this Manerium, is constantly recognized. The free tenants (liberi homines, No. 92) of the lord of the manor answered to the freemen of the village community: and in both cases there was the servile class, the slave (nativus) whose slavery was hereditary and who, with his wife and family (cum sequela sua) and goods, was absolutely at the disposal of his master or lord. We have instances in the Register of the sale or barter of such slaves to the monks of Wetherhal (Nos. 132, 156). The lord of the manor, whether a private person or an ecclesiastical corporation, had a separate jurisdiction, independent of other judicial authorities. His men were free from other courts, so far as the grant of the fief to the lord permitted, and were judged by the custom of their own manor. These private courts had also grown up in Anglo-Saxon times, but were greatly multiplied under the Norman Kings. The "freemen" held their tenemental lands under the customs of the manor, and rendered rent and other services to the lord. The customs of the Manor of Wetherhal are clearly brought out as early as the year 1235, when a case came before the King's Court, between John son of Elmine, a "freeman" of Wetherhal, who held two bovates of land, and Robert, Abbot of S. Mary's at York (No. 92). In addition to the payment of 8s. annually, it was agreed that John and his heirs had to render the following services :— to carry the corn of the Abbot and his successors at Wetherhal one day in autumn, to find one man to reap one day in autumn, to plough one day in the year, to carry wood for the mill and the fish pool and with the other men of Wetherhal to repair them, to grind his corn at the mill of Wetherhal giving up to the thirteenth measure, and to pay pannage. He was to have no claim by reason of the said tenement on the forest clearings of the monastery, save the privilege of common of pasture on the fallows and stubbles. This was the only special privilege that could be claimed by the "freemen."

pasture.

These matters of pannage and of pasture are interesting in connection with the early charter given by Henry I. (No. 5). The King had granted to the monastery the right of feeding their pigs in the King's Forest, without payment of pannage. This Forest, known later as the Forest of Cumberland and the Forest of Inglewood, came up to the river Eden on the west, and this manor of Wetherhal was really within its nominal boundaries. Hence, the anxiety of the monks to secure the confirmation of their rights by the King as soon as the district passed into the hands of the Crown; and especially the confirmation of the right of pasture in the large tract between the river and the King's highway or Via Regia, from Wetherhal to the southern boundary of the manor at Dribec (No. 5). The Via Regia passed through the manor. This right of pasture was evidently distinct from any ordinary right of the lord of the manor over commons or wastes, as we learn more fully from the confirmation charter of Edward III. (Illustrative Documents, xxxiii., lii.). By that charter the monks, who seem to have been harassed by the Officers of the Forest, were empowered to depasture not only their own cattle and animals of all kinds on the said ground, but also to take on the cattle of other persons, as they pleased, and to apply the profits thereof to their own use without hindrance.

Certain of the tenemental lands were from time to time granted to the Priory absolutely by the tenants; and the charters shew what care was taken to secure a legal conveyance of the property (Nos. 62, 65-70, 84-86 et al.) The boundaries of the manor were carefully set out (No. 236) and can still be traced with great accuracy. The bounds of the Wetherhal sanctuary were much narrower than those of the manor, and they are defined, but not so clearly (Appendix C and Illustrative Documents, xxx.). They were marked by six crosses; the site of one, which stood also on the boundary of the manor, and was called Wetherhal Gryth-Crosse (No. 236), can be clearly determined. This privilege of sanctuary was secured, we find, by the Royal Charter of Henry I., which granted to Wetherhal the same liberties as were enjoyed by the Churches of S. Peter in York and S. John in Beverley (Appendix C). No refuge was allowed to those who had committed felony within the liberty. Felons from without, who sought sanctuary there, had to toll a certain bell in the Church, and swear before the Bailiffs of the liberty that henceforth they would demean themselves well and faithfully. They might then remain as long as they pleased, if they did not leave the bounds. This privilege was of great value in an age when justice moved slowly, and when every man was ready at once to avenge his wrong and to summon his friends to assist him. The sanctuary afforded a refuge at all events until such time as passion might cool down, or friends mediate, or a fair trial could be had. It is clear that numbers resorted to the sanctuary. In the 14th century, we hear of Edward III. promising the Royal pardon to the "grithmen," men who had found the grith or peace of Wederhale and of some other sanctuaries, if they went out and fought in Scotland (Illustrative Documents xxviii.).

The proximity of the lords of the manor of Corkeby brought the monks of Wetherhal into other than ecclesiastical relations with them. The history of this manor is carried back by our Register to the beginning of the 12th century. Westcubric son of William Steffan is mentioned in the charters of Ranulf Meschin and Henry I. and evidently as the lord. The grant of Gillesland by Henry II. to Hubert de Vallibus in 1157 proves that Westcubric was formerly in possession (p. 8 n.). Then Osbert son of Odard, probably Odard Baron of Wigton, appears as lord in the middle of the 12th century (No. 35). His brother William succeeded and, after William, his descendants, until the manor went through a female heir into the family of de Richmund (p. 108 n.). By sale and grant the manor and house of Corby has since passed through many hands. Naturally the interests of the lords on the opposite sides of the river occasionally clashed; sometimes their relations were very friendly, at others they were a little strained. In the days of old, when the monks were on the spot, they seem as a rule to have got the better of the lords of Corby; but in the time of the Dean and Chapter, the lords of Corby have had the advantage. The Dean and Chapter often took little heed of their business, and their successors have suffered. An instance might be cited in the assumption of the ancient fishery coops in the waters of the Eden.

Fish pool.

Ranulf Meschin, in addition to the manorial fishing rights, had granted by special charter (No. 2) the fish pool and sluice, in the river Eden just below the monastery, which were to be fixed in the opposite bank of Corkeby. No one was to disturb this, or to fish the water on either side below the pool as far down as Munchwath. This was a matter of grave importance to the monks. With the sluice and the "coffins," or coops, placed there, they obtained the salmon which formed such a valuable part of the food of the Priory. It was necessary not only that the holding ground on the opposite bank should be retained but that the fish should not be taken before they reached the coops. As early, therefore, as 1157-67, they got Osbert the son of Odard de Corkeby to grant them (No. 35) the whole of the fishing in the Eden which belonged to the vill of Corkeby ; and in order that there might be no difficulty about their own fishery, he gave them the whole of the bank on his side as far as Munchwath. Shortly after William, his brother and successor, and then Robert the son of William, confirmed these grants, enlarging on the point that no one should fish between the pool and Munchwath with hook, or net, or in any other way. An agreement had, it appears, been entered into by which every eighth fish taken in the coops was to be given to the lord of Corkeby, but this was resigned by Robert son of William (No. 42) in a further charter of confirmation, probably in the year 1208, witnessed by the King's justices itinerant. Other points, such as the number of boats to be kept on the water (No. 42), the fine to be paid by the person fishing in the water of the monks (No. 46) and the permission to take stone and wood from Corkeby to repair the weir and the bank on that side (No. 42) are carefully set out. The number and importance of these charters shews the value which was attached to this fishery at that point.

In 1293 the Abbot of S. Mary's was summoned before the justices itinerant for having raised the height of the pool by a foot, and contracted the pass in the river, which by old custom was to be wide enough for a sow with her five little pigs. The twelve jurors however found that the "pool and engine" were in the state in which they had been from time immemorial. This and other trials prove how jealously these fishing privileges were watched in the 13th century (Illustrative Documents vi.).

Salt also was an article of great importance to the Monastery. Salt pans. They secured very soon, in the first half of the 12th century (No. 101), two salinæ, or salt-pans, at Burgh on the Sands, where salt could be made by evaporation from the waters of the Solway Firth. These salinæ were the gift of Radulph Engahin, who had married Ybri, the daughter of Robert d'Estrivers to whom Ranulf Meschin had given the Barony of Burgh. They were the subject of several charters. Another salina was obtained later, on the west coast of Cumberland (No. 135).

Nominal
rents.

There are several instances of curious nominal rents or tenures to be paid. Thus a pair of white gloves (No. 91); a rose on June 24th (No. 78); and one pound, or half a pound, of cumin, always at Carlisle Fair. The pound of cumin seems to have been valued at 3*d.* (No. 52) about the end of the 12th century.

measures.

Certain measures of land, which have been much discussed, are here made clear so far as this district is concerned. The bovate, or oxgang, is shewn to be equivalent to eight acres, and more accurately to one half of 15½ acres (No. 138); and the carucate, or plough's worth, as equivalent to 8 bovates. The usual acra, roda, and pertica, or perca, are mentioned; but we do not hear of the hide, though we have hidagium.

Places in
hal.

The older charters mark other names and places, besides the well-known mill and fish pool, in the more immediate neighbourhood of the Monastery, many of which must date from Anglo-Saxon times. The Parish Church of Wetherhal and the Chapel of Warthwic (Warwick) must have long existed. The sites of Munchwath, the Monks' Ford, and of S. Cuthbert's Spring, and of the piece of land having the strange name of the Camera Constantini, can be clearly identified, though the names are no longer known. They seem to point back to some old monastic House near, long before the Norman came into the district. The Via Regia, or Hee Strette, from Carlisle to Appleby (No. 5) can be traced along a present road to the bounds of the manor at Drybec; it is then mentioned again near Renwick on the other side of the river Eden (No. 175), having probably crossed at Armathwaite and then sought the higher ground. Warthwic bridge must have occupied the same position as the bridge at the present day. Just below the bridge still runs into the Eden the little stream which divided the manors and drained the marsh between Wetherhal and Warthwic, and was then called Sorbeke or Sawbeke (No. 236). Other places, whose names are still extant, will be found entered in the notes.

Wether-
hal Cells.

Not far from the Priory, about 700 yards higher up the river, are three rock-hewn cells which must have existed in the days of the monks, and probably long before. Their large size, each roughly 20 feet by 10 and nearly 9 feet high, and their position overhanging the river at a height of about 40 feet, points to their occupation as a place of concealment and of safety. They may well have been used in times of danger for the goods or grain of the monastery and perhaps to conceal some of their outlying dependents. Such times were not unfrequent on that border land. They are not mentioned in the Register, though from the patron saint they got the modern name of St Constantine's Cells, otherwise Wetherhal Safeguard. It is quite possible that in their beginning they may date from Roman times. The quarry of excellent stone just beyond, so conveniently situated for river carriage, and the Roman inscription on the face of the cliff a few yards above the cells, seem to give colour to the suggestion¹.

We find some interesting references in the 13th century to Carlisle. the neighbouring City of Carlisle. We read as early as 1200 of the Porta Bocharði (No. 94), the gate in the southern walls of the City, named, according to tradition, after one Bocharð, a Fleming. Then we have the Vicus Bocharði (No. 95), the street within the City, the continuation of which is now called Botcher-gate; and the neighbouring hamlet of Bocharðby (No. 97). There is also mention of the precincts of the Old Castle (No. 93), and of the Hospital of S. Nicholas, which was outside the City to the south (Nos. 95, 96). The Register affords us the name of the earliest Mayor of Carlisle of whom I have found any record, Richard son of Walkelin, Major, shortly after 1240; also of another Mayor, in 1270 and in 1280, Alexander de Bolotun. We learn too that Syward, the Præpositus, or Provost, of Carlisle was the Appleby. chief officer towards the end of the 12th century, and before 1195 (No. 74). There would not be any Mayor yet appointed. Other towns also come in, such as Appleby with its Castle and Churches at the very beginning of the 12th century; and, in the early part of the 13th, its Burgamote, or Burghers' Court of the Community, and its Hospital of S. Nicholas. Many villages occur also, in connection with which points of interest appear, which are noted under their several names. Some, like Morland and Great Salkeld, are illustrated by the history of the time; others, like Camboc and Carlaton and Eston, have left scarce a record, their Churches vanished, their parishes merged in those adjoining.

names.

It is more difficult than in most parts of England to determine the derivation of the place names in this district. The successive immigrations of peoples who supplanted the ancient Celtic inhabitants, or Britons, have all left marks behind them. The Angle or Saxon, the Dane, and the Norseman may be traced by the characteristic name which he occasionally gave to the place of his sojourn. Passing from the south, we enter at Wetherhal upon the more level lands which stretch to the north and west. There, up to the Border and westward to the sea, we find the Saxon terminations ton and stock and ham, and mixed with them most frequently, the Danish suffix by. South of Wetherhal, and elsewhere on the higher, rougher grounds, we meet the thwaite and garth, the fell and bec, which prove where the Northman has dwelt. Most of the river names would appear to be Celtic. History affords us no record of a Norse immigration, as it does of the inroad of Saxon and Dane. But the Northmen who sailed down the western seas and occupied the western islands did not neglect to throw out settlers on to the mainland. The long estuary of the Solway Firth, not unlike some of their native fiords, would attract many of them; and to it, not improbably, a Norse name was given¹. Hence in trying to ascribe those place names to their authors, conjectures have to be hazarded, and often languages are mixed, and some strange mistakes have been made¹.

Numerous officers, both lay and ecclesiastical, are mentioned in the Register. The earliest record of a Sheriff of this district occurs in the first charter of Ranulf Meschin. Richer was then Sheriff of Carlisle, though the existence of a Sheriff in that district until long afterwards has been much doubted². William is the earliest Archdeacon mentioned (No. 2) but he was, it seems most probable, Archdeacon of York. Robert, who often occurs in the Register, was, I at one time thought, the first Archdeacon of Carlisle, but a charter of Bishop Athelwold in the Chartulary of Whitby speaks of "Elyas, Archdeacon" (p. 64 n.). As Robert was Archdeacon after Bishop Athelwold's death in 1156, Elyas must have preceded him, and would seem to be the first on record. That he was an Archdeacon of Carlisle seems clear from the fact that his name is coupled in the charter with "the Chapter of S. Mary" (of Carlisle). No Prior is mentioned in that charter; and this connection seems to support the view that Bishop Athelwold was for a time Prior of Carlisle as well as Bishop. Before that Bishop's death, Walter was Prior of Carlisle, and is often met with in this Register. The Register names many of the Archdeacons and Priors of the 12th and 13th centuries³. The Bishop's Official, or Official Principal, appears as early as 1180-92 in the person of "Thomas de Thorp, Official of Carlisle," the See then being vacant (p. 92 n.). He was succeeded by Adam de Kirkeby, Gervase de Louth, and Walter de Ulvesby. The two latter Officials, as seems to have been often the case, were promoted to be Archdeacons. The Archdeacon, as well as the Bishop, had, it appears, an Official of his own (No. 32), and the seals are mentioned of the Archdeacon, the Chapter and the Official of Carlisle (Nos. 44, 86). Rural Deans are frequently witnesses to these charters. At the end of the 12th century, four rural deaneries are named, which are practically the same as those existing in the 18th century, viz. Carlisle, Cumberland, Westmoreland and Allerdale or Alnedale. Then we have at an early period the Dean of Appelby, apparently a somewhat earlier name for the Dean of Westmorland; of Levinton, a large Barony; and of Gillesland, an early division due perhaps to Gillesland being kept so distinct and having been, to some extent, under the episcopal jurisdiction of Durham. The duties of the Rural Deans seem to have been sufficiently onerous. They had to levy the fines imposed in the Bishop's and Archdeacon's Courts, and to see executed the orders given there; to summon those who had to appear at the Bishop's or the Archdeacon's Visitation; to collect procurations that were in arrear and, on behalf of the Bishop, such taxes as had been laid upon the Clergy by the Crown. There are instances in the early part of the 14th century of instructions to the four Rural Deans, spoken of above, to carry out all such duties (p. 71 n.).

Families.

The names of very early members of many well-known ancient families in the district are met with in the Register. For example, in the family of de Vallibus, Robert, called the second Lord of Gillesland, Ranulph his brother and Robert his nephew and heir, also Ronald, the Lord of Triermain and bastard brother of this second Robert, and many others. We note too early members of the families of Aglionby, Curwen, Levington, Lucy, Dacre, Tilliol of Scaleby, Strickland and Warwick. Many relationships are established, and not a few of the errors rife in the local histories are corrected. Thus Hugo de Morvilla, Lord of Burgo, is proved to be the son, not the grandson, of Simon de Morvilla (No. 101); and Christiana is shewn to be the wife of the much discussed Ketell son of Eldred. A good deal of light is thrown on the "two Odards" in the 12th century, about whom there has been not a little controversy, Odard son of Hildred and Odard the Sheriff (of Carlisle); several of their descendants also occur. The error which confused Hugh de Morville, Lord of Burgo, with Hugh, one of the assassins of Thomas Becket and Lord of the Honor of Knaresborough, might have been avoided by noting that the latter was the contemporary of Simon the father of the former Sir Hugh (No. 101).

The charters in this Register belong almost entirely to the 12th and 13th centuries. After Anglo-Saxon times, it was during these two centuries that the vast majority of the monasteries were founded, and that the chief benefactions were made to them. The number of Anglo-Saxon monasteries in England was, no doubt, large, and some were wealthy; but of these, very many were destroyed by the inroads of the Danes, and in this district some, we know, were swept away. With the Norman Conquest, there came a great increase in the number of Religious Houses and in the amount of property that was granted to them. The honest desire to establish institutions which had much power for good, the belief that such charitable acts would be of spiritual benefit to themselves and their relations and their friends, the strong feelings aroused by the early crusades, these and other causes impelled men to found many of these abbeys and priories, and to make to them gifts and bequests. Hence, above 400 monasteries were founded during the 12th century, and, it is said, 476 besides alien priories, between the Conquest and the first year of Henry III. (1216). After this period, the number of new foundations dwindled rapidly away. The amount of property which had accumulated in the hands of the monastic bodies was enormous. We may judge of the multitude of donors even from this small Priory of Wetherhal. They ranged from the King or the great Lord of the district to the humble tenant or the porter of the monastery. This very accumulation of possessions helped to produce a change of feeling. The lands given to the Religious Houses were held by them free from the services usually due from such lands, and free from other incidents.

Foundation of
teries.

The Laws of Mortmain resulted from this condition of things, in order to prevent the loss to the State or the King; and these laws materially restricted the bestowal of land. Then, the subservience of the monastic bodies to the Pope, their rapacious dealing with the Vicars, the working clergy, of the parishes, these and other causes produced an ever growing unpopularity. Endowments found their way in other directions. Chantryes were largely established in the Churches. The Friars who first arrived in 1221, and who did not hold land, before long amassed great wealth. And by the 14th century comparatively little was given to the monks. We are not therefore surprised to find that in this Register the charters all but cease at that date; and that the few additional documents are of a different character, and were even added to the manuscript by later hands.

Decline of Grants.

After the 13th century.

Later
Priors.

The further history of the Priory up to the dissolution of the monasteries can only be gathered from a few scattered records and notices; and these last mainly in connection with the Priors. Of the Priors, there is one mentioned in the Register, William Rundel, who was promoted to be Abbot of S. Mary's at York, in 1239; but in the next and following centuries, no less than five Priors became Abbots of that great mother foundation (Appendix E). One former Prior, William de Tanefeld, the first of the name, was in 1309 installed as Prior of the Benedictine monastery at Durham. It is evident therefore that the Priory of Wetherhal had an importance which we should scarcely expect from its size and position. It may be that the Benedictine monks took care to have here some one of authority to keep watch on the three rival Houses of Augustinian Canons at Carlisle, Lanercost and Hexham.

The Abbot and Convent of S. Mary at York had, of course, to answer the summons of Edward I. Quo Waranto? they held their privileges and property. The pleadings on behalf of the Priory of Wetherhal were put forward before justices itinerant at Carlisle and Appleby in 1292. These pleas as regards certain vills and the Churches of S. Michael and S. Lawrence at Appleby are preserved in the Rolls. Their rights were fully established (Illustrative Documents, vii., xi.).

Two interesting visits were paid to the Priory of Wetherhal by Edward, Prince of Wales, afterwards Edward II. In October, 1301, the Prince had returned from an expedition into the south of Scotland, and was about to proceed through Berwick to join the King. On the 20th, he wrote two letters from Wederhale to the Chancellor, Sir John de Langetone, asking for a protection for his chamberlain and for his "fesicien." On February 19th, 1306-7, the Prince was there again, only a few months before he came to the throne. He there received Dungal MacDowil, who brought with him some prisoners whom he had taken in battle, among them Thomas and Alexander de Brus, two brothers of Robert de Brus, King of Scots. MacDowil also brought the heads of certain Irish and Cantire men who had been slain. He was duly rewarded by the Prince, whose treasurer kept a careful account of the "courser" and fifty marcs which were given (Illustrative Docum. viii.). The two brothers, with Sir Ranald Crawford, were hanged shortly after at Carlisle, and Robert de Brus led a foray against the MacDowils to avenge them, upon which Dungal and his family had to flee into England. These little historical touches bring vividly before us the rough barbarous character of the times.

Prince of Wales.

The visits of the Prince of Wales to Wetherhal had, not improbably, something to do with the promotion of Prior William de Tanefeld mentioned above. For we learn that when Edward I. was staying in the neighbourhood, the Prior so conducted himself towards the King and his son, Edward de Kar narvan, that they were always afterwards very gracious to him¹.

There was at Wetherhal in the year 1309 one of the numerous cases of "provision," where the Pope wished to provide an incumbent in place of the rightful nominee of the patron. But here a strong opposition was aroused. Pope Clement V. appointed Robert de Gyseburgh to be Prior, John de Thorp being already in possession on the nomination of the Abbot of S. Mary's. An appeal was made to the King, who at once sent down two writs to Bishop Halton charging him not to cite Prior John to any foreign court, and forbidding the latter to pay any attention to Robert de Gyseburgh's Papal mandates until the matter in controversy was fully debated and determined in the King's Court in England. A few years afterwards we find Robert in the office of Prior, but for some offence he had been excommunicated, and was compelled to resign.

Another instance occurs about this time of an appeal to Rome to settle a difference, instead of to the King's Court. A great contest arose in 1338 between Bishop John de Kirkby and the Abbey of S. Mary at York concerning the right to the Churches of Warwick, Wetherhal and others which had been appropriated to the Priory of Wetherhal. It would seem as if the point were clear, but the controversy was only settled when the Abbot and Convent of S. Mary carried the matter to the court of Rome, and there gained their cause (p. 15 n.). Notwithstanding their independence of the Bishops, which these monasteries claimed, they were from time to time subjected to episcopal visitation. We have an example in 1358, when the Priory was visited by Bishop Gilbert de Welton in his ordinary visitation of the Diocese (Illustrative Docum. xxxvii.).

Corkeby
Manor.

The fishery at the Pool and the rights of the Priory in the bank at Corkeby, to which they attached so much importance, came up again in 1342. This was but natural, as a new family, that of de Salkeld, had lately got possession of Corkeby. A very complete agreement was then made between Sir Richard de Salkeld and William de Tanfeld, the second Prior of that name, and the monks of Wetherhal (No. 244). The manor of Corkeby had passed into the family of de Richmund by the marriage of Roald son of Alan de Richmund with Isabella, daughter and heir of that Robert son of William de Corkeby who appears so often in this Register (p. 304 n.). In 1321-22 their descendants Roald, son and heir of Thomas de Richmund, and Richard de Richmund concluded in making over the manor of Corkeby to Andrew de Harcla, Earl of Carlisle. The Earl did not hold it long; for on his attainder in March 1323, it was escheated to the King, Edward II. Among those who had been instrumental in the arrest of the Earl was Sir Richard de Salkeld; and the King rewarded him with the manor of Corkeby. This gift of his father, Edward III. confirmed to Sir Richard in October, 1335 (p. 382 n.).

Another member of that family comes before us in connection with Wetherhal, another Sir Richard Salkeld, who with his wife Jane was buried in Wetherhal Church, where his effigy still remains. He died in 1503 (p. 382 n.). Catherine and Mary, the two eldest of five daughters, had each a moiety of the property. Their descendants remained in possession throughout the dissolution, and sold their two moieties of the manor to Lord William Howard, Sir Walter Scott's "Belted Will," of Naworth, in 1606 and 1624 respectively.

Beyond certain disputes concerning their property, there is little to be learned of the history of the Priory in the 15th century. An interesting Rental of the property in 1490 has been preserved (Illustrative Docum. XLIV.). Like other monasteries, it was gradually going down hill and hastening to the end. The old stones of Wetherhal Parish Church testify to some of the actors in the later scenes. Over the south window of the chancel are the words, "Orate pro anima Willielmi Thornton Abbatis." William Thornton had been Prior of Wetherhal and was Abbot of S. Mary's at York, apparently the last Abbot of that great foundation. Over the chancel door is the inscription, "Orate pro anima Richardi Wedderhall." He was the Prior in 1534-35 when the great valuation was made by Henry VIII. with the view of the transfer of the first fruits and tenths from the Pope to the Crown. This valuation of the property of the monastery is of course preserved to us in the Valor Ecclesiasticus (Illustrative Docum. XLV.). Some time during the next three years, the Priory was subjected to the general visitation by Thomas Crumwell's visitors. It was probably made in 1537 by those unscrupulous agents,

Visitation

of Priory.

Dr Layton and Dr Legh, for, together with the neighbouring Religious Houses, the Priory appears in the Comperta, or supposed fragments of the Black Book¹. Of their report of the Monastery as published, like those of many other Religious Houses, it must be said that it is evidently and needlessly foul and false (Illustrative Docum. xxxix.). The deed of surrender of the Priory, examined by Thomas Legh, was signed on October 20th, 1538, by Radulph Hartley, the Prior, and John Clyston, a monk. The property was apparently only given up on December 31st (Illustrative Docum. xxxix.). We have the surveys of the property at the surrender (Illustrative Docum. xlvi.) when the values are put slightly higher than at the survey a few years before. When the property of the Monastery passed into the hands of the Crown, the site of the House and the demesne lands and fishery were leased on March 4th, 1539, to Sir Thomas Wentworth, knight, for a term of 21 years. A statement of the whole property in great detail is given in the King's Ministers' Accounts (Illustrative Documents, xlii.). The tenants of the customary tenements are there set out, very much as in the Rental of 1490 (Illustrative Docum. xliv.) and often with the same curious additional rent of a cock, two hens and three days' work in autumn. The Rectory of the Parish Church of Wetherhall valued at £26. 13s. 4d. had been assigned to the late Prior Radulph Hartley by Letters Patent dated January 31st, 1539, as part of his pension (Illustrative Docum. xl.). Sir Thomas Wharton and James Rokebie, Commissioners of the King on the surrender, account for the value of divers domestic articles and utensils which had been sold, also of live and dead farm stock. The list is interesting; but the valuables were evidently not forthcoming, or had passed into the hands of the King's Receiver, William Grene. Besides the Prior, Radulph Hartley, the names of three of the monks are given—John Clyston, Thomas Hartleye and John Gaille, as well as of diverse officials, servants and creditors.

Probably the number of twelve monks on the original foundation had been diminished, especially as the time of dissolution drew near (Illustrative Documents, LII.).

An interesting document dated 1556-7, the report of Commissioners appointed in 3 and 4 Philip and Mary, affords some information as to the bells of the old Monastery. Instructions were given to the Commissioners to enquire what had become of the three "bells of the late Cell of Wetherhal weying vi C pound weight." They learned from Lancelot Saulkelde, the Dean, that one bell came to Carlisle, and was hanged upon the wall called Springall Tower to call the workmen who were making the new Citadel and mending the Castle. The weight of the bell he did not know. The other two bells remained at a house in Wetherhal awaiting the Queen's commands. The two bells he esteemed to be 500 pounds weight. It does not appear what was their ultimate fate¹.

The House and whole demesne, the lands and all the Churches, except those of Wetherhal and Warwick, were granted to the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle by their Endowment Charter dated May 6th, 1541 (Illustrative Docum. XLVII.). The excepted Churches did not long remain in the hands of the King. The Dean and Chapter on March 5th, 1546, petitioned to have the Rectory of Wetherhal in recompense for the decay of the Cathedral Church (Illustrative Doc. XL.). The request was granted, and the Churches of Wetherhal and Warwick, with the Chapels of S. Anthony and S. Severin annexed thereto, were transferred to them by Letters Patent dated January 15th, 1547, a few days before the King's death on the 28th of the month (Illustrative Doc. XL., XLI.). Some arrangement was to be made with the late Prior during his life, and the Chaplains of Wetherhal and Warwick were each to receive a salary of £6. A lease for 37 years of the House and demesne lands, the mill and the fishery, was granted by the Dean and Chapter, Lancelot Salkeld the late Prior being now Dean, on December 14th, 1541, to one John Blaklocke of Henryby (Harraby) at a rent of £20. 0s. 8d., the amount being evidently calculated on the survey made at the surrender (Illustrative Doc. XLVIII.).

Survey

More than 350 years have gone by and most of the property of the old Priory remains in the same hands. One instructive interlude there was in the 17th century. At the Revolution, the Commissioners appointed by the Trustees under an Act of the Commons of England made a survey in April, 1650, of the manor of Wetherhal and other possessions "late belonging to the late Dean and Chapter of the Cathedrall Church of S. Maries (sic) of Carlisle" (Illustrative Docum. XLIX.). The survey of the Rectory has alone been found. The manor with the House and demesne lands were sold to Robert Banks of Cockermouth for £1044. 5s. 1½d. It is to be feared that it did not prove a good speculation for the purchaser. On the Restoration in 1660, the Dean and Chapter, with other owners of Church property, reentered into possession. A Bill was that year brought into Parliament to confirm sales and to give indemnity to purchasers; but it fell through. The purchasers could only fall back on common law, and with a title so defective they had no remedy¹.

There are few remains of the monastic buildings. The old gateway tower is in good preservation, and there are portions of two or three walls. The monastery must have occupied a considerable space on the large platform artificially formed on the hill side overhanging the river. Hutchinson, the local historian, asserts (vol. i. p. 156) that what was left of the "edifice" was demolished by the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle "who built a prebendal house &c. in Carlisle with the materials." He further states that Mr Howard, "the late beautifier of Corby, offered a sufficient compensation if they would suffer the building to stand." This was written in 1794, and has been diligently copied. It would be interesting to hear the other side. There is no record of such a proceeding in the Chapter Minutes, as there naturally would have been. Whatever truth there may be in the story, it is certain that the stone was not used for any prebendal house. The only house to which this could have referred was the house of the second prebendary at the west end of the Cathedral ; and there is evidence that this was built in the preceding century, being commenced in 1669. Thus are errors perpetuated.

The long story of this old and retired place, drawn from these documents, is not without its interest and value. Facts are brought before us about which there can be no doubt, and persons about whom little that is certain is now known. These go back to a time when genuine records are very scanty ; and they serve to illustrate, sometimes to correct, the local annals of their day. Just 800 years have passed since the Priory was founded. For more than half that period it had fulfilled, more or less well, the part which the Religious Houses were destined to perform in England. It had witnessed the fusion of Norman and Englishman, the growth of English law and of the English language, the long contest for the rights and liberties of the English people. It had seen the increasing hold of Rome upon the English Church, the attempt to make her subservient to the Papal power, and the Nemesis which followed. It had felt the grasping hand of the most arbitrary of English Kings, though its property had not gone, as in some other cases, to enrich his satellites and counsellors. Then it sank into the solitude of the rural village, its site marked by little beyond the farm and the homestead. Amid all, how little the natural scene has changed. The railway and the telegraph within view may tell of 19th century inventions. Fields and woods, the ford and the spring, occupy often, as we can see, their old position, and bear sometimes their old names. The grassy platform on which the Monastery stood can be but little altered. While below the old river runs and murmurs between the same high wooded banks, a type at once of the changes and the continuity of human things above.

THE MANUSCRIPT REGISTER OF WETHERHAL AND THE TRANSCRIPTS.

It is fortunate that excellent Transcripts had been made before the original manuscript of this Register or Cartulary was lost. It was long in the possession of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. It was copied in 1693. A controversy about some of the manors in the Forest of Inglewood, chiefly Wetherhal and John de Chapple, arose in 1717 between the Duke of Portland and the Dean and Chapter. The latter, to avoid litigation, laid certain documents before the Duke through the mediation of Bishop Nicolson. The result was satisfactory, and no further steps were taken in Chancery. In their letter to the Bishop, the Dean and Chapter refer to their "Cartulary of Wedderal," "which seems by the writing to be about 400 years old." But in the list of documents, copies of which were enclosed, the references to the pages are not the pages of the old Cartulary, but of the Transcript A which the Dean and Chapter now have. On June 23rd, 1772, the Dean and Chapter ordered "the Register of Wetheral deposited in our inner Treasury" to be exhibited at Kirkby Stephen at a Commission then sitting. In the Appendix (R) to The First General Report of the Commissioners on Public Records, dated June 2nd, 1812 (p. 180), it is stated under the head of Carlisle—"The ancient Manuscript Chartulary of the Abbey of Wetherall at Carlisle does not contain any entries of Public Charters or Statutes." A reference is given to page 343 of The Report of the Select Committee of the House of Commons on Public Records, where there is an inaccurate return of the manuscripts of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle made by John Brown, Registrar, and among them "An ancient Manuscript Chartulary of the Abbey of Wetherall." We may conclude therefore that the old manuscript was in the possession of the Dean and Chapter in 1812; and it is to be hoped that it may some day be recovered.

There are fortunately three good Transcripts in existence, and in addition several series of extracts from the Register. These have been carefully collated. The Transcripts are:—

A. In the possession of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle, dated 1693.

B. In the possession of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. There is in it the statement that it is copied in 1787 from Bishop Nicolson's Manuscript.

C. In the British Museum, Harleian Manuscripts, No. 1881. It is endorsed "given by Dr Todd, who promised to give three vols. more."

Up to a certain point C is practically the same as A and B. But C contains copies of additional documents, no doubt in the old manuscript, but some of them evidently spurious and all of them full of inaccuracies. Where the latter have been clearly errors of the transcriber, the corrections have been made. There were other matters in the manuscript Register which are not in any of these Transcripts. One of them, as copied by Bishop Nicolson, is given among the Illustrative Documents (v.). No doubt, as in many of these monastic Registers, additions were made from time to time by different hands and some on very questionable authority. It is clear that what have been retained in the Transcripts are those charters and records which affected the property and were thought to have a legal value. As to these additions in Transcript C, more information will be found in the notes to them.

The most elaborate of the series of extracts from the Register are those of John Stevens published in his History of Antient Abbeys, 1772, being two additional volumes to Dugdale's Monasticon. They are taken from a "Transcript of the whole Register Book of Wetheral" which he had received from the Rev. Dr Hugh Todd, of Penrith, Cumberland. There are some of the principal charters at length, and brief extracts from many others. There are also some of the additions found in Transcript C. The names are often copied inaccurately. A number of Stevens' extracts are given in the new edition of Dugdale's Monasticon, vol. iii. p. 585.

In the Harleian Manuscript, No. 294 (page 209 seq.), are extracts made by Roger Dodsworth, generosus, in 1638 from the "Chartulary of Wetherall penes Lord Wm. Howard, Baron de Naworth." These are often very brief; they are clearly the same as those used by Dugdale in the first edition of the Monasticon. The names are often copied incorrectly. This "Chartulary" was probably the same as that which was afterwards with the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle, but there is no record of the transfer having been made. There are extracts in the Harleian Manuscript, No. 2044 (page 105 sq.), of much the same character as the preceding, and these are stated to be from Mr Dodsworth's Book, marked B. Similar extracts will be found among the Dodsworth Collections in the Bodleian Library at Oxford in vol. x. fol. 171 and vol. clix. fol. 138. On none of these extracts by Dodsworth can much reliance be placed for accuracy.

Bishop Nicolson, a most accurate transcriber, made several extracts from the old Register; they are to be found in his four volumes of manuscripts which are in the possession of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. He remarks on the incongruity of some of the late additions (MSS. vol. iii. p. 133). He was consecrated Bishop of Carlisle in 1702. He left another manuscript volume, Miscellany Accounts of the Diocese of Carlisle, 1703-4, which has been edited by Chancellor Ferguson. Numerous extracts were also made by Rev. Thomas Machel, Rector of Kirkbythore, in Westmoreland, who died in 1699. They are, nearly all, only abstracts of the charters, and often, like much of his work, inaccurate. They are found mainly in the fourth of the six volumes of his loose papers which were bound up by Bishop Nicolson. They are now in the possession of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle.

Nicolson and Burn in their History and Antiquities of Westmorland and Cumberland, 1777, have given many extracts and references. These seem to be generally taken from Machel's MS. volumes, which they have used largely and which were lent to Richard Burn, Vicar of Orton, by the Dean and Chapter on Feb. 26th, 1765, the year he was made Chancellor. He gave a formal receipt for the six volumes, which were returned and the receipt given up in 1775. There are numerous references to the Register in a parchment manuscript by Hugh Todd entitled Notitia &c... now with the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. They are practically worthless; and a list of 'Priors of Wedderal' which he has drawn out is of no value. Dr Todd appears to have deserved the low estimate which Bishop Nicolson had of his literary talents.

A collation of some of the above extracts with the Transcripts has enabled a correct reading of the text to be made in certain doubtful places; but they have not been sufficient to determine absolutely the crucial case of the King in the first charter. With these extracts references to the pages of the Register are often given; but they are generally so confused and contradictory that it seemed no good object would be gained by quoting them.

1. ¹ On Ranulf Meschin and the Honor of Carlisle, see Appendix A.

² The vicecomes was the Norman equivalent to the Saxon sheriff, or shire-reeve (scír-geréfa). This is the earliest sheriff of Carlisle recorded. It must be remembered that the district was a border land, and had only been a few years brought under Norman rule. It must not be assumed that the sheriff here was a king's officer; nor that the land had been divided into shires or counties. This, we know, took place later (see Appendix A), when the sheriff's duties were clear (compare E. Freeman, Norman Conquest, v. 439).

³ The British name Caerluel (from the Celtic "caer" "a mound," then "a fort," and "Luel") points to an occupation long before Roman days of the important position on which the city of Carlisle now stands. Whatever the Luel (perhaps a proper name) may mean in Caerluel, this "camp" or "town of Luel," it appears in the Roman name of the place, Lugubalia. Later it was called simply Luel, and then Carleol or Carlil (written often with K for C) as Simeon of Durham tells us, writing before 1130—"Lugubaliam quæ Luel vocatur"; "Quorum Luel, quod nunc Carleol appellatur" (Hist. Dunelm. Eccles. i. c. 9, ii. c. 5, ed. T. Arnold i. 32, 53). Then it became Carlile and Carlisle, the s coming in through the Norman French. Freeman has remarked that "alone among the names of English cities, it remains purely British" (William Rufus, ii. 550). In the British idiom caer is put before the qualifying name, in the

potestate Karioli habitant salutem. Sciatis me dedisse in puram elemosinam et sine omni terreno servicio quietum et liberum Manerium quod vocatur Wetherhala⁴ et cum alijs terris ad Manerium illud pertinentibus Stephano Abbati⁵

Teutonic after it; thus, as he shews, Caer Gwent became Winchester, Caer Glowi became Gloucester; but Caer Luel remained practically unchanged. On the conquest by the Norman, the name was soon applied to all the newly-won district (see Introduction and Appendix A, on Ranulf Meschin).

The bounds of the Manor are given in No. 236, where see the Notes. On the "manor" generally, and its growth from Anglo-Saxon times, see Stubbs, Constitutional History, i. 89, 273, 399; Sir Henry S. Maine, Village Communities, p. 131 sq.; E. Freeman, Norman Conquest, v. 460 sq., and Sir Henry Ellis, Domesday Book, Introduction, p. lxxii (Record Com.). On the legal aspect and some peculiarities of the border district, see J. Scriven, Law of Copyhold, ed. A. Brown, pp. 2, 16 sq. and, on the jurisdiction, F. W. Maitland, Select Pleas in Manorial Courts, Introduction, p. xxxvii. The books and rolls of the manor, in the possession of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle, do not go back earlier than 1680.

⁵ This was Stephen de Whitby, the first Abbot, and, with the assistance of Alan, Earl of Richmond, the virtual founder of S. Mary's Abbey at York. He became a monk of the Monastery of Whitby under Prior Reinfrid in the year 1078. Some difficulty having arisen on the death of the Prior (see Chartulary of Whitby, ed. J. C. Atkinson, p. lxxi seq.) Stephen and other monks left Whitby, and settled at the Church of S. Olaf, or S. Olave, near York, given them by Earl Alan, and founded there a Benedictine monastery. When the monastery was reconstructed, in 1089, Stephen became the first Abbot, and

thus remained for 24 years till his death in 1112 (see the reff. in Dugdale, Monasticon, iii. 529, 538).

⁶ The Church of S. Olaf, or S. Olave, was built by Siward, the great Earl of Northumbria, in a suburb of York called Galmanho; and there he was buried in 1055. Some little time after 1078, the Church, with four acres of land, was given by Alan, Earl of Richmond, to Stephen and his brother monks from Whitby (see the note above). There they commenced to form the Benedictine monastery. In 1088 William Rufus visited the monastery and gave more land to it; and in 1089 himself "opened the ground" to lay the foundation of larger buildings. The dedication was changed from S. Olave to S. Mary; and from this point dates the virtual foundation of the great mitred Abbey of S. Mary at York (Dugdale, Monasticon, iii. 529, 545, 548). William I. had given certain lands to the monastery which were confirmed, with other lands and privileges, by William II.; and grants were made by persons connected with Ranulf Meschin, such as Ivo Taillebois and Ranulf's brother William.

⁷ There is little doubt that this is the correct reading, and not Regis Henrici. The conclusions, in some histories, that Henry I. was the King referred to, and that it is he to whom Ranulf Meschin was indebted for his possessions, are due to the transcript of this Charter given in the first edition of Dugdale's Monasticon (vol. i. p. 398). There the reading is Henrici, and is said to be: Ex registro de Wetherhall penes D. Williel. Howard de Naworth, an. 1638. This and some other charters, though full of evident errors, are, from the numbers of the folios given, certainly transcribed from this MS. Register of Wetherhal, which at the end of the 17th century had passed into the hands of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle (on this Register and the Transcripts, see the Introduction). Numerous copies of this charter were made from the Register about the same time. Bishop Nicolson, a most careful and accurate transcriber, has the words "Regis Willelmi," with a reference to fol. 7 a of the Register (Nicolson MSS. vol. iii. opposite p. 151). Thomas Machel, not by any means so accurate, speaks of the manuscript as having been tampered with, and of "Regis Henrici" being written "in altem." He also says the first charter is "very obscure now in the Booke," and speaks of there being a "new copy of this old Deed" written there (Machel MSS. iv. p. 453). If, as seems evident, Ranulf Meschin was put in by William II. to rule the district he had conquered, it was animabus Patris et Matris meæ et Richardi Fratris⁸ mei et pro anima mea et Uxoris meæ Lucie⁹ et pro animabus omnium fidelium defunctorum. Testibus Osberto Vicecomite¹⁰ et Waldievo filio Gospatricij Comitis¹¹, et Forna not unnatural that Ranulf should be an early benefactor of the Abbey in which that King had shewn such an interest (see above on note 6). Moreover the father of his wife Lucia, who is mentioned here, Ivo Taillebois, was also a benefactor to the Abbey about this time (Illustrative Documents, xvi.) and had strongly upheld the cause of William II. For the date of the charter to be deduced, see note 15 below.

¹¹ Gospatric, Earl of Northumbria, afterwards Earl of Dunbar, was according to Simeon of Durham (Hist. Regum, ed. Arnold, ii. p. 199) the son of Maldred son of Crinan, of the royal house of Scotland; his mother was Alghitha, or Ealdgyth, daughter of Uchtred, Earl of Northumbria, and Elgifa daughter of King Ethelred II. (Skene, Celtic Scotland, i. 394 n, 419; see also Freeman, Norman Conquest, iv. 134). He obtained the Earldom of Northumbria from William the Conqueror in 1067, paying a large sum of money, and probably urging the claims of his descent. The next year he revolted against William, and fled with Eadgar the Atheling to Scotland. He submitted and was restored to his Earldom in 1070. In 1072 he ravaged the district of Cumbria; and the same year he was finally deprived of his Earldom by William, and took refuge with Malcolm, King of the Scots, who granted him Dunbar and the adjacent lands, with the title of Earl of Dunbar. He retained considerable possessions in England; and his name, as well as those of his three sons Dolfin, Waldief and Gospatric, appears in Domesday Book. These three brothers also appear in the Inquisition of King David in 1120, referred to in Appendix A. Skene points out that the name Gospatric is purely British, and is equivalent to Gwas Patricius, "the servant of Patrick." The form "Quaspatricius" occurs in an Inquisition held in 1247 (Inquis. p. m. 31 Hen. III. No. 38; Calendar Documents Scot. ed. Bain, i. p. 316), where his daughter Juliana is also mentioned as married to Randulf de Merlaco (Merlay). This form may also serve to explain the name of the place Aspatrick, or Aspatria, in Cumberland (see on No. 30, note 1). He is said to have had another daughter Gunilda, married to Orm the son of Ketell; Etheldreda, and yet another, Octreda, are mentioned.

Waldiev received from Henry I. the Barony of Allerdale or Alredal (Testa de Nevill, Record Com. p. 379*b*), generally called Allerdale below Derwent. From William Meschin, Baron of Copeland, he obtained the land between the Cocker and the Derwent and 5 vills near the valley of the Derwent. There is much about Waldiev in the Distributio Cumberlandiæ (Additional Charter, No. 245), but to be received with great caution: see also the very similar document given by J. Bain from the Tower Miscellaneous Rolls, and which he suggests is a statement by the monks of Holm Cultram (Calendar Doc. Scot. ii. 15). Waldiev was a benefactor to S. Mary's Abbey at York, granting, among other gifts, the Church and manor of Brumfeld (see charter No. 14); also to the Priory of Carlisle, to which he gave the Churches of Aspatrick and Crosseby (Cross-canonby) and land near S. Cuthbert's, Carlisle (see extract from the charter of Henry II., Dugdale, Monast. vi. 144); he also granted to the Church of Bridekirk in Cumberland, afterwards given by Alice de Rumeley to the Priory of Gyseburne, the vill and church of Apeltun (Chart. Gyseburne, ed. W. Brown, ii. 318; Dugdale, Monast. vi. 270), in which grant his wife Sigrida, or Sigarith, and his sons, Alan and Waldiev, are mentioned. He had a daughter, as well as a sister, called Etheldreda and married to Ranulf Lindsay. This son Alan was also a benefactor to S. Mary's at York, of land in Gosforth and 14 salmon annually from his fishery at Cockermuth. Waldiev and his son Alan also gave land and a herring fishery in Eltadala (Allerdale) to the Priory at Hexham (Memorials of Hexham, ed. J. Raine, i. 59).

Of the two other sons of Earl Gospatric, Dolfin was probably the ruler of Cumbria driven out by William II. in 1092; Gospatric seems to have been the second Earl of Dunbar, and to have succeeded to his father's estates in Northumberland. The third Earl Gospatric died in 1166 (Roger de Hoveden, ed. Stubbs, i. 253).

¹² Forne son of Sigulf, or Liulf, received the Barony of Greystoke from Henry I. (Testa de Nevill, p. 379*b*). Forne was a benefactor to the Priory of Hexham, as was also Ivo his son (Memorials of Hexham, ed. J. Raine, i. 59). He died about 1130, for Ivo son of Forne appears in the Pipe Roll of 31 Henry I. for Yorkshire, paying five pounds for livery of his father's lands. Forne son of Sigulf is mentioned by Simeon of Durham (Hist. Regum, ed. Arnold, ii. 261) among a number of principal men in April 1121. The names of the four sons of Ivo often occur in the later Pipe Rolls.

¹³ Of Eldred, or Eltred, nothing seems to be known. The local histories which make him the son of Ivo Taillebois are here quite untrustworthy. We know that Ivo had only one child, Lucia (see Appendix A, on Ranulf Meschin). Ketell or Chetell held lands in the Barony of Kendal, which his father may have had before him; for it appears from an Inspecimus of Edward I. that William, son of William de Lancastre, exchanged some land with the Hospital of S. Peter (afterwards S. Leonard) at York for land in Kirkeby (Kendal) which Ketell son of Eltred had given them (Dugdale, Monasticon, vi. 613). Ketell was also a benefactor to the Abbey of S. Mary at York, giving them the important church of Morland and the church of Wirchington (see No. 14 and No. 235). From the latter charter we learn that his wife's name was Christiana, and that he had a son William. He had another son Orm, who was married to Gunilda, daughter of Earl Gospatric, well endowed on her marriage by her brother Waldiev. A third son, Gilbert, was said to be the Gilbert who was father to the first William de Lancastre, Baron of Kendal. But for this there is no authority; in this connection see more on Nigel de Albini in No. 7 and Gilbert son of Reinfrid in No. 209.

¹⁴ There was at a later period Hervicus son of Maurinus who held the Barony of Dalston and the advowson of the Church, which were escheated to the Crown when he was convicted of felony; these were given to Bishop Walter Malclerk by Henry III. in 1235 (Assize Rolls, Cumberland, 1278, m. 27 d.).

¹⁵ The date of this charter must lie between 1092 when William Rufus conquered this District of Carlisle and 1112 when Abbot Stephen died; therefore during the last eight years of William's reign or the first twelve years of Henry I., according as we read William or Henry in the charter; but the former is the probable reading (see note 7 above on Willelmi). On the other hand, the witnesses to the charter, especially Osbert the sheriff, would seem to agree better with the later date.

2. ¹ S. Constantine was a King of the Britons who became a missionary to Scotland and who lived about the end of the 6th century. He was sent by S. Kentigern to preach in Galwedra and was martyred in Cantire. Many churches in Scotland were dedicated to him (Bp Forbes, Kalendars of Scottish Saints, p. 314; Dict. of Christian Biog. i. 660). These conjoined dedications are not uncommon. The dedication seems to have been afterwards changed to Holy Trinity and S. Constantine (No. 35 et al.), often written Holy Trinity alone (No. 43 et al.). The monastery was a Cell and subordinate to the Benedictine Abbey of S. Mary at York. The Church seems to have been dedicated to the Holy Trinity and to have contained altars of S. Mary and of the Holy Trinity (see Nos. 126, 183).

² The sluice and pool for the salmon fishery. The weir (Anglo-Saxon wer) or dam forming the pool was fixed in the opposite bank of Chorkeby. These were afterwards known as "the baye," and supplied the water for the mill mentioned below (see Illustrative Documents, VI.). This pool and weir were only done away with in February 1879, when the mill no longer paid for working. In the sluice, or opening in the weir, were the salmon traps, called coffins (from cophinus or κόφινος, "a basket") as in No. 38, or coops (from Anglo-Saxon cyfa, "a basket," and Latin cupa, "a tub"). The coop or cupa is mentioned in the Assize Rolls for 1278 (Cumberland, m. 32 d.), where there is an interesting account of the fixed engines used in the district for taking salmon, and their abuse; also of the formation of a board of conservators (Calendar of Documents relating to Scotland, ed. J. Bain, ii. 38). The use of the word "coffin" in the sense of a box or chest is shewn in the Household Books of Lord Wm. Howard of Naworth (Surtees Society, vol. lxxviii. p. 228): "April 12, 1625. To Hetheron for fitting iij coffins for iij sammon pyes going to London, vjd." From the Survey made at the surrender of the monastery (1538) it appears "the fishyng at the Bay" was reckoned at £10 a year and the "water corne mill" at 66s. 8d.; while these together with "the scite of the howse" and the demesne lands adjoining were only valued at £20. 0. 8 (Illustrative Documents, XLVI.).

³ At this time probably Wescubric, son of William Steffan, one

of the witnesses to this charter (see below on Wescubric), was the lord, and held under Ranulf Meschin. Chorkeby, Korkeby, or Corby, was a manor on the east side of the Eden in the parish of Wetherhal. It was afterwards granted by Henry II. to Hubert de Vallibus, de incremento, together with the barony of Gilsland (see also Testa de Nevill, Rec. Com. p. 379 a) in these terms: "Sciatis me concessisse dedisse et confirmasse Huberto de Vallibus in foedo et hereditate sibi et heredibus suis totam terram quam Gilbertus filius Boet tenuit die qua fuit vivus et mortuus de quocunque illam tenuisset Et de incremento Korkeby cum piscaria et alijs pertinentiis quam Wescubrich filius W^{mi} Steffan tenuit." This charter is given in full in Illustrative Doc. XXII., and from the witnesses its date must be between 1155—64, probably in 1157. There is a list of the lords of Corkeby given in Hutchinson, Hist. of Cumb. i. 170, and elsewhere, said to be preserved at Corby, in the handwriting of Lord William Howard of Naworth; but it is incorrect, e.g. it does not mention Osbert, a Lord of Corkeby who is mentioned in Nos. 35, 191, the elder brother of William son of Odard. In 1323 the vill of Corkeby Magna was given to Richard de Salkelde by Edward II. after the attainder of Andrew de Harcla (Chron. de Lanercost, ed. Stevenson, p. 251; see also on Additional Charter, No. 244). There is a Corby in Lincolnshire, mentioned in Domesday Book (vol. i. p. 371 b), which belonged to the family of Taillebois and came to Lucia, wife of Ranulf Meschin (Orderic. Vit. B. xii. c. 34); it is not improbable, therefore, that they brought the name with them.

Willelmo Archidiacono⁶, Odardo⁷, Hildredo Milite⁸, Wes-cubric⁹ Godardo¹⁰ et alijs¹¹.

“Caupaland” or “Coupland” from Henry I. (Testa de Nevill, Record Com. p. 379 a). It stretched from the Derwent to the Duddon; and here William Meschin built his castle of Egremunt. He founded near to it the Priory of S. Bega, or S. Bee, as a Cell to the Abbey of S. Mary at York. In the foundation charter he is spoken of as William son of Ranulf, and his wife Cecilia and son Ranulf are also mentioned (see Regist. S. Begæ, Harleian MSS. No. 434; Dugdale, Monasticon, iii. 577, No. III.). Cecilia was the daughter of Robert de Romeli, Lord of Skipton in Craven. His son Ranulf must have died after a short tenure of the Barony; for his daughter Alice took the property with her in her marriage with William FitzDuncan. The relationships of William Meschin, his wife Cecilia de Romeli, his daughter and granddaughter, both called Alice de Romeli, are shewn in the charters granted to Embsay, later (1151) Bolton Priory in Yorkshire (see Dugdale, Monast. vi. 203). Ranulf the son was a benefactor to the Cell of S. Bee and founded Calder Abbey (see the charter of Henry III., Dugdale, v. 340). If Calder Abbey was founded in 1134, as stated in the account of the foundation of Bellalanda or Byland Abbey (Dugdale, v. 349), then William Meschin was probably dead at that date. His foundation of S. Bees was in the time of Archbishop Thurstin, 1119 to 1139. He had also lands in Leicestershire and Northamptonshire (see J. H. Round, Feudal England, pp. 210, 221).

⁷ The name Odard is very common among persons of distinction in the district during the 12th century, and it is difficult to distinguish them. This Odard may be the same as the Odard who is witness, with Godard, Chetell and others, in two of the three charters of William Meschin to S. Bees; and he may be identical with Odard, Sheriff of Northumberland in 1121, and was then at York with Forne, son of Sigulf (see above on No. 1). It is not probable that he was identical either with Odard the Sheriff who appears in the Pipe Roll for Carlisle in 31 Henry I. or with Odard, son of Hildred (de Carlel), on whom see No. 72.

3. CHARTA RANULPHI MESCHINI DE DONATIONE ECCLESiarUM SANCTI MICHAELIS ET SANCTI LAURENTII DE APPELBY.

RANULPHUS MESCHINUS omnibus Catholicæ Fidei cultoribus Salutem. Notum sit omnibus quod Ego Ranulphus dedi Abachiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci Ecclesiam Sancti Michaelis et Ecclesiam Sancti Laurentii¹ Castelli

⁸ This may be Hildred mentioned in the Pipe Roll for Carlisle 31 Henry I., and often assumed to be Sheriff of Carlisle, or, as they may be identical, Hildred de Carlel to whom Henry I. gave lands in Gamelsby (see on No. 72); but it is scarcely probable. Neither of them is spoken of as a knight. J. Denton (Cumberland, p. 107) speaks of Hildred a knight at the time of the Conquest, afterwards called "de Carliell"; but this is clearly wrong.

¹⁰ This Godard who attests the two next charters is, no doubt, the Godard who witnesses the three charters of William Meschin granted to S. Bees. J. Denton (Cumberland, p. 9) says that William Meschin gave the manor of Millom between the Esk and the Duddon to — de Boyvill, father of Godard Dapifer, whose family held it to the time of Henry III. One of these may well have been the Godard here mentioned. Godard, as appears from the charter of William Meschin (Dugdale, Monast. vol. iii. p. 577, No. 111.) granted to the Priory of S. Bee the Churches of Witingham (Whicham) and Bothla (Bootle), both in the lordship of Millom.

3. ¹ There seems to be no doubt that these formed a parish or parishes in Saxon times; and some of the remains in the building of the Church of S. Michael confirm this view. The Churches, naturally, appear often in this Register. This grant to the Abbey of S. Mary at York, by Ranulf Meschin, was renewed, with the addition of two parts of the tithe of his demesne lands on both sides of the river Eden, by another charter (see No. 4), and was confirmed by Henry I. (see No. 9) and Henry II. (see No. 14), also by Bishop Athelwold (No. 16), Bishop

Bernard (No. 17) and by Bishop Hugh (Nos. 20 and 24). The last mentioned confirmed the grant (1219—1223) on the condition that the house of Wederhale possess the same, saving to the Abbey the accustomed pension, and presenting fit Vicars who should receive, the Vicar of S. Michael 5 marcs and the Vicar of S. Laurence 6 marcs, the Vicars to serve the Churches and pay all Episcopal and Archidiaconal charges. The patronage of the Church of S. Michael was confirmed to the Priory of Wederhale by Pope Gregory IX. on March 14th, 1240 (No. 25), and the right of entry on a vacancy, apparently in consequence of some claim put forward by the Bishop of Carlisle. Bishop Silvester on Feb. 18th, 1247 (No. 26) confirmed the grant of these two Churches made by Bishop Hugh.

On May 8th, 1248, the patronage of the Vicarage of S. Michael was made over to the Bishop of Carlisle and his successors (together with that of the churches of Ormesheved, Musgrave, Clibburn and Burgh) by the Abbey of S. Mary at York, saving the usual pension paid them from the said church by the Prior of Wederhal (see Additional Charter, No. 240). On March 26th, 1256, Walter Scaldewelle being Vicar, Bishop Thomas Vipont ordered what portions the Vicars of S. Michael should have, giving very exact details (see No. 27).

On Jan. 25th, 1251, Bishop Silvester assigned portions to the Vicarage of S. Laurence; also for the serving of the chapel in the Castle of Appleby every day, and for the service of the chapel of Hoff three days a week; the payment of 20 shillings pension to the Vicar of S. Michael's was also remitted (see Illustrative Documents, x.).

On November 5th, 1291, an assize was held concerning the right of patronage of the Churches of S. Michael and S. Laurence, which the King, Edward I., claimed; but judgment was given in favour of the Abbot and Convent of S. Mary at York (see Illustrative Documents, xi.). Other matters of interest connected with the Church of S. Laurence are given among the Illustrative Documents, more especially as to the serving of the Chapel in the Castle of Appleby (see XIII.). There were two Chantrys in the Church of S. Laurence. One the chantry of S. Mary, said to have been founded by William de Goldington (see on No. 157) in the 13th century: the other the chantry of S. Nicholas, founded by Robert de Threlkeld. There is a confirmation by Bishop John de Kirkby, dated March 29th, 1335, among the Levens Hall MSS. (see 10th Report Historical MSS. Commission (iv.) p. 322). It confirms the Letters Patent of Edward III. granting licence to Robert de Threlkeld to alienate in mortmain a yearly rent of 74s. 7d. in Appleby... to a chaplain, who shall celebrate for his soul in the Church of S. Laurence. It recites the charter of foundation of the chantry, dated the Saturday before March 12, 1335. The reference to this confirmation in Nicolson and Burn, Hist. i. 328 is quite incorrect. There are other documents of interest about these chantrys among the Levens Hall MSS.

² Judging from the importance of the position, there were probably fortifications here before the Norman conquest of the district. Ranulf Meschin could not neglect a point which commanded the pass into Yorkshire, and the junction of the two roads from Carlisle, one by Penrith, the other up the valley of the Eden. It is also probable that he may have held the castles of Brougham, commanding the road from Penrith along the valley of the Eamont, of Brough, the road over Stanemore, and of Pendragon, the road through the pass of Mallerstang into Yorkshire. There are numerous references to the Castle in old documents. In the earliest Pipe Roll (31 Henry I.), when the district had passed into the hands of the King, a person (name illegible) renders account to the Treasury of 40s. that he may be the porter of the Castle of Aplebi. In 1176 (Pipe Roll for Yorkshire, 22 Henry II.) Gospatric, son of Orm, accounts for 500 marcs of amercement because he surrendered the King's Castle of Appelbi to the King of Scots. This was surrendered in 1174 to William the Lion. Others were fined for advising the surrender (see further on Gospatric, Additional Charter, No. 249). In 1194 (Cumberland, 5 Rich. I.) 40s. was spent by Royal writ on works on the Castle of Appelbi; and in 10 Richard I. the same amount was spent in repairs, as well as on the Castle of Burgo (Brough); again, in 1 John, 100s. on repairs of the Castle of Appelbi, and £4 on the Castle of Burgo; and other amounts several times in the same reign. In February, 1227—28, Henry III. issued a writ to the Constable of the Castle to give up the Castle to the bearer, the King having granted to Hubert de Burgo the ward of the land and heir of Robert de Veteripont with the Castles. Similar writs were issued as to the Castles of Malverstang, Bruham and Burgh (Patent Rolls, 12 Hen. III. m. 6). See further on No. 204. After this date the history of the Castle is clear. On the building itself, see a paper by Chancellor Ferguson, Transac. Cumberland Archæol. Society, viii. 382.

4. CHARTA RANULPHI MESCHINI¹.

RANULPHUS MESCHINUS omnibus Catholicæ Fidei cultoribus Salutem. Notum sit omnibus quia Ego Ranulphus dedi Abbatîæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci Ecclesiam Sancti Michaelis et Sancti Laurentii de Appelby cum omnibus quæ ad eas pertinent sicut Radulphus Capellanus meus tenuit quietas et liberas ab omni terreno servicio et duas partes decimæ Dominij mei ex utraque parte aquæ² et duas partes decimæ Dominij mei de Maiburne³ et (William I.). This was in the time of Alred, Archbishop of York, 1060—1069. Another grant was made by him to the same Church in the time of Archbishop Thomas, 1070—1100 (Dugdale, Monasticon, iii. 500). His name appears as a proprietor in Domesday Book, 1085—86 (vol. i. p. 327 a). He was also a benefactor to the Abbey of S. Mary at York (Monasticon, iii. 534).

4. ¹ This grant is similar to the preceding; there is no mention of the Castle of Appelby, but we have in addition a grant of two parts of the tithe of the demesne lands and of Maiburne and Salchild, with the same witnesses. Such reservation of one third, or two thirds, of the tithe was not uncommon; see examples in Chron. of Abingdon, ed. J. Stevenson, ii. p. LXX.

² That is of the demesne lands at Appelby on both sides of the water of the river Eden.

commuted for a money pension ; at the dissolution, we find, a pension of £4 was paid by the Rector of Crosby Ravensworth to the Priory of Wetherhal (see Illustrative Documents, XLV.). This grant is confirmed by Henry I. in his charter, No. 9.

⁴ Salchild or Salkeld, called Salkeld Regis in No. 237 ; also in later times called Great Salkeld, probably to distinguish it from the manor of Little or Old Salkeld in the parish of Addingham, which belonged to the Priory of Carlisle. Salkeld remained in the King's hands when Ranulf Meschin left the district, and was one of the manors given to Alexander, King of Scots, under treaty by Henry III. in 1242 (see on Scotby, No. 14). The Church was very early appropriated to the Archdeacon of Carlisle, but in the time of Henry III., it appears from the above grant, the advowson was in the hands of the King. In 1292 it was decided that the advowson was with the Bishop, the Archdeacon (Richard de Wytebi) being parsona impersonata, Henry III. having granted it by charter to Bishop Walter Malclerk in 1236—37 (see Placita de quo war. Record Com. p. 116 a ; it is there called Parva Salkeld, the names evidently having being interchanged in error). For Little or Old Salkeld, see on Adam Salsarius, No. 154. The lands, of which the Priory had two parts of the tithe and the rector one, are set out in No. 237. At the dissolution, as well as in 1490, the pension for this tithe was reckoned at 15s. (see Illustrative Documents, XLIV. XLV.).

5. ¹ Henry the First. On these confirmation charters, see the Introduction to the Charter Rolls (Record Com. vol. i.) by Sir T. D. Hardy.

et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Abbati Gaufrido³ et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus Cellam Sancti Constantini cum Manerio de Wederhale et cum Capella de Warthwic⁴ et cum exclusagio et stagno de piscaria et de molendino de Wederhale quod est scitum et firmatum in terra de Chorkeby sicut habuerunt quando Randulphus

³ Gaufrid, the third Abbot, was only Abbot for less than two years, 1131—32. He died according to Dugdale (Monasticon, iii. 538) on July 17th, but Walbran in his Memorials of Fountains Abbey (i. 7) shews that he was alive till after October 6th.

⁴ Warthwic, or Warwick, was a distinct parish, as appears from the charter of Bishop Athelwold (No. 16). The Chapel was probably in subjection to the Church of Wetherhal (compare Phillimore, Eccles. Law, ii. 1825). We find from No. 14 that this Chapel, as well as the Church of Wetherhal, was granted by Ranulf Meschin. Later, a distinct incumbent was appointed by the monastery (see No. 39). A great controversy on the right of advowson of Wetherhal and Warwick, claimed by Bishop Kirkby, arose in October, 1338. The Abbot and Convent of S. Mary, not having appointed to the vacant Church of Warthwic in time, the Bishop gave the benefit of the lapse to R. de Bramlay, Doctor of Civil Law, who, as the Bishop's Commissary, collated Richard de Besyngden (or Resynden) to the benefice. This was withstood by the Convent, whereupon the Bishop by a notarial act summoned the Abbot and Convent to prove their title to all the Churches they claimed in the Diocese of Carlisle; but they disdained to put in an appearance. Legal proceedings went on. A declaration of contumacy was pronounced against the Bishop for not answering a citation; but this was revoked by the Official of the Court of York in December, 1338, and the revocation was confirmed by the Archbishop, on the Bishop pleading that he was engaged in state business on the Marches. The Convent appealed to Rome, and in the end the controversy was settled in their favour (Register of Bishop Kirkby, MS. pp. 380, 385—8). The Chapel was dedicated to S. Leonard, see Nos. 39, 55. Warthwic parish adjoined the manor of Wetherhal on the north, and was bounded on the other sides by the river Eden and Scotby beck. In it were at an early period the two manors and families of Warthwic and Aglionby, so often occurring in this Register. Warthwic manor would seem to have been given to Odard de Corkeby at the same time as Chorkeby (see No. 2, note 3), for we find it in possession of his son William (see on No. 35); they were probably granted by Hubert de Vallibus.

comes Cestriæ⁵ habuit Karleolum⁶. Et confirmo eis ex dono meo totam pasturam⁷ inter Edene⁸ et Regiam viam⁹ quæ ducit de Karleolo ad Appelby¹⁰ et a Wederhale usque ad Dribec¹¹. Et concedo eis Forestam meam¹² ad porcos

⁶ This is the District or Honor of Carlisle as in No. 8, not, as above, the Shire.

¹¹ The southern boundary of the Manor of Wetherhal, as set out in No. 236.

4 Ricard. II. No. 115; a copy is among the documents in the Dean and Chapter Office at Carlisle). The Forest of Inglewood then included the land, omitting the City of Carlisle, between the Shawk and the Eden, and the Amote (Eamont) on the south; but no doubt, at an earlier period, the King's Forest was much larger, and included roughly most of the Shire that was outside the Baronies and the City of Carlisle. The earlier Pipe Rolls contain numerous references to the Forest, especially to the rent paid for its custody; thus in 1166, a rent of 5 marks (see the references in the Introduction, Pipe Rolls for Cumberland &c., p. xxiii.). In 1186 the Pipe Roll gives us the following entry—"Idem Vicecomes reddit comptum de dimidio marci de Priori de Wederhala pro warda facta in foresta." In 1211, Richard de Luci pays 5 marks for the Census Forestae and a fine of £100 de foresta male custodita. King John granted the Hermitage of S. Hilda in "our forest of Englewode" on March 1st, 1214—15, to the Abbey of Holm Cultram with land which Robert Gobi formerly held and a vaccaria for 40 cows in the Forest (Register Holm Cult. MS. p. 164 sq. Close Rolls 16 John m. 7, and compare Placita de quo War. Rec. Com. p. 130a). We learn from the charter of Edward III. in 1331 (see Illustrative Documents, xxxiii.) that the King's Officers of the Forest had disturbed and harassed the monks of Wederhale, and that the privileges of wood and of pasture in the Forest, granted here and in No. 9, were fully confirmed by the King.

The disafforesting of a part of the Forest, the manor of Dalston, is set out in the grant by Henry III. to Bishop Walter Malclerk on July 15th, 1231; and a grant of the tithes of certain assart lands in the Forest to the Priory of Carlisle was made by Edward I. on Dec. 5th, 1293 (these are given in full in Nicolson and Burn, History, ii. 541, 546); the same King in February, 1286 had granted to the Priory of Carlisle the tithe of animals taken in the Forest, and other privileges as to wood, and that the dogs of their men should be quieti de expeditione; this was confirmed by an Inspeximus, dated April 30th, 1331, by Edward III. (Patent Rolls, 5 Edw. III. m. 8; there is a copy in the Dean and Chapter Office). On October 26th, 1363, Edward III., in consideration of the heavy losses of growing crops caused by the Scottish army, granted to the men and tenants of Penred, Salkeld and Soureby in Englewood Forest the right therein of common pasture for all their animals for ever (Patent Rolls, 37 Edw. III. m. 22; Record Com. p. 177). On the forest laws and their cruelty about the time of this charter, see Stubbs, Const. History, i. 402 and Select Charters, pp. 156, 206. A Parliamentary survey of the Honor of Penrith and part of the Forest of Inglewood was made July 16th, 1650; a copy is ¹³ Pannagium, from Old French pasnage, pasture, the food on which swine feed, such as acorns and beechnuts; also the payment made for the privilege of feeding swine in the Forest. The amount paid as pannage in the King's Forest of Cumberland appears from the Pipe Rolls to have been considerable; in 14th Henry II. it was £7, and in 1 Richard I. as much as £17. 3s.

¹⁴ Some of these grants are detailed in the charter of Henry II. No. 14.

bus Roberto de sigillo¹⁸, et Pagano filio Johannis, et Eustachio fratre ejus¹⁹ et Pagano Peverel²⁰ apud Windeshores²¹.

¹⁸ Roberto de sigillo was a monk of Reading and Chancellor of the King; he became Bishop of London in 1141, and died of eating poisoned grapes in 1151. See contin. Florence of Worcester and John of Hexham, in ann. 1141, 1150. He is witness to numerous charters of Henry I., as No. 8; and to the grant of the Church of Newcastle to the Priory of Carlisle (Dugdale, Monasticon, vi. 144), also to the Foundation Charter of Furness Abbey by Earl Stephen, afterwards King.

¹⁹ Eustace son of John was, according to Dugdale (Baronage, i. 90), the son of John de Burgh and nephew and heir of Serlo de Burgh, founder of Knaresborough Castle. Eustace was a well-known character in the reigns of Henry I. and Stephen, and a favourite of the former King. He married, first, Beatrix, daughter of Yvo de Vesci, and from him the family of de Vesci was lineally descended. Eustace and his brother were among the early justices itinerant. Eustace, together with Walter Espec, appears in the Pipe Roll for 31 Henry I. as holding pleas in Carlisle and Westmarieland (ed. J. Hunter, p. 143); and Pagan son of John as justice itinerant in the western Midland counties. The brothers are witnesses to a charter of Henry I. in 1133 to the Abbey of Rievaulx, founded by Walter Espec, together with, among others, Robert de sigillo and Jordan Paganel (Chart. Rievaulx, ed. Atkinson, p. 141). Eustace, with his second wife, Agneta, daughter of William son of Nigel, Constable of Chester, founded the Priory of Watton in Yorkshire (see on No. 208), also the Abbey of Alnwick in 1147, the second of the Premonstratensian houses in England, of which Shap, or Heppe, Abbey was one (see the charter in Dugdale, Monasticon, vi. 867). Pagan, who with Athelwold, Bishop of Carlisle, witnessed King Stephen's Charter of Liberties in 1136, was in command on the marches of Wales, and was slain by an arrow in the brain when chastising the Welsh in 1136, see Henry of Huntingdon, Gesta Stephani, in ann. The same witnesses occur in No. 8.

²⁰ Pagan or Paian Peverel was, probably, the brother of William Peverel (see on No. 7), whose progenitors as given by Dugdale (Baronage, i. 438) seem somewhat doubtful. He was the standard-bearer of Robert, Duke of Normandy, in the Holy Land, and died in London. He founded, or rather moved to Barnwell near Cambridge, in 1112, a Priory, where he placed Augustinian Canons, but died before the buildings were completed. To this Priory, a charter of

The date of this charter is fixed by the name of Abbot Gaufrid to be in 1131 or 1132.

6. ¹ Henry the Second, who was knighted at Carlisle, at Pentecost 1149, by David I. King of Scots (Ralph de Diceto, ed. Stubbs, i. 291). This is only the first part of the charter granted to the Abbey of S. Mary at York, which is given in full in the Harleian MS. No. 236, fol. 6b (see also Dugdale, Monasticon, iii. 548); the part referring to the Wetherhal grants is given below in No. 14.

⁴ Savaricus, or Severinus, was Abbot for 30 years from 1132 to April, 1161; see Roger de Hoveden, ed. Stubbs, i. 129 n. and Dugdale, Monasticon, iii. 538.

⁵ Soc is the power or liberty to execute judicial authority, also the district or area within which such liberty is exercised, from the Anglo-Saxon socu, "an inquiry" or "examination"; sac is the power of hearing and determining matters in dispute, the jurisdiction in writs or causes, from the Anglo-Saxon sacu, "a contention" or "dispute." Hence the law terms "soke," as above, and "socage," the tenure of land within the lord's soke or franchise. On this, and many of the following terms, there is much in the General Introduction to Domesday Book by Sir Henry Ellis, published by the Record Commission, 1816.

⁷ Infangentheof, the privilege of judging a thief taken within the district or manor to which the right belonged. So utfangentheof is the similar jurisdiction over a thief taken outside the district; from the Anglo-Saxon fangan, "taken," from fôn, "to take," and þeóf, "a thief."

⁸ Tridign, for Triding or Thriding, the third part of a shire, or the court held within a Triding, inferior to the Scira or county court. Hence, the three Ridings, or divisions, of the Shire of York, the th being lost in composition with the words North, East and West. Lincolnshire was similarly divided.

⁹ Wapentachs and hundreds. These were the inferior divisions into one or other of which the shire was usually divided, also the courts held in these divisions. The wapentake answered to the hundred in regard to administration, and occurred chiefly in the Danish part of England. The word is from the Anglo-Saxon wæpengetac or wæpentac, borrowed from the Norse. At the election of the new chief of a wapentake, he raised his weapon or spear, which his men touched in token of fealty, see Skeat, Etym. Dict. s. v. quoting B. Thorpe, Ancient Laws, Glossary. The hundreds were probably the districts in which the hundred warriors originally settled, but it is not known with certainty; they were unequal geographical divisions, see Stubbs, Const. Hist. i. 97 and Thorpe, l. c.

¹⁰ As Henry II. began to reign Dec. 19th, 1154, the date of this charter lies between 1154 and the death of Abbot Savaricus in April 1161. But the one witness to the charter of Henry II. given in Dugdale (see note above) is Thomas (Becket) Archbishop of Canterbury, who was consecrated May, 1162; this is an error for Theobald, his predecessor; see Illustrative Documents, xxxii.

7. ¹ Henry the First. This is another and earlier charter, confirming the property and liberties generally.

Testibus, Ranulpho Episcopo Dunelmensi⁴, Nigello de Albenio⁵, Willelmo Peverel⁶ et Radulpho Basseth⁷ apud Clarendunam⁸.

⁴ Ranulph or Ralph Flambard was Bishop of Durham from June 5th, 1099 to his death, September 5th, 1128.

thus connected with the district. He died at an advanced age, and was buried in the Abbey of Bec in Normandy. The exact date of his death is not known, but his son Roger was a minor, and made a ward of King Stephen very early in his reign. There is much about Nigel and his family in the records of the Abbey of Byland or Bella Landa, which was founded by Roger de Mowbray in 1143 (see Dugdale, Monasticon, v. 346 sq.). Grants made by Gundreda and Roger de Mowbray can also be found in the Chartulary of Rievaulx (ed. J. C. Atkinson, p. 30 sq.). In the Chartulary of Whitby there is an interesting charter of Nigel between 1108 and 1114, which Bishop Ranulf Flambard of Durham also witnesses (ed. J. C. Atkinson, i. 206); also a charter of Henry I. of the same date (p. 155), and containing the names of Nigel de Albini and Bishop Ranulf.

⁶ This William Peverel was, probably, the Norman who came over with William I., and who, with little authority, is said by Dugdale (Baronage, i. 436) to have been a natural son of the Conqueror, see Freeman, Norman Conquest, iv. 200. He held the castle of Nottingham, and the more famous castle of Peak Forest in Derbyshire. He was one of the witnesses to the noted Durham charter in 1091 (Freeman, William Rufus, ii. 536), also to a charter of Earl David between 1108 and 1124 (Calend. Doc. Scotland, ed. Bain i. 2). He assisted William Rufus in Normandy in 1094 (Florence of Worcester, in ann.). The time of his death is uncertain. There is often some confusion with his son, or descendant, William Peverel, the younger, as he is called by Orderic Vitalis (Lib. xiii. c. 37), who mentions him, but incorrectly, as one of the rebel lords against Stephen in 1138. Richard of Hexham and John of Hexham speak of this younger Peverel as being on the side of Stephen at the Battle of the Standard (1138); and he is supposed to have poisoned the younger Ranulf, Earl of Chester, in 1153. On Pagan Peverel, see No. 5.

⁷ Ralph Basset or Basseth was raised by Henry I. from a low station; he was Justiciar of England and one of the earliest itinerant judges (Stubbs, Constit. Hist., i. 392). A description of his acting as judge at Huntingdon in 1116 is given by Orderic (Lib. vi. c. 10). He was one of the King's commissioners with Ranulf Meschin in 1106 (Illustrative Documents II.). He was alive in 1124; for, in Leicestershire, he hanged four and forty thieves, "more than had ever before been executed in so short a time" (Anglo-Sax. Chron. in ann.).

Bishop Ranulf, lies between 1112 and 1128; and probably, like the charter of Henry I. to Whitby mentioned above, near to the former date.

8. ¹ Henry the First. A third charter, confirming the grant of the fish-pool and mill.

² Gaufrid or Godfrid, the third Abbot of S. Mary's at York, 1131—32; see on No. 5.

³ This confirms Ranulf Meschin's grant No. 2, but long after, when Ranulf was Earl of Chester.

⁷ Horneby in Yorkshire. The grant of this Church by Wigan, son of Landric, and witnessed by Hugh, the first Dean of York, is given in Dugdale, Monast. iii. p. 551, No. XIII. It was granted in 1220 by the Abbot and Convent of S. Mary to Archbishop Walter Gray, and by him in 1231 to the Dean and Canons of York. The latter deed is in the Appendix to Archbp Gray's Register (p. 139 ed. J. Raine).

⁸ The date of this charter is fixed by Abbot Gaufrid as 1131—32. The witnesses are the same as No. 5, and the time is probably the same.

9. ¹ Henry the First. A fourth charter, confirming the grant of the Churches of Appleby.

² Thurstan, or Thurstin, of Bayeux, was consecrated Archbishop of York by Pope Calixtus II. in October 1119, and retired to the monastery at Pontefract in January 1140, and died in February; see his life in Fasti Eboracenses, i. 170, by J. Raine.

⁵ Eustace, son of John, as in No. 5.

⁶ Probably the brother, or, according to Dugdale (Baronage, i. 432), the son of Ralph Paganel, who joined the Empress Matilda in the reign of Stephen. Another son, Gervase, was in important command on the same side in 1138. The name of Jordan Painel occurs in a confirmation charter of Henry I. to Rievaulx in 1133, as well as that of his co-witness here (Chart. Rievaulx, ed. Atkinson, p. 141).

⁷ Reading in Berkshire. According to Roger de Hoveden (ed. Stubbs, i. 90) Henry I. was buried here.

The date of the charter, from Archbp Thurstan 1119—1140, and Abbot Richard 1112—1131, falls between 1119 and 1131 (see on No. 7), and from Eustace son of John, probably near to the later date.

10. ¹ Richard the First. Richard was the first English king who adopted the plural number in his charters.

³ Robert de Harpham was Abbot of S. Mary's at York from 1184 to his death on April 19th, 1189. Robert de Longo Campo, Prior of Ely, is said to have succeeded him in 1189 (see Dugdale, Monast. iii. 538), and died in January, 1239, a very long tenure of the office; Robert de Longo Campo must be the Robert here mentioned; but Ralph de Diceto (ed. Stubbs, ii. 151) says he was elected in 1197, which is the more probable date.

⁵ Latrocinium, here not military service, or robbery, but the penalty to be paid for robbery committed in the district.

⁶ Scutagium, scutage or escuage, from scutum and French escu, "a shield," was a tax or contribution paid by those who held lands by knight's service, in proportion to the number of knights' fees, towards a gift, or aid, or other purpose. Also it was a commutation paid in place of personal service by those who were bound by knight's service; see Thos. Madox, History of the Exchequer, i. 641. Thus et danegeldis⁸ et hidagiis⁹ et asisis¹⁰ et de operacionibus Castellorum et pontium et parcorum et de Ferdwita¹¹ et in the 6th year of Richard I. (1195) the Cumberland Pipe Roll gives a payment of 40 shillings of scutage by Ranulf de Vallibus and ten shillings by William de Brus, this scutage being levied on those tenants-in-chief who had not accompanied the King to Normandy (Stubbs, Constit. Hist., i. 507). The next year they paid the same amounts, one for two knights' fees, the other for half a knight's fee. This was the second scutage in that reign for those who had not joined the army of Normandy. The scutage of 20s. raised in 1193—94 for Richard's ransom was properly an aid; a "hidage" was raised from other tenants for the same purpose.

⁷ Geldum, geld, a tax of any sort.

¹¹ Ferdwita, the fine or penalty for not going on military service, from Anglo-Saxon ferd, "a military expedition," and wíte, "a fine."

Concedimus insuper eidem Abba-chiæ pacis facturam et pugnam in domo factam et domus invasionem et omnes assultus hominum suorum et forestel²³ et Gridelbreke²⁴ et soch et sach et tol et theam et infangen-

¹² Hengwita, the fine or penalty for hanging a thief without due process of law.

¹⁹ Passagium, a tax on passengers, generally over water.

11. ¹ This title, Count of Anjou, does not occur in No. 10.

² Confirmation of the pasture, given by Henry I. (see No. 5), etween the river Eden and the King's Road as far as the manor of Wederhal extended.

following (Ralph de Diceto, ed. Stubbs, ii. 69, 75); he would therefore be elect to Ely on October 9th. He died Jan. 31st, 1197. The word Cantuariensi is evidently an error for Cancellario. The passage would then read plainly "Willielmo Cancellario nostro Eliensi electo." An attempt to get over the difficulty is found in the Transcript made by Stevens from Todd's Manuscript (given in Dugdale, Monast. iii. 552) by reading Willielmo again for nostro. A charter of Richard I. to certain Cistercian monasteries, November 16th, 1189, has among the witnesses the same form, Willielmo Cancellario nostro, electo Elyens. (see Mem. of Fountains Abbey, ed. Walbran, ii. 18 note).

⁴ The date of the charter will be October 9th, 1189.

12. ¹ The title Dominus Hiberniæ was first used by John, not by Henry II., and then by all his successors to Henry VIII., who took the title Rex Hiberniæ. John received the dominion of Ireland from his father in 1177.

² Robert de Longo Campo, see on No. 10.

³ This was the brother of William I. (The Lion), King of Scotland, not the Earl David who became David I. in 1124 (see on No. 106). He had considerable possessions in England, among them the Honor of Huntingdon, given him by his brother and confirmed by Richard I. in 1190; see the charter of confirmation in Calend. Doc. Scotland, i. 31, ed. J. Bain, who also gives many interesting facts connected with the Earl. Earl David died in 1219.

⁴ William de Albini, Earl of Arundel, was the son of William the first Earl by Queen Adeliza, or Alice, widow of Henry I. He was at first on the side of King John at Runnymede, but afterwards joined the Barons. He died in 1221 as he was returning from the Holy Land. He is witness to a charter of King John in Chartulary of Whitby (ed. Atkinson, ii. 421) on August 25th of this same year 1199.

⁷ Will. de Cantilupe, the well-known noble in the reigns of John and Henry III., and except for a short time, a strong supporter of the former, for which he was well rewarded. There is much about him in Dugdale (Baronage, i. 731). He died in 1239 at Reading.

⁹ Hubert Walter, or Fitzwalter, was translated from Salisbury to Canterbury in 1193. He was appointed Chancellor by King John in 1199, and held the office till his death July 13, 1205. He was nephew of the famous Ranulf Glanvill, and had been appointed Justiciar in

This is an Inspeximus of a charter of Henry II., but of one of a later date than charter No. 6, and in character more like charter No. 10. These Inspeximus charters originated in the 11th year of Henry III., when all persons had to shew their titles and have them confirmed. The amount to be paid was fixed by the Justiciar, and the King is said to have realised not less than £100,000 (Charter Rolls, ed. T. D. Hardy, Introd. p. v).

⁷ Hugh Pudsey, see note 26 on No. 10.

⁸ William de Magnavil, or de Mandevill, Count of Aumâle, succeeded his brother as Earl of Essex in 1167. He married Helewisa, daughter of William le Gros, Earl of Albemarle, and Cecily his wife, in 1180, and in her right became Earl of Albemarle. He carried the Crown at the coronation of Richard I. in 1189, and was made Justiciar of England, but died in November of the same year (Roger de Hoveden, iii. 19). Cecilia above mentioned was the eldest daughter and one of the three coheiresses of Alice de Romeli, lady of Copeland and of Skipton, and William FitzDuncan. Helewisa afterwards married William de Fortibus and thirdly Baldwin de Betun, both created Earl of Albemarle (Chron. de Melsa, i. 91; Dugdale, Baronage, i. 63).

January 4th, 1265, and translated to York the end of the year following. He died April 22nd, 1279.

¹⁴ Henry was the second son of Richard Plantagenet, Earl of Cornwall, King of Germany and brother of Henry III., by Isabel, daughter of William Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, and widow of Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester. Richard was made King of the Roman Empire, or of Germany (Alemanniæ) in 1257, and died in 1272 (see J. Bryce, Holy Roman Empire, p. 212). Henry was murdered at Viterbo by one of the sons of Simon de Montfort in 1271.

¹⁶ John de Verdun or Verdon was one of the strong supporters of Henry III. against the rebellious Barons, and died in 1274.

²⁰ Radulph de Bakepuz, or Bakepuis, occurs with Robert Aguylun in several charters of Henry III.; see note 15.

²³ Dated September 8th, 50 Hen. III., 1266.

14. ¹ The charter of Henry II., the former part of which is given in No. 6. The grants and grantors to S. Mary's Abbey are not given there, but are in full in Dugdale, Monasticon, No. v., vol. iii. p. 548. The grants here seem to be a selection of those belonging more especially to the monastery of Wetherhal. This charter must be a Confirmation charter of Richard or John, see below the words Henrici Patris mei.

² Hence the Church of the vill of Wederhal was given by Ranulf Meschin, as well as the Chapel of Warthewic mentioned below (see note 4 on No. 5).

⁴ Adam son of Suan, or Suein, appears in the Pipe Rolls for 1159 as receiving 100s. under the King's writ. His brother Henry, who witnesses his charter to Wederhal (No. 196), appears as holding lands in Langwathby and Edenhal in the same year, and as late as Lyolf⁶ tertiam partem Crogline⁷ cum Ecclesia et cæteris 1172. Adam held a large tract of country on the east of the river Eden, including the parishes of Kirkland, Melmorby and Ainstable, granted by Henry I. on payment of 112s. 8d. cornage. In the reign of King John it was held by Roger de Montbegon, Simon son of Walter, and Alexander de Nevill, having previously been held by William de Nevill (Testa de Nevill, pp. 379*b*, 380*a*). Adam had two daughters, his heirs, Amabil or Mabilia, and Matilda. Amabil married first Alexander de Crevequer (see on No. 195) and afterwards Galfrid de Nevill, who was succeeded by Walter de Nevill, who married another Amabil (see the charters to Monk Bretton Priory in Dugdale, Monast., v. pp. 137, 138). Matilda married first Adam de Montbegon or Munbegun (see note 4 on No. 195) and afterwards John Malherbe (see Monast., v. p. 138 and on No. 197). She had a son, Roger de Montbegon, not Robert as Dugdale mistakes (Baronage, i. 618). Adam son of Suan was a large landowner in Southern Yorkshire, and founded the Priory of Monk Bretton in Yorkshire (see Dugdale, Monast., v. 136 et seq.) and made grants to it which were confirmed by different members of his family. To this Priory, Roger de Montbegon also gave a charter. Adam also confirmed the grant of his father, Suan the son of Ailrich, to the Priory of Pontefract, of the church of Silkeston and certain land (Monast., v. 122, see also the "Progenies Suani" at p. 128 for some of these relationships). Adam is witness to Bishop Athelwold's charter (No. 15), and made his grant to Wederhal before 1147 (see No. 196).

⁵ See, on the grant of the Hermitage, No. 196.

⁶ Roger de Hoveden tells us (i. 134 ed. Stubbs) that Liulf lived at Durham in great friendship with Bishop Walcher (ob. 1080), and that the latter was murdered in revenge for the murder of Liulf by one of his relatives, Sheriff Gilbert; that Liulf married Aldgitha, daughter of Earl Aldred, by whom he had two sons, Uchtred and Morekar; also that through Aldgitha he was uncle to Earl Waldeof.

pertinentijs et duas bovas terræ in Estuna⁸ et molendinum de Scoteby⁹ in Cumquintina¹⁰ dimidiam carucatam¹¹ terræ

⁹ Scoteby was a manor in the parish of Wetherhal, now, with additions, made into an ecclesiastical district. It was one of certain manors in Cumberland, in the Forest of Inglewood, which for a time belonged to the King of Scotland. The others were Penrith (part of the manor), Langwathby, Salkeld (Great), Carlaton and Soureby. David I. took up arms against Stephen on behalf of the Empress Matilda, and marched to Carlisle. Stephen advanced against him in 1136, and they came to terms at Durham, David retaining Carlisle and a large part of the district of that name (Henry of Huntingdon, Lib. viii.; John of Hexham, in ann. 1136). His son Henry did homage, and was recognised as Earl. In 1157 when Malcolm IV., son of Earl Henry, was King, the grant of this land of Carlisle was annulled, and Henry II. ruled up to the former boundary (Roger de Hoveden, i. 216; Robert de Monte, ed. J. Stevenson, p. 743). The claims put forward by Scotland were at last set at rest through the mediation of Cardinal Otto, the Papal Legate, and these manors were granted to Alexander II., King of Scotland, on April 22, 1242 (Charter Rolls, 26 Henry III. m. 5). They were to be held of the King of England by Alexander and his heirs on yearly rendering at Carlisle one sorhawk. The advowsons of the churches of the manors, and a certain "rogus" in the manor of Soureby, were to be retained by the King. The preliminary agreement was made at York, in the presence of the Legate, on September 25th, 1237. The King of Scotland then quitclaimed his hereditary rights to the counties of Northumberland, Cumberland and Westmoreland for ever, and yielded other points. King Henry granted to Alexander and his heirs 200 librates of land within Northumberland and Cumberland (Patent Rolls, 21 Hen. III. m. 2, Record Com. p. 18; Rymer, Fœdera, new ed., i. 233). Numerous objections were raised before these manors were finally fixed upon in 1242. In 1248 there were five hawks in arrear, and the Sheriff of Cumberland was ordered to see to the matter. In 1251 the farm of the manor of Scoteby was returned as £29. 16. 4½ and the farm of the mill as £11. 6. 8. The figures for the other manors are given in the Pipe Roll for 34 Henry III. The rents and profits in 1286 and later periods (taken from the Pipe Rolls) will be found in Historical Documents, Scotland, i. pp. 2, 28 seq., ed. J. Stevenson; see also F. Palgrave, Documents illustrating Hist. of Scotland, i. p. 3. It appears from an Inspeximus, made in 1294, that John Balliol, King of Scotland, had the year before given these manors to Anthony Bec, Bishop of Durham (Patent Rolls, 22 Edward I. m. 3); afterwards the right was disputed, and in 1306—7 the manors were ordered by the Parliament held in Carlisle to revert to the English crown. In the Rolls of Parliament (Record Com., i. p. 188) we read "In reply to the petition of John de Hastings with regard to the manors of Penrith and Sowerby, the King replies that he has retaken (recuperavit) these manors formerly given by King Henry, his father, to Alexander, King of Scotland, to whom no heir modo Rex now exists"; see also the Assize Rolls quoted in Historical Doc. Scotland, i. 359. Scotby does not, as often supposed, take its name from this special connection with the Scottish King, for as early as the Pipe Roll of 3 John we find the men of Scotebi owing one chaseur to the Crown. The "mill of Scotby" was no doubt on the stream separating the manor from that of Wetherhal, and running into the river Eden, and now called Pow Maughan beck. The Priory had also the tithes of Scotby (see Nos. 16, 17) and compounded with the Priory of Carlisle (see No. 31) for half a silver marc for an alleged right in the same.

¹¹ On the carucate and bovate, see No. 55, note.

¹⁴ For Coleby, see on No. 227.

¹⁵ The grant of the Church of Morland is given in No. 235; on Ketell son of Eltreth, see No. 1, note 13.

¹⁶ Morland, in Westmoreland, which occurs so often in this Register, appears to have belonged partly to the Priory of Wetherhal, and partly to the first William de Lancastre, in both cases probably derived from Ketell son of Eldred. William de Lancastre, in the latter half of the 12th century, granted, in frank marriage with his daughter Agnes, to Alexander de Windesores what he possessed ("quicquid habeo") in Havershame, Grayrigg and Morlande. This deed is given in full from the Rawlinson MSS. by Sir G. F. Duckett (Duchetiana, pp. 16, 267), who has much upon the family of Windesore; see on No. 210, where a dispute with the Priory about the wood at Morland is arranged. The grant of the Church of Morland was confirmed by Bishop Athelwold and Bishop Bernard (Nos. 16, 17), also by Bishop Hugh (No. 19) who expressly says it was for the use and sustentation of the monks of the House of Wederhale, which is a Cell of the said Church of S. Mary at York. Bishop Nicolson (MSS. iii. 127), on the authority of several original grants in his possession, states that Bishop Bernard confirmed the grants of Thomas son of Gospatric to the Abbey of Shap, and that three of the witnesses were Gilbert, Walter, and Thomas, Rectors of the Church of Morland; this would be shortly after 1200. In 1405, John de Stutton, Prior of Wederhala, appointed Roger Peroy, by deed, to the Chapel of the Blessed Mary in le Wyth "in our parish of Morland," reserving the oblations in the same to the Priory (Illustrative Doc. xviii.). In 1424, a difference arose between the Prior and Sir John Richemont, Vicar of Morland, concerning the oblations in this Chapel, and the right to half an acre of land lying upon Litel Aynesbergh and abutting upon Commune Banc. An agreement was come to in the Parish Church of Morland, by the mediation of William Wellys, Abbot of S. Mary's at York (Illustrative Docum. xix.). According to Nicolson and Burn (History, i. 445) this Chapel was said to have been near the river Lyvennet, midway between Morland and King's Meaburn, "in a place now (1777) called Chapel Garth, belonging to the Vicarage"; the place still bears the name. Michael, Bishop of Glasgow, consecrated by Thomas, Archbp of York 1109—14, was buried in this church; the year is unknown, but it must have been before 1117, when Bishop John of Glasgow was consecrated. Bishop Michael held ordinations in Morland church for the Archbishop of York (Thos. Stubbs, ed. Twysden, col. 1713).

¹⁷ The Church of Brumfeld, or Bromfeld, in Cumberland, was granted to S. Mary's Abbey at York, but never assigned to Wetherhal.

In 1302, the rectory was appropriated to that Abbey by Bishop Halton, on condition that 40 marcs of yearly revenue were secured to the Vicar, and that the right of collation should rest with the Bishops of Carlisle (Register of Bp Halton, MS. p. 72). Only a portion of the manor was granted, other portions came into the possession of the Abbey of Holm Cultram. There is a concession of the manor, to farm, July 1st, 1434, by the Abbey of S. Mary to William Osmundrylake in full in Dugdale (Monasticon, iii. 567).

⁴ Ricardus Miles appears in the Pipe Roll for Carlisle of 31 Henry I. as paying noutgeld, also 20s. rent of his land; he is a witness in No. 72.

16. ¹ The impropriation of these Churches at this early period, before 1156, is noteworthy, the only conditions being decent provision for a priest and the payment of sinodals.

² It is very doubtful whether this name has any connection with S. Stephen. Kirkby, "church town," is usually connected with a locality (see examples in No. 209) or with a personal name, probably the owner. And here the personal name may be Stephan, or Steffan as it is spelt in the next charter. The name we have in William Steffan, the father of Wescubric, Lord of Corkeby (see note 9 on No. 2). The dedication to S. Stephen, the only one in the diocese, may well have been adopted in later times. This is one of the Churches granted with others to the Abbey of S. Mary at York by Ivo de Taillebois (see Illustrative Documents, XVI.). The charter of Bishop Hugh (No. 19) in 1220 confirms the same on condition that a proper Vicar is appointed with an annual income of 100 shillings. Bishop Walter Malclerk (1223—46) had a controversy about this Church with the Abbey of S. Mary, and, under the arbitration of the Prior of Carlisle and others, it was confirmed to the Abbey on certain conditions. John de Ferentin was then Vicar. At the same time, the patronage of the Churches of Clibburn, Ormesheved and Musgrave was ceded to the Bishop of Carlisle (see Illustrative Documents, XVII.). The cession of these Churches was confirmed to Bishop Silvester de Everdon in May, 1248, by Abbot Thomas and the convent of S. Mary (see Additional Charters, No. 240). After the dissolution of the monasteries, the Rectory and advowson were given by Edward VI. to Sir Richard Musgrave, and sold by him the next year to Lord Wharton (see an abstract of the Indenture in Bp Nicolson, MSS., ii. 337).

preceding notes). It appears from the obligation of Nicholas Malveysyn, Rector (see No. 218), that the pension reserved out of the living for the Priory of Wederhal was 10s.

⁵ The only point to fix the date is the episcopate of Bishop Athelwold, between 1133 and 1156.

17. ¹ Bernard, the second Bishop of Carlisle, who succeeded in 1204 after the long vacancy which followed the death of Bishop Athelwold in 1156, and who occupied the see for about 10 years; see on this Bishop, Appendix D. The first two Bishops are mentioned in the next charter. This confirmation of the right of patronage is referred to in a Faculty of Pope Gregory IX. in 1240 (Papal Registers, ed. W. H. Bliss, i. 188), also that of Bishop Hugh in No. 20.

² Burgo, now Brough in Westmoreland, was formerly part of the parish of Kirkbystephan, and appears in 1295 to have been called Burgo subtus Staynmore, or Burgo sub Mora. When the Church of Kirkbystephan was awarded to belong to the Abbey of S. Mary at York in the time of Bishop Walter (see note 2 on No. 16), the Chapel of Burgo was to go with it on the death of Thomas Boet, the Chaplain. Nicolson and Burn (History, i. 466) assert that Thos. Boet was presented by Richard I., but this is clearly an error. When the three Churches were confirmed to Bishop Silvester in 1248, the patronage of the Church of Burgh was also conveyed to him, without the reservation of any pension to the Abbey (see Additional Charters, No. 240). A great amount of litigation followed as to whether the right of patronage lay with the King, the Bishop, or the family of de Veteriponte. (An account will be found in Bp Nicolson, MSS., ii. 113.) The well-known Robert de Eglesfield, founder of Queen's College, Oxford, was presented to this living in 1332.

⁶ Alexander de Daker is also a witness to the charter of Bishop Bernard in the Register of Lanercost (MS. viii. 3). This is a very early, if not the earliest, mention of the family of Dacre ; Nicolson and Burn (History, ii. 378) give Ranulf de Dacre in 6 Edward I. as "the first of the name that hath occurred to us." He is also a witness with Bp Bernard to the grant of the Church of Bridekirk to the Priory of Gyseburne by Alice de Rumely when she was a second time widow, in 1210—14 (Chart. Gyseburne, ed. W. Brown, ii. 319).

⁸ There is little to fix the date of this charter beyond that it was in the time of Bishop Bernard ; and so far as the witnesses go they agree with the period 1204 to 1214 determined in Appendix D.

18. ¹ This was Honorius III., Pope from July 1216 to March 1227. He is the Pope who interfered so strongly on behalf of the young King, Henry III., through his Legate Gualo, Cardinal priest of S. Martin. In this district the Legate was especially active against Alexander II., King of Scotland, who in 1215 had taken the town of Carlisle and laid waste Cumberland. In the first year of his Pontificate, January 16th, the Pope had written strongly to King Alexander ; and on April 26th of the same year Henry III. wrote to the Pope complaining of the Canons of Carlisle, who despised the Legate's authority, became subjects of the excommunicated King of Scotland, and had elected a certain excommunicated clerk as their Bishop and Pastor (Rymer, Fœdera, i. 147, from the Patent Rolls, 1 Hen. III. m. 16 (Record Com. p. 11) also Papal Registers, ed. W. H. Bliss, i. 48, 57). The result was that the Canons were exiled by Gualo (Chronicon de Lanercost, ed. J. Stevenson, p. 27) and the Pope's mandate was issued for the election, with the royal assent, of Hugh, Abbot of Beaulieu, to be Bishop of Carlisle (1218).

The Cistercian convent of Beaulieu, or Bellum Locum Regis, was founded by King John in 1204 (Annal. Waverley); and in 1213 Abbot Hugh was one of the King's envoys to the Pope (Innocent III.) with the Bishop of Norwich and others (see Papal Registers, ed. W. H. Bliss, i. 39, 129, 145). The see had been vacant from before May, 1215, when the custody was granted to the Prior of Carlisle (see Appendix D). Bishop Hugh was one of those who on June 15th, 1220, gave their promise, in verbo veritatis, on the part of Henry III. to Alexander II. of Scotland, in regard to the marriage of the latter with the King's sister Johanna (Rymer, Fædera, i. 160). He granted two charters to the Priory of Lanercost about this time, which were confirmed by Bartholomew, Prior, and the Convent of Carlisle, and he fixed the taxation of the Vicarage of Brampton on the collation of Magister Thomas (Register of Lanercost, MS. viii. 6, 7, 8, 10). He also confirmed the Church of Crosseby Ravenswart in Westmaria to the Abbey of Whitby, among the witnesses being Bartholomew, Prior of Karleol, and Suffred, Prior of Wederhala (Chart. Whitby, ed. Atkinson, i. 44). He died at the Abbey of La Ferté in Burgundy, June 14th, 1223, on his return from Verona, whither he had gone with the King's help (Annal. Waverley in ann. 1223; Chronicon de Lanercost, ed. J. Stevenson, p. 30).

² The Order of S. Benedict, the most important of the monastic orders, was founded by Benedict, who was born at Nursia in Umbria about A.D. 480. He betook himself to Monte Cassino, afterwards the centre of this great Order, about A.D. 530. Here he began his monastery and is said to have composed the famous Benedictine Rule; he died probably about A.D. 543. Before his death the Benedictine Rule had passed into Gaul and Spain, and before long absorbed all the monastic systems of the West. To this Order is due much of the

It is not clear when the Order was introduced into England; according to some, by Augustine in the 6th century, and others, by Wilfrid in the 7th century. ² Thomas de Scyreburn (probably Sherburn, in Yorkshire) was a monk of S. Mary's, and not to be confounded with a monk of Selby in the next century.

⁴ Quadragesimæ, the Lent offerings.

⁵ S. Nicholas was the patron saint of children and of sailors; and was Bishop of Myra in Lysia in the 4th century. He was a very popular saint in England and elsewhere, and the chief patron saint of Russia; but his name is not connected generally with lepers, and very few of the leper hospitals in England were dedicated to him; for the legendary account of him, see Jameson, Sacred and Legendary Art, ii. 450. This Hospital was granted to the Abbey of Heppe or Shap, in Westmoreland, by John de Veteriponte before 1241, when he died (see on No. 204); and the grant was confirmed by Bishop Walter Malclerk, October 20th, 1240; the confirmation is given in full in the Machel MSS. vol. v. p. 269, and states that the Hospital was for three lepers.

ponte (Nicolson and Burn, History, i. 456; Dugdale, Baronage, i. 455). I have found no real authority for the statement. The subject of the charter agrees well with the place, and Bellum Locum seems to point to Beaulieu (Bewley) rather than to the personal name Builli.

28. ¹ Walter, generally taken to be the second Prior of Carlisle as successor to Athelwold, often appears in this Register in connection with the witnesses to this charter (see below). He is supposed to be identical with Walter the Chaplain of Henry I., to whom the King gave Linstoc and Carletun, which Walter transferred to the then new Priory of Carlisle on entering that House (Testa de Nevill, Record Com. p. 379 b and see Appendix B). If he became Prior in 1133, when Athelwold became Bishop, he must have held the office for a very long period. He more probably became Prior later, but before the death of the Bishop in 1156, for we find him witness with Adeluph, Bishop of Carlisle, to the charter granted by Earl Henry to the Abbey of Holm Cultram on January 1st, 1150, and again, with Adeluph, to the confirmation of that charter by David I., King of Scotland, who died in 1153 (Dugdale, Monasticon, v. 594, where the charters are given in full, and Illustrative Documents, xxiv.; for the date 1150 see Chron. de Mailros, in ann.; Roger de Hoveden, ed. Stubbs, i. 211). He was witness to the Foundation Charter of Lanercost, said to be granted in 1169, and no doubt about that time, in which appear the names of all the witnesses to the present charter. His name also occurs in other charters of this period in the Register of Lanercost, generally with Robert, Archdeacon of Carlisle; see MS. I. 9, 14; II. 18 (charter of Alexander de Wyndesor as to the tithes of the mill at Corkeby, Gualter for Walter); v. 3 (charter of William son of Odard of land near Warthwyc bridge) and VIII. 5 (G. for Gualter). He was also witness to the confirmation of the Church of Crossby Ravenswart to the Abbey of Wyteby by Robert, Archdeacon of Carlisle, after the death of Bishop Athelwold (Chart. Whitby, ed. Atkinson, i. 38). He was succeeded by John, the third Prior, see note on No. 31.

³ From note 1, on Prior Walter, it appears that Robert was Archdeacon of Carlisle about 1169, and some time after. He does not seem to have been the first Archdeacon recorded; he occurs late in the century, and in the Chartulary of Whitby (ed. Atkinson, i. 38) there is a charter of Bishop Adhelwald addressed to Elyas, Archdeacon, no doubt Archdeacon of Carlisle; and this charter is confirmed by Archdeacon Robert (i. 39, 42) after the Bishop's death, under precept from Roger, Archbishop of York (1154—1181), the See being then vacant. Besides being witness to the Foundation Charter of Lanercost, he is co-witness to many of the other charters in the Register of Lanercost together with the persons connected with him in this Register, see MS. i. 9, 14; ii. 15 (charter of Ada Engayne, her father William being dead), 18; iii. 1, 2 (charters of Robert son of Bueth), 13; v. 3, 5; vii. 5; xii. 26 and viii. 5, where there is a renunciation before him of rights in the Churches of Irthington and Brampton by Walter, Prior, and the Convent of Carlisle. His name occurs in the Register of Holm Cultram (MS. p. 36) as ratifying an agreement between the Convent and Adam son of Gospatric son of Orm, parson of Camerton, about the chapel of Flemingby, during the vacancy of the See; to this reference is made in a confirmation of Pope Clement III. dated 1190 (MS. p. 239). His name does not occur in the charter of Earl Henry to that Abbey in 1150. He attested the charter of Huctred son of Fergus, 1159—64 (see on Odard son of Hildred in No. 72). He is a party to other deeds in this Register, two of which should be specially noted—No. 36, between 1154 and 1175, probably 1160—70, and No. 44 in 1164—65 (on which see below). Robert was succeeded by Peter de Ros, who was Archdeacon before 1192 and probably from 1180 (see note 3 on No. 31). But, in the Pipe Rolls (Cumberland) a Robert, Archdeacon of Carlisle, appears as one of the debtors of Aaron the Jew of Lincoln in 1192, and in the four following years; he is not among the debtors in 1197, and therefore probably died in 1196. This can scarcely have been the Robert we are considering, and was probably a second of the name. Another Archdeacon Robert occurs in this Register (see on No. 137) about 1235—46, Robert de Otterington. On the Archdeacons of Carlisle generally and their office, see my Visitations in the Ancient Diocese of Carlisle, 1888, in which I should now make several corrections as to early dates.

⁴ Robert de Vallibus, or de Vaux, the second Lord of Gilsland, was the son of Hubert de Vallibus, to whom Henry II. gave that Barony (Testa de Nevill, p. 379 a) to be held for the service of two knights' fees, per servitium duorum militum (see Illustrative Documents, XXII.; No. 191, note 3), probably in 1157, when Malcolm restored the northern counties. The King was in Carlisle in 1158, and that year, the 4th of his reign, is the first in which the accounts for Carlisle appear in the Pipe Rolls. There Hubert de Vallibus is exempted £18. 13s. 3d. for Notegild, or Neatgeld, from which he was free by the terms of the grant of the Barony, thus proving he was in possession of the lands at the time (quietas ab omni neutegeldo); and there his name appears until 1164, when, in 1165, Robert de Vallibus takes his place, having succeeded to the Barony. The important position held by Hubert de Vallibus in 1157 is shewn by another entry in the Pipe Roll for 1158. The sheriff, Robert son of Troite, pays over to him "the Corredy £11. 3s., prepared against the arrival of the King, by the King's writ"; this was to meet the expenses of the King's visit, who was at Carlisle on Midsummer Day (Roger de Hoveden, i. 216; Robert de Monte in ann.). The grant made to his father Hubert was confirmed to Robert by Henry II. between 1166 and 1174 (the See of Bath being then vacant, and Henry elect of Bath being one of the witnesses); it was also confirmed by Richard I. in the first year of his reign; these three charters are given in full (taken from some of Dugdale's MSS.) in the Machel MSS. iv. 135—7; see also for Hubert's charter, Illustrative Documents, XXII., or Nicolson and Burn, History, ii. 487, taken from Machel's MSS. In the Foundation Charter of Lanercost, the name of the mother of Robert de Vallibus is given as Grecia, or Grace. The Pipe Rolls again afford us important information, with dates. In 1169 he paid 2 marcs for two knights' fees, and in 1172 paid 40s. scutage for the same; in 1175 he was Sheriff of Carlisle, and held the office to 1185 inclusive. He founded the Priory of Lanercost, it is said in 1169 on the authority of an untrustworthy note in the margin of the Register of Lanercost (MS. i. 1), but from the witnesses to the Foundation Charter this must have been about the date (see Illustrative Docum. XXIII.). In 1174 he held the Castle of Carlisle for Henry II. against William the Lion, King of Scotland, and was made a Justice Itinerant January 25th, 1176 (Roger de Hoveden, ed. Stubbs, ii. 60, 88; Benedict Abbas, i. 108). His wife was Ada Engayne, daughter of William Engayne, Lord of Burgh (see the note on No. 101). In a charter granted by her to the Priory of Lanercost, she speaks of William Engayne, her father, Robert de Vallibus, her husband, Simon de Morville, her former husband, and Hugo de Morville, her son; in other charters Robert speaks of his wife Ada (Regist. Laner. MS. i. 2, 3; ii. 11). This and other grants made by her (MS. ii. 15) were confirmed by Pope Alexander III. in 1181 (MS. viii. 17); and Simon de Morville died in 1167 (see note 1, No. 101). There is no mention of his wife in his Foundation Charter (although his son William is a witness); hence it would appear that he was married between 1170 and 1180. He died in 1195, without issue, and his brother Ranulph succeeded to his property, paying 50 marcs for livery of his lands (Pipe Rolls, 6 Ric. I.). His name occurs several times in this Register; in No. 44 (1164—65) connected with many names mentioned in the F. C. of Lanercost. Robert de Vallibus, junior, succeeded his father Ranulph in 1199 (see on No. 38 and Pipe Rolls, 1 Joh.) and is often confounded with his uncle Robert. For the Priory of Lanercost, see the note on No. 117.

⁶ Peter de Tillel, or Tyllolf, or Teillol, held the manor of Scaleby, about 5 miles to the north-east of Carlisle. We learn from the Pipe Rolls that he had livery of the lands of his grandfather in 1158, paying 50s. for the same in 1159; and from Testa de Nevill (p. 379 b) that this ancestor was Richard Rider or Richard Tyllioll. He attested the charter of Huctred son of Fergus, 1159—64, referred to in the note on Odard son of Hildred in No. 72. He was a witness to the Foundation Charter of Lanercost about 1169; and to one or two other charters of that Priory. A certain land called Holmheim was given him by Henry II. to be held for 20s. yearly, as appears from the Coram Rege Rolls (11 Joh. No. 41, m. 9, see Abbrev. Placit. Rec. Com. p. 66 b). He died in 1184, when his son Simon (see on No. 38) had livery of his lands on payment of 30 marcs. His name appears in Nos. 28, 44; but that of his grandson Peter de Tyllol occurs very often (see on No. 56) in this Register.

⁶ On William son of Odard, see note 1 on No. 36.

Hijs Testibus Magistro A. de Kirkeby tunc Officiali Karleolensi, A. de Espatric¹ tunc Decano Cumberlandiæ, Odardo Clerico, S. suppiore de Wederhal et alijs².

29. ¹ If this charter were granted in the lifetime of Bishop Hugh, which seems probable, the date would be between Feb. 24th, 1219 and 1223; if not, it is certainly before 1231, when Prior Bartholomew died. In the next charter, of the same date, we have A. de Kirkeby, Official, who was Official in the time of Bishop Hugh, see on No. 19.

30. ¹ A. de Espatric, or Aspatric, may be the Adam de Aspatric mentioned in No. 151. In the Register of Lanercost (MS. viii. 3, 4) the same name appears, in a charter of Bishop Bernard, as Dean of Allerdale, and in its confirmation by the Chapter of Carlisle; this cannot be the same person, nor the same as in No. 43 (see note there). The name of the place, Aspatric, now Aspatria, evidently comes from Gwaspatricius, or Quaspatricius, the old form of the name of Gospatric, 31. QUIETA CLAMATIO PRIORIS ET CONVENTUS KARLEOL. SUPER QUIBUSDAM DECIMIS DE SCOTEBY.

OMNIBUS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs ad quorum notitiam hoc scriptum pervenerit Johannes Prior¹ et Conventus Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Karleoli salutem. the first Earl of Dunbar, whose son Waldiev had the grant from Henry I. of the Barony of Allerdale below Derwent, in which Aspatic was situated (see also note 11 on No. 1).

² The date is evidently like that of the preceding charter.

31. ¹ John, usually called the third Prior of Carlisle, succeeded Prior Walter. He is here with Peter de Ros, Archdeacon of Carlisle, which must be before 1192 (see note 3 below). He was defendant in a suit respecting the advowson of Routhelive, May 6th, 1204 (Pedes Finium, 5 Joh. ed. J. Hunter, p. 7). In this Register he is a witness to No. 94, about the beginning of the 13th century (see below), and to No. 117, a charter of Bishop Bernard's, and in No. 122 he is a party to the confirmation of that charter. In the Register of Lanercost he is witness to a charter (MS. ii. 12) of Hugo de Morville, who died 1202, among his co-witnesses being Ranulph de Vallibus, which would nearly fix the date, 1195 to 1199, when Ranulph died; also witness to a confirmation (MS. viii. 2) by Americ (de Taillbois) Archdeacon of Carlisle, between 1196 and 1204 (see below on Peter de Ros); also to a charter of Bishop Bernard and a confirmation of the same by the Prior and Convent of Carlisle (same witnesses, viii. 3, 4); also to a charter (v. 4) with Thomas Official (see below on Thomas de Thorp, No. 40). He must have died before May 6th, 1215, when, the Priory being vacant, King John gave the Church of Rothecliva to Odo de Ledreda (Charter Rolls, 15 Joh. ed. Hardy, p. 206 b).

³ Peter de Ros was Archdeacon of Carlisle before 1192, but not after; from the evidence of the Pipe Rolls, one Robert was Archdeacon in that year and until 1196 (see note 3 on No. 28). In 1196 Richard I. gave the Archdeaconry to Aimeric de Taillbois, or Thebert, nephew of Philip of Poitiers, Bishop-elect of Durham, who also gave him the Archdeaconry of Durham (Roger de Hoveden, ed. Stubbs, iv. 14). In 1203 King John gave the Archdeaconry to Alexander de Lucy on November 18th, having given him the temporalities of the See on June 8th (Patent Rolls, 5 Joh. m. 9, m. 5, Record Com. i. 30 b, 35 b); and on February 14th, 1204, the Archdeaconry was again given to Aimeric with the church of Dalston (Charter Rolls, 5 Joh. ed. Hardy, p. 119 b). In the Register of the Abbey of Holm Cultram, Peter de Ros is witness to a grant of Richard son of Anketill made June 17th, 1190 (Dugdale, Monasticon, v. 606). In the Chartulary of Rievaulx (ed. Atkinson, p. 92) he is witness at York to a deed whose date must be from 1189 to 1194. He is witness, with Simon of Apulia, Chancellor of York, and Roger Arundel, Canon of Suel (Southwell) to a grant by the Priory of Hexham to William, Chaplain of Geoffrey Plantagenet, Archbishop of York (Mem. of Hexham, ed. Raine, ii. 88); the date of this grant must also be from 1189 to 1194. We learn from Benedict Abbas (ed. Stubbs, ii. 247) that in the troubles which arose in the northern province between Archbishop Geoffrey and Hugh de Puiset, Bishop of Durham, Peter de Ros had been excommunicated, with some of the Canons of York, of whom he appears to have been one, by the Archbishop; but they were restored on their submission in 1192. Peter de Ros was evidently a person of considerable importance in the Diocese of York. In this Register Archdeacon Peter de Ros appears in two deeds (Nos. 120, 123) as custos of the Bishopric of Carlisle during a vacancy of the See, probably about 1180, in reference to the Church of Denton. The grant of this Church was afterwards confirmed by Bishop Bernard (see on No. 117). Peter de Ros held the Archdeaconry after the death of the first Archdeacon Robert, and probably from about 1180 to 1192; he died according to Roger de Hoveden in 1196 (ed. Stubbs, iv. 14).

Kirkbride⁴ Decano Cumberlandiæ, Adam Decano Westmerlandiæ, Bernardo Decano Gilleslandiæ⁵, Adam Decano de Allerdale⁶ et alijs multis.

⁴ William de Kirkbride, called here Dean of Cumberland, but in No. 120, about the same period, Dean of Carlisle, is the same as William, Dean (of Carlisle) in No. 121, perhaps the same as William, Dean in Nos. 36, 49, but not in Nos. 109, 137, 138, 170. We have here four Rural Deaneries, Cumberland, Westmoreland, Gillesland and Allerdale, near the end of the 12th century. Whether the Deanery of Cumberland, which, as we have seen above, existed at this time, was identical with that of Carlisle is not certain; but probably it was so. Later, the Deaneries of Carlisle and Cumberland were distinct, Gillesland being apparently included in the former. The existence of the Rural Deanery of Gillesland may perhaps be explained by the fact of that Barony having been in early times kept so distinct and under the acknowledged jurisdiction of the Bishop of Durham (see my Visitations in the Ancient Diocese of Carlisle, p. 10 n.). Omitting Gillesland, these four Rural Deaneries appear in the Taxation of Pope Nicholas in 1292, also in the first formal Visitation Book in the Bishop's Registry. The Visitation of Bishop Rainbow in 1682 was held for the Deanery of Carlisle in the Cathedral, for Cumberland at Penrith, for Westmoreland at S. Laurence, Appleby and for Allerdale at Wigton. In 1777, we find the names of those four towns given to the four Rural Deaneries (Nicolson and Burn, History, ii. 6). At a period prior to this charter, we have Robert, dean of Appelbi, and Brichtrich, priest of S. Laurence, witnesses to an early charter of Bishop Athelwold (Chart. Whitby, ed. Atkinson, i. 38), and about 1175 Murdac, dean of Appelby (apparently an earlier name for Westmoreland) and Robert, dean of Levinton (see No. 48). The first division of the Diocese into the modern Rural Deaneries took place under Bishop Villiers in 1858. On the duties of Rural Deans, see Visitations in the Ancient Diocese of Carlisle, p. 21; Report of the Eccles. Courts Commission, Appendix, pp. 25, 32.

² Thomas de Foveys was Archdeacon's Official in 1264 (Chart. Whitby, i. 285, ed. Atkinson).

He granted a Confirmation of their Churches to the Priory of Lanercost on August 12th, 1181, very shortly before his death on September 20th (Reg. of Lanercost, MS. viii. 17). He was the Pope who was called upon to take such a prominent part in the controversy between Henry II. and Archbishop Thomas Becket.

He was Sheriff of Cumberland in 55th and 56th years of Henry III. A letter of this Bishop is given in No. 200, dated 1274.

² February 4th.

³ This is Nether Denton in Gilsland. The Church of the adjoining parish of "Old," or Over, or "Upper" Denton was given to the Priory of Lanercost by David son of Terri and Robert son of Asketill (Regis. Lanercost, MS. iii. 13) and confirmed to them by Robert de Vallibus (MS. i. 4, 5) and by Hugh Pudsey, Bishop of Episcopi existit dictis Religiosis et Prioratui de Wederhal Durham (MS. viii. 16), also, with other Churches, in 1181 by Pope Alexander III. (MS. viii. 17). It only fell into the Diocese of Carlisle from the Diocese of Durham at the beginning of last century (see Bishop Nicolson, Miscellany Accounts, page 4). This Church of Nether Denton was granted by Robert son of Bueth to S. Mary's Abbey at York and the monks of Wederhal (see No. 121). On the presentation of the said Robert, to whom the right of patronage then belonged, about 1180, William, Clerk of Denton, was instituted by Archdeacon Peter de Ros, the See being vacant, to the Church of Denton (see No. 123). Robert having exhibited the charter by which he conceded the advowson of Denton to the Abbot and Convent of S. Mary at York and the monks of Wederhale, Archdeacon Peter de Ros admitted William, Clerk, presented de novo by the said Abbot and Monks to the Church of Denton then vacant (see No. 120). But it appears that previously Buethbarn, the father of this Robert, had granted the Church of Denton to the Canons of Lanercost (Regis. Lanercost, MS. iii. 1) the grant being confirmed by his son Robert (iii. 2). Difficulty arose from this double patronage, which was met by a composition entered into between the Canons of Lanercost and the Monks of Wederhale (see No. 119); by this it was agreed that Wederhale should have one moiety of the Church of Denton, and Lanercost the other moiety by the name of the Church of Brancton, each house receiving from the two clerks of Buchecastre annually 2s. by way of pension; in case of a vacancy, each to present a clerk to their own mediety. This was in the time of the aforesaid William, Clerk (see No. 124) and the composition was approved and the Church confirmed to the Monks of Wederhale and the Canons of Lanercost by Bishop Bernard (see No. 117) with the assent of the Chapter of Carlisle (No. 122). A charter of confirmation granted to Lanercost by Pope Honorius III. in 1224 speaks of "Ecclesiam de Denton superiorem et beneficium quod habent in Ecclesia de Denton inferiori" (Reg. Lanercost, MS. viii. 19). Not long after, an agreement, said to have been the result of a suit, was come to with Bishop Walter, by which the patronage went to the Bishop, he paying annually 2½ marcs of pension to each house. This payment the monks of Wederhale, in this present charter (1266), quit-claim to the Bishop of Carlisle on condition that the Bishop gives up all claim to the custody of the Priory during a vacancy, and institutes as Prior the monk whom the Abbot of S. Mary may present. The charter of Bishop Walter as to the 5 marcs is given in the Register of Lanercost (MS. x. 4) dated October 1238.

⁶ The date of the charter is February 4th, 1266.

35. ¹ Udard, or Odard, was no doubt the lord of Corkeby, which he probably received from Hubert de Vallibus, to whom it was granted by Henry II. about 1157 (see note 3 on No. 2 and No. 28, note 4). This Osbert and his brother William were certainly owners of Corkeby (see No. 191 et al.), and their father is called Odard de Corkebi (No. 40 et al.). As it is now in the possession of Osbert, it cannot have come to William through Osanna, his wife, daughter of Alexander de Windesores (as Hutchinson, History Cumb. i. 170). Osbert seems to have died without issue and to have been succeeded by his brother William before 1167 (see note 1 on No. 36). For more on Odard, see No. 72.

² This is the fishery granted by Ranulf Meschin (see note 2 on No. 2). Osbert now gives up his own fishing rights, which Hubert de Vallibus had from the King; and there is again the mention of the Corkeby bank opposite to the fishery of the Monks, but now the whole bank is granted, not merely room to fix the sluice.

³ On the bovate, see No. 55.

⁴ The date is almost certainly after 1157, when Hubert de Vallibus got the Barony, and then probably granted Corkeby to Odard, father of Osbert, but before 1167, when William had succeeded.

36. ¹ William son of Odard has an important part in this Register. Of his father Odard, see on Nos. 2 and 72. His brother Osbert (see No. 35) was formerly owner of Corkeby, and died apparently without issue. From this charter we learn that his mother's name was Anna, and that she had given to the Priory land which she possessed in Warthwic; through her, Warthwic may have come into the family. His wife's name, we see here, was Osanna, stated to be the daughter of Alexander de Windesore, through whom William had Corkeby. The last statement is evidently wrong. William speaks of the grants made by his antecessors to Wederhale, of whom his brother Osbert and his mother have been named, and his father was Odard de Corkebi. The statement comes from a MS. in the handwriting of Lord William Howard, giving a list of the lords of the Manor of Corkeby to 1625 (quoted by Hutchinson, History Cumb. i. 170; Duchetiana, p. 261). There Alexander de Windesores is made meorum consessi Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Sanctique Constantini de Wederhale et Monachis ibidem Deo servitibus in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam omnia bona quæ Antecessores mei prædictæ Ecclesiæ contulerunt scilicet totam partem piscationis in Edena quæ ad Villam meam de Chorkeby pertinebat totamque ripam in qua piscaria firmata est ab illa piscaria usque ad locum qui dicitur Munchwath et duas bovatas terræ in eadem Chorkeby liberam et quietam ab omni consuetudine et servitio et hanc concessionem hac mea propria carta confirmavi et ex meo proprio dono dedi prædictæ Ecclesiæ de Wederhal tres to be the 5th Lord by gift of Robert de Vallibus in the time of Richard I. ; and Osanna, wife of William, is called his daughter and heir. But William held Corkeby long before the time of Richard I., and his relatives had possessed it before him. Reference is there made to a grant of Corkeby with a mill and fishery by Robert de Vallibus to the said Alexander, which explains the error. In the Register of Lanercost (MS. i. 5; ii. 18) we have the grant by Alexander de Wyndesore of the title of this mill to Lanercost, and it is spoken of as "the mill of Parva Corkeby"; the village of Little Corby is lower down the river Eden, and this de Windesores may have possessed (see on No. 38). William, called lord of Corkeby (No. 191), speaks of Robert de Vallibus as "Dominus meus" (No. 38). From the Pipe Rolls, it appears that he held the property as early as 1167, when he paid half a marc for Corchebi; in 1181 William son of Udard rendered account of 3 marcs for recognizance of 3 carucates of land against Udard son of Adam, which would seem to point to Odard of Wigton being his father (see on No. 72) and consequently this Udard son of Adam his nephew. In 1185 he made a payment, and in 1190 paid £1. 13s. 4d. on account of the mines of Carlisle, and in 1195 he paid 3s. 4d. Shortly after this date he probably died. He had a son John, whom he speaks of as his heir (see Nos. 39, 40) and who seems to have inherited Warthwic (No. 41 et al.); a son Robert, afterwards possessor of Corkeby (No. 42 et al.); also other sons Alan (No. 45) and Ranulph (No. 55). William son of Odard witnessed the Foundation Charter of Lanercost, and gave to that Priory some land near Warthwic bridge (Reg. Lanercost, MS. v. 3), Walter, Prior, and Robert, Archdeacon, being among the witnesses. He was also witness to a grant of Walter de Wyndesore to Farlam Church and its confirmation by Ranulph de Vallibus, 1195—99 (Regis. Lanercost, MS. i. 20; ii. 9).

² Roger de Ponte Episcopi, or of Bishopsbridge, was Archbishop of York for the long period from October 10th, 1154 to November 22nd, 1181.

⁶ John son of Letold is a frequent witness to deeds of this period, and very often with Archbishop Roger. At times he simply signs his name, as here, at others as Canon of S. Peter's, York (Chart. of Rievaulx, ed. Atkinson, pp. 33, 165, 166; Chart. of Whitby, i. 185) and again as Archdeacon of York (see the Chart. of Rievaulx, pp. 69, 138, 147, the last named charter being certainly before 1174). He is witness as Archdeacon of York to a composition between Archbishop Roger and Hugh Pudsey, Bishop of Durham (see Dugdale, Monasticon, Doc. Cathedral of S. Peter, York, vi. 1198); his co-witnesses are A. (Ailred) Abbot of Rievaulx, who died in 1167 and Ralph (de Warneville) Treasurer of York, who became Treasurer in 1163. Hence John was Archdeacon before 1167, and it was probably some years before that he used this simple signature. The list of early Archdeacons of York in Hardy, Fasti Eccles. vol. iii. is very confused.

⁹ Richard son of Trute is in the Pipe Rolls (5 Ricard. I. 1193—94) as owing 40s. for a covenant, before the Chancellor, with Richard his son. He was therefore alive at that date, but probably died before 1198 when his son got seisin of Gamelby (Pipe Rolls, 10 Ricard. I.). See, on his claim to Gamelby and Glassanby, and on Richard his son, No. 73, note 1, and No. 94. A conjecture is made by J. H. Round (The Genealogist, New Series, viii. 202) that Trute, or Truite, was one of three daughters of Hildred de Carlel, and therefore that Richard was a cousin of Robert son of Odard, with whom he had the lawsuit about Gamelby. He cites a genealogy drawn from Bracton's Note Book (ii. 71, ed. F. W. Maitland); but an examination of the more accurate extract given by J. Bain (Calend. Doc. Scot. i. 160) from the Coram Rege Rolls shews that this will not hold good.

37. ¹ Robert son of William was the younger son of William son of Odard; the elder son, John, apparently inherited Warthwic and the younger Corkeby (see on No. 39). He appears often in this Register as Robert, son of William de Corkeby. In No. 46 he is called "knight"; and in No. 126 he is named "sheriff," though he does not appear in the Pipe Rolls as such, but in 1213 as paying 30 marks for a trespass. In No. 127 he is called "Seneschal of Gillesland." He married Alicia de Lascels (see No. 54) and succeeded his father at Corkeby shortly after 1195. He had a daughter and heiress Isabella, see on Alan de Lascels in No. 47; where it is shewn that she was in possession in 1252, when her father therefore was dead. He was one of the inquisitors named in the charter granted by Henry III. to the city of Carlisle 1221 (Fine Rolls, 5 Hen. III., m. 2, given in full in Royal Charters of Carlisle, ed. R. S. Ferguson, p. 2), and appears as "knight" in a deed in the Chartulary of Gyseburne dated Sept. 30th, 1231 (ed. W. Brown, ii. 320).

² Alan, son of William, son of Odard, and brother of Robert and John; he seems to have been identical with Alan de Langethwayt (see note 7 on No. 46).

³ Laurence son of Agyllun is identical with Laurence Agelun who signs after Alan son of William in No. 50, and with Laurence Aglunby (the name is in many forms) who gave 4 acres of land in Aglunby to the Priory of Wederhal (No. 99). He is said to have been the son of Walter, but the genealogy is confused; see J. Denton, Cumberland, p. 104 and Nicolson and Burn, History, ii. 327, though the father of Laurence cannot, as they say, have come in with the Conqueror. Laurence was probably the brother of Werri or Werric, who signs with him here. See also on Robert Agyllun note 17, No. 13.

⁵ The date is probably not long after 1195 when Robert came into the property.

38. ¹ This is the first Robert de Vallibus who was now Lord of Gillesland, in which Barony Chorkeby was. He succeeded his father Hubert in 1164, see note 4 on No. 28.

Illud vero sciendum est quod quando hæc prædictis Monachis concessi quietas clamaverunt mihi et heredibus meis duas bovatas terræ⁵ quas habebant in Warthewic et duodecim denarios quos annuatim habere debebant de terra mea de Chorkeby. Sed nec mihi nec Hæredibus meis piscare licebit nec hamo neque reti⁷ nec aliquo modo piscandi inter Munchewat et stagnum molendini Monachorum Nec impedire poterimus prædictos Monachos

⁵ Two bovates in Chorkeby are mentioned in No. 36.

⁶ On these coffins or coops, see No. 2, note 2.

⁷ An early mention of fishing with hook and line in England. The use of the net seems to imply some distance between the millpool and Munchwath.

⁸ These two bovates were granted by his brother Osbert, see No. 35.

huic cartæ sigillum in testimonium apposuit, Waltero Priore de Karleolo, Alexandro de Wyndesore¹⁰, Willelmo de Cressime¹¹, Waltero de Windesore¹², Roberto juvene de certain Churches were granted to them by Robert de Vallibus, Symon being Prior (Register of Lanercost, MS. viii. 9). This must have been very shortly after the Foundation, about 1169. He was also witness to a charter of Ada Engayn to Lanercost about the same date (Regist. Laner. MS. ii. 15). He attested a charter in the Register of Holm Cultram (MS. p. 91); and he granted to that Abbey, where he had chosen to be buried, the Grange of Kirkewinny, using very strong language in regard to any who should fail to carry out his wishes (Reg. Holm Cult. MS. p. 112; Dugdale, Monast. v. 597). He died October 7th, 1186 (Stubbs, Regist. Sacrum Anglicanum, p. 31).

¹⁰ Alexander de Wyndesore, the first of the name who appears in this Register, was together with (probably) his brother Walter, who occurs below, a witness to the Foundation Charter of Lanercost. To that Priory he granted the tithe of the multure of his mill at Little Corkby, to which grant Walter was a witness (Regist. Lanercost, MS. i. 5, i. 16 and ii. 18) and he attested several of the charters in their Register. Osanna, the wife of William son of Odard, was said to have been his daughter; but he was certainly not the Lord of Corkeby (see note 1 on No. 36). A very full account of the family of the Wyndesores is given by Sir G. F. Duckett in Duchetiana (pp. 249sq.); but the connection between these de Wyndesores and Walter Fitz Other, or de Wyndesore, Castellan of Windsor Castle in the time of the Conqueror, is not by any means clearly made out. Little light is thrown by him upon this Alexander beyond what is found in these two Registers. Alexander is mentioned in the incorrect list of the Lords of Corkeby, referred to in note 1 on No. 36, as having land at Fentun in Gillesland, which is very possible, Walter having Farlam. The Alexander in Nos. 210, 217 is another person; but he is not improbably the son of William and grandson of this Alexander. This Alexander became Lord of Morland by marrying Agneta daughter of the first William de Lancastre (see on No. 210).

paid $\frac{1}{2}$ marc for some animals of his taken in the Forest ; and in 1201, William de la Kersuniere owed 5 marcs for having a writ de morte antecessoris concerning a knight's fee in Caterlen against William de Vallibus and Robert his son. These 5 marcs he does not seem to have paid, neither did the manor of Caterlen, in the parish of Newton Reigny, pass out of the family of de Vallibus. John Denton, speaking of Farlam and the two de Wyndesores here mentioned, says "they were both brethren of one William de Kersmier" and speaks of the connection of the latter with Katerleng (Cumberland, p. 137).

¹² Walter de Windesore held Farlam in Gillesland and, besides giving land to the Church of S. Thomas the Martyr in Farlam (Regist. of Lanercost, MS. i. 20 ; ii. 9), he made several grants to the Priory of Lanercost about this period (see MS. iv. 8, 13). He attested the Foundation Charter of Lanercost with his brother Alexander (see note 10) and others of his co-witnesses here. He is witness to numerous charters in that Register; and in 1166 was witness to the charter of William, King of Scots, together with Bishop Christian; also to the grant to Alexander by William de Lancastre; both referred to above. His father's name was William, and he had a brother of the same name. He is said to have gone with King Richard to Normandy in 1195, and to have died shortly after (see Dugdale, Baronage, i. 509; Duchetiana, p. 251). His wife's name was Mabilla, or Mabel, who granted to the Priory of Lanercost one third of two acres of land near Closegill in Farlam; in the grant she speaks of herself as formerly the wife of Walter de Wyndesore, who had given them the land, and John de Wyndesore is a witness (Regist. Lan. MS. iv. 7). Her son Walter confirms the gift of his father Walter of this land in Closegill (MS. ii. 19; iv. 8). He had certainly two sons Walter and John, and a daughter Christiana, who married Duncan de Lasceles. John had lands in Farlam Parva (Regist. Lan. ii. 7, 19 et al. and below No. 133). See more on Walter and Christiana in No. 134.

chiefly for fines and debts due. For non-payment, probably, he was thrown into prison by the King in 1212, but released later, and his whole property given into the hands of his mother Alicia, who with Grecia his sister, Hubert his son, Roland his bastard brother and others, were his sureties (Patent Rolls, 14 Joh. m. 3, Rec. Com. p. 96 a). In 1215, a commutation took place; and the death of King John in the year following made a difference in his affairs. Other points in his life are given by Dugdale, Baronage, i. 525 and Bain Calend. Doc. Scot. i. 83, 94, 120 et al. As connecting him with others about this time, it may be noted, that he was surety in 1207 for Christiana de Wyndesore and her husband, Duncan de Lascelles, for lands in Buckingham (Rotul. de Finibus, ed. Hardy, p. 346). He granted important charters to Wetherhal as Lord of Gillesland (Nos. 192, 193). A Robert de Vall. minor, probably this Robert juvenis, was witness to the F. C. of the Priory of Lanercost. The second Robert of Gillesland occurs in other charters in their Register; among his numerous grants, he bequeathed his body to the Canons of Lanercost "ubicunque et quandocunque ex hac vita migraverim" (Regist. Lan. MS. ii. 4). His wife's name was Johanna; and his son Hubert succeeded him soon after 1233—34, when Robert was Sheriff of Devon (Dugdale), which is the last we hear of him.

¹⁵ Simon de Tyliol, or Tilliol, son of Peter de Tyllol, of Scaleby, who succeeded his father in 1184 (see note 5 on No. 28). We learn from the Pipe Rolls that, though a tenant by cornage, he paid 100s. scutage in 1201; and that he died the same year. He had a son Peter who was a minor at the time, and became a ward of Geoffrey, or Galfrid, de Luci (see note 9 on No. 56). On Simon's death his farm of Holwerri (said to be Huthwaite near Cockermouth) was seized by the Crown, and accounted for by the sheriff for some years. In 1205, this Galfrid de Luci paid 20 marcs and one palfrey for permission to marry the widow of Simon. In the Register of Lanercost (MS. vi. 4, 11) Simon occurs as making a grant of land at Scaleby to the Priory, and as witness with Robert son of Bueth to a grant of Richard junior son of Trute.

¹⁸ Dene, the old form of Dean, near Cockermouth. Thomas was also witness to the Foundation Charter of Lanercost.

¹⁹ Adam was, no doubt, the son of Robert son of Troite (see note 8 on No. 36). He acted as Deputy Sheriff for his father in 1173, and was himself Sheriff of Carlisle in 1174. Hence this charter cannot be earlier than 1175.

39. QUIETA CLAMATIO WILLELMI FILIJ ODARDI DE JURE PRÆSENTATIONIS CAPELLANI DE WARTHWIC.

WILLELMUS filius Odardi omnibus fidelibus tam præsentibus quam futuris salutem. Sciatis me cum consilio et assensu Johannis¹ Hæredis mei et Osannæ uxoris meæ Vallibus would of course be a difficulty, if he were the 2nd Robert, Lord of Gillesland, who was not of age till 1205; but see note 13.

39. ¹ John was the eldest son and heir of William; on the younger son, Robert, see No. 37. John is also called de Warthwic (No. 60), he, apparently, inheriting Warthwic, in connection with which he appears here. His wife's name was Aliva (Nos. 41, 60), and he had a son William who was Lord of Warthewic and often appears in this Register (No. 51 et al.) A list of his descendants is given in the county histories; the two following pedigrees will make the earlier members of the two families of Corkeby and Warthwic more clear:

et aliorum liberorum et amicorum meorum pro salute animæ meæ et Odardi Patris mei et pro salute animæ meæ et filiorum et Parentum meorum quietum clamasse Deo et Sanctis de Wederhale et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus imperpetuum à me et omnibus hæredibus meis quicquid juris clamavi in præsentatione Capellani de Warthewic². Ita ut a modo liceat Priori et Monachis defuncto Capellano suo vel forsitan pro culpa sua amoto ibidem sine me et hæredibus meis Capellanum ponere qui idoneus sit et boni Testimonij. Idem vero Capellanus in eadem villa assidue manere debet ad Divina Officia Deo et Sancto Leonardo³ celebranda. NOTUM sit omnibus videntibus vel audientibus literas has quod Ego Willelmus filius Odardi de Corkebi cum consilio et assensu Johannis Hæredis mei et Osannæ uxoris meæ et ceterorum amicorum concessi et dedi et hac carta mea confirmavi in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam pro salute animæ meæ et Uxoris meæ et pro animabus Patrum et Matrum nostrorum et omnium liberorum nostrorum et Antecessorum Deo et Sancto Constantino de Wederhale et Monachis fratribus meis ibidem Deo servien-tibus totam decimam Pannagij mei de porcis hominum meorum et extraneorum omnium quicumque porcos suos in silva mea de Chorkeby posuerunt pascendos de quibus Pannagium accipere debeo. Hanc vero Elemosinam Ego et Hæredes mei Domini de Wederhale in perpetuum concessimus pro animarum nostrarum salutifera redemptione et pro delictorum nostrorum integra absolutione si in aliquo apud præfatam Domum deliquimus ut omnium Orationum et Beneficiorum quæ in Abbatia Beatæ Mariæ Eboraci in omnibus locis ad eandem Abbatiam pertinentibus fient in eternum participes simus. Hijs Testibus Thoma Officiali¹ et multis alijs.

² On Warthewic Chapel and the right of advowson at a later date see note 4 on No. 5.

41. DE MESSUAGIO TOFTO ET CROFTO IN WARTHEWIC.

NOTUM sit omnibus videntibus vel audientibus literas has quod Ego Johannes filius Willelmi filij Odardi cum consilio et assensu hæredum meorum et Alivæ sponsæ meæ concessi et dedi et hac præsentî carta confirmavi Deo et Sancto Constantino de Wederhale et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam pro salute animæ meæ et Antecessorum meorum masagium unum in Warthwic cum tofto et crofto¹ et cum omnibus

40. ¹ Thomas de Thorp was Official of Carlisle when Peter de Ros was Archdeacon (see Nos. 120, 123). This would be between 1180 and 1192 (see on Peter de Ros No. 31); and this would agree with his connection here with William son of Odard. He was witness to a grant of the Church of S. Kentigern of Grinesdale by Richard de Neuton to Lanercost (Reg. Lanercost, MS. v. 4).

41. ¹ There is another grant of this message with toft and croft by John de Warthwic (No. 60), probably after the death of his father William, who attests this deed. John is here called son of Odard, not yet de Warthwic. Toft, a word of Scandinavian origin, allied to tuft, meaning "a knoll"; and so in Middle English; then "a clearing," "a place for a house"; the Anglo-Saxon croft is "a small enclosed field." "Toft and croft" is a familiar expression in connection with a message, which is from the Low Latin masagium, used here, meaning "a dwelling house."

pertinentijs suis et cum omnibus Aisiamentis cum hominibus meis in eadem Villa manentibus liberum et quietum ab omni terreno servicio et consuetudine et exactione. Illud videlicet Mesuagium quod Ricardus Carucator in eadem Villa de me tenuit. Testibus hijs Willelmo filio Odardi, et multis alijs.

42. CARTA DE OCTAVO PISCE ET ALIJS.

NOTUM sit omnibus legentibus vel audientibus literas has quod Ego Robertus filius Willelmi de Chorkeby¹ cum consilio et assensu hæredum meorum concessi et dedi et hac præsentī carta mea confirmavi et a me et heredibus meis imperpetuum quietum clamavi Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis Sanctique Constantini de Wēderhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam Octavum pisce² quem Ego et Antecessores mei habere solebamus de Coffino Monachorum de Wederhale et totam partem piscationis in Edene quæ ad Villam meam de Chorkeby pertinebat totamque ripam in qua piscaria firmata est ab ipsa piscaria usque ad locum qui dicitur Munchewat et quandam terram quæ vocatur Camera Constantini cum omnibus pertinentijs suis. Et sciendum quod nec mihi nec heredibus meis piscari licebit neque hamo neque reti neque aliquo modo piscandi inter Munchewat et stagnum molendini prædictorum Monachorum nec impedire poterimus prædictos Monachos firmare stagnum suum in ripa de Chorkeby pro libitu et voluntate sicut et ubi sibi melius viderint expedire, Et licebit dictis Monachis imperpetuum capere petram et ramam sufficienter ad prædictum stagnum reparandum in terra de Chorkeby ubi voluerint sine aliquo impedimento mei vel hæredum meorum. Insuper vero confirmavi præfatis Monachis in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam pro salute

Hanc autem Elemosinam Ego et hæredes mei prænominatis Monachis contra omnes gentes imperpetuum warantizabimus. Hijs Testibus Adam de Port³, Simon de Patesh⁴, Godefrido de Insulis⁵, Henrico de North⁶, Henrico filio Hervei⁷, Radulpho Hareng⁸, Roberto de Perci⁹, Alexandro

³ Adam de Port', or de Porta, was a justiciary of the King in 1208, Dec. 1st., together with the seven persons following, who are here so termed (see Fines, sive Pedes Finium, 10 Joh., ed. Hunter, ii. 9, 10). This would seem to fix the date pretty nearly. On these itinerating justices, generally, see Stubbs, Constitutional History, i. 388 sq. Adam had been banished from the country by Henry II. in 1172 for treason (Roger de Hoveden, ed. Stubbs, ii. 41).

⁴ Simon de Pateshill, or Pateshull, was justiciary in 1195 as well as later. He was Sheriff of Northampton in 1196 and until 1203. He was witness to the Confirmation Charter of Richard I. to the Priory of Lanercost for the grant of certain Churches by Robert de Vallibus (Regist. Laner. MS. viii. 1); also to the Charter of Privileges granted by King John, March 26th, 1200, to the borough of Appleby (see on No. 223); also to the Charter of King John, dated March 1st, 1204, restoring forest rights to the Abbey of Whitby (Chart. Whitby, ed. Atkinson, i. 158). In 1212, he was one of those appointed to receive the Castle of Fotheringea, famous in later days, from Earl David on the part of the King (Bain, Calend. Doc. Scot. i. 93). We find him acting as justice so late as 1214 (Pipe Rolls, Cumberland).

⁶ Henry de Northampton, Canon of S. Paul's, London, was justiciary in 1202, and following years.

⁷ Henry son of Herveius, as above, justiciary in 1208. He fixed the tallage in Cumberland in 1197 (E. Foss, Judges of England, ii. 58).

⁹ Robert de Perci, as above, justiciary in 1208; probably a son, not of Alan de Perci, who would be too early, but of Agnes de Perci, de Pointū¹⁰ Justiciarijs Domini Regis, Martino Clerico, Ricardo Vicecomite¹¹, Magistro Adam, Waltero Clerico, et multis alijs¹².

43. CARTA ROBERTI FILIJ W. DE CHORKEBY DE PISCATIONE.

NOTUM sit omnibus legentibus vel audientibus literas has quod Ego Robertus filius W. de Chorkeby cum consilio et assensu hæredum et amicorum concessi et dedi et hac presenti carta mea confirmavi in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam Deo et Beatæ Mariæ et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus totam partem piscationis in Edene quæ ad terram illam pertinebat quæ vocatur Camera Constantini scilicet à loco illo qui dicitur Munchwat sub fonte Sancti Cuthberti¹ daughter and heir of Lord William de Perci and Josceline of Louvaine; see Dugdale, Baronage, i. 270 and note to Chart. of Whitby, ed. Atkinson, ii. 684. He was Sheriff of Yorkshire in 1212.

¹⁰ Alexander de Pointū, or de Pointou, in Fines, as above, justiciary in 1203 and 1208. But he is de Pointona, in the Pipe Rolls, a Sheriff of Lincolnshire, in 2 John. In March 1204—5 he was one of the custodes of the Honor of Richmond (Bain, Calend. Doc. Scot. i. 60).

¹¹ There is no Richard sheriff of Cumberland anywhere near this time.

¹² The date of this charter must be the beginning of the 13th century, and probably 1208.

43. ¹ S. Cuthbert's spring, now called the Holy Well, is in the wood (No. 152, Ordnance Survey Map xxiv. 6) below the mill and weir. The connection with S. Cuthbert is natural in the district; and several Churches are dedicated to him. Ecgfrid, King of Northumbria, and Archbishop Theodore, in 685, granted him "civitatem quæ vocatur Luel, quæ habet in circuitu quindecim milliaria, et in eadem civitate posuit congregationem sanctimonialium, et abbatissam ordinavit, et scholas constituit" (Simeon of Durham, Hist. de S. Cuthberto, § 5, ed. J. Arnold, i. 199, and comp. Hist. Dunelm. Eccles. Lib. i. c. 9 ed. Arnold, i. 32). This and some other parts of Cumbria were then added to his See of Lindisfarne. S. Cuthbert was at Carlisle that same year, and the citizens shewed him there a wonderful spring or well, constructed by the Romans, and at the time Ecgfrid was being defeated usque ad fossatum illud quod fuit juxta domum quæ fuit Eduini et sic tendit in aquam de Edene juxta antiquam sedem molendini. Insuper Ego prædictus Robertus de Chorkeby cum consilio et assensu hæredum et amicorum meorum concessi prædictis Monachis imperpetuum aquam meam et ripam meam de Chorkeby inter præfatas divisas ad piscationem suam utendam sine impedimento mei vel meorum ipsi vero Monachi eadem Aisiamenta in aqua sua et ripa sua mihi et hæredibus meis infra præfatas divisas concesserunt. Cognoscendum autem est quod præfati Monachi nichil juris subtus prædictum fossatum Edwini in piscatione de Edene potuerunt exigere nisi concessu mei vel hæredum meorum. Præterea ita convenit inter nos quod Ego Robertus et mei ex parte nostra in prædicta piscatione inter præfatas divisas non poterimus amplius habere nisi quinque naviculas tantum prædicti vero Monachi et sui ex parte sua in præfata piscatione infra prædictas divisas non poterint amplius habere nisi quinque naviculas tantum. De cætero sciendum est quod nec mihi nec hæredibus meis piscari licebit neque hamo neque rethi neque aliquo modo piscandi inter locum illum qui dicitur Munchwat sub fonte Sancti Cuthberti usque ad stagnum molendini prædictorum Monachorum. Hanc vero Elemosinam ego Robertus et Hæredes mei præfatis Monachis contra omnes gentes warantizabimus. Hijs Testibus Roberto de Nuers tunc Vicecomite², Gilberto de terribus³, and slain by the Picts on Nechtansmere (see Bede, Vita S. Cuthberti, c. 45, and Simeon, Hist. Dunelm., l.c.). Bede states that he was again at Carlisle (Lugubalia) in 687 where he was visited by his friend Herebert, the anchorite of Derwentwater (Bede, Hist. Eccles. iv. 29, and Vita S. Cuthberti, c. 48).

² Robert de Nuers is not in the ordinary lists of Sheriffs of Cumberland, either as Sheriff or Deputy. His name occurs again with some of the same witnesses in No. 139; while in Nos. 152—4, we have Robert de Miers, or Mihers, Sheriff of Carlisle, with some of the same co-witnesses, where it would seem that evidently Mihers is an error, forestario, Adam filio Vicecomitis, Anselmo de Dreng, Radulpho de feritate⁴, Gilberto fratre ejus, Adam de Aspatic⁵, Alexandro filio Radulphi, Willelmo filio Golci et multis alijs⁶.

and an easy one, for Nuers; and Nuers is a name that occurs at this period. We see below he had a son, Adam.

³ Gilbert de terribus should be de turribus as in Nos. 139, 152, 153; called here and in No. 139 "the Forester."

⁴ Radulph de Feritate, or de Ferte, or de la Ferte, "of the waste"; there seem to have been more than one of this name at this period. One appears in the Pipe Rolls for Carlisle as early as 1158. Radulph occurs in Nos. 52 and 126, which are about contemporary with the present charter; also in Nos. 63, 137, 187, the dates of which must be between 1223 and 1247. The first named is probably the same as the one who witnessed the Foundation Charter of Lanercost about 1169; and who made two grants to that Priory, one relating to some salt pits given by Ada Engayne who was wife to Robert de Vallibus, the other to some land at Beamund, and a free net in the Eden and, with the men of Brunescayd (Brunskeugh) in the Eden and Esk (Regist. Lanercost, MS. vii. 13, 14); the former charter, Radulph juvenis attests. This agrees with the statement of John Denton, that this family were lords of the manor of Bowness on Solway, and that the family name was le Brun, the first grantee being Gamel le Brun. Their other name arose from the wild wastes near which they lived. Radulph and his brother Gilbert, who is a witness here, are also co-witnesses to a grant of Odard son of Adam to the Priory of Lanercost, which is attested by Bishop Bernard (Regist. Lanercost, MS. xiv. 21). This Odard son of Adam appears in the Pipe Rolls for Cumberland in 1201 and died in 1208 (see note 5 on No. 72). Gilbert is also a witness to the confirmation by the Chapter of Carlisle of the charter given about the same time by Bishop Bernard to the Priory of Lanercost (Regist. Lanercost, MS. viii. 3, 4). Radulph juvenis, mentioned above, appears as the son of this Radulph in No. 52, and in the Regist. of Lanercost (MS. v. 20; vii. 17) with Alan de Caldebec, sheriff (in 1204 and 1215—16); he is probably the Radulph of the later charters of this Register. We find Gilbert mentioned in 1212 and the later Radulph in 1225 and 1226 in Calend. Doc. Scot. (ed. Bain, i. 89, 165) also the latter in the Charter of Henry III. granted to the City of Carlisle Sept. 29th, 1221 (Royal Charters of Carlisle, p. 2) and in Chart. of Gyseburne (ed. Brown, ii. 320) on Sept. 30th, 1231.

⁵ From the co-witnesses, this will be the same as the Adam

44. DE CAPELLA DE CORKEBY.

CLEMENS Abbas Eboracensis¹ dilecto amico suo Roberto Archidiacono Karliolensi et omnibus filijs Sanctæ Ecclesiæ in Domino Salutem. Nullus Presbiter nisi proprius Capellanus vel Monachus Prioris de Wederhal ibi Missam celebrabit. Clavem³ ipsius Capellæ Prior semper habebit nec aliquis de Aspatric, dean of Allerdale, who attests a charter of Bishop Bernard, and the confirmation of it by the Chapter of Carlisle, granted to Lanercost (Register of Lanercost, MS. viii. 3, 4), and is probably the same as Adam, dean of Allerdale in No. 31, whose date is before 1192; but can hardly be the same as A. de Espatric, dean of Cumberland, in No. 30 or A. de Aspatric, Dean, in No. 151, which are both about the time of Bishop Hugh 1219—23. He is also witness to a deed of Alice de Rumeli to the Priory of Gysburne in 1210—14 (Cart. Gysb. ed. Brown, ii. 319).

44. ¹ Clement was the fifth Abbot of St Mary's at York, from 1161 to August 1184 (Dugdale, Monast. vi. 538).

² Showing that the inhabitants of Corkeby were parishioners of Wederhale.

homo vel fæmina intrabit in eam nisi licentia et voluntate Prioris de Wederhal. Prædicti vero Willelmus et uxor ejus cum omni familia sua in præcipuis Festivitatibus scilicet in Natale Domini in Purificatione Pascha et Pentecoste in Trinitate et in Assumptione Beatæ Mariæ ad Ecclesiam de Wederhale venient cum oblatione sua ad Divinum Officium audiendum. Si vero propter intemperiem aeris nullo modo ad Matricem Ecclesiam venire poterint aliquo horum dierum tunc eodem die sine omni occasione mittant Priori XIII denarios ad minus pro oblatione sua. Si autem Prior aliqua necessitate præventus aliquo horum duorum dierum vel harum Festivitatum Missam ibi celebrari non fecerit prædictus Willelmus nullam inde causam suscitandi litem adversus Priorem habebit. In Festo quoque Sancti Jacobi faciet Prior ibi Missam celebrari. Quando vero alibi manserint interim cessabit omnino prædicta Capella. Illud vero sciendum est quod quando hoc servicium concessimus præfato Willelmo tunc ipse concessit nobis in perpetuam Elemosinam quam antea nobis detinuerat totam decimam de molendino suo ubicunque firmatum fuerit vel in territorio de Warthwic vel in territorio de Chorkeby. Si autem Willelmus vel aliquis suorum contra istud scriptum aliquid facere præsumpserit tunc prædicta Capella omnino cessabit. Willelmus vero et uxor ejus et filij ejus et amici sui coram multis Clericis et Laicis tactis Sacrosanctis juraverunt se inviolabiliter istud observaturos nec aliquid adquisituros contra hoc sine voluntate nostra. Et ut hoc inviolabile permaneat prædictus Willelmus sigillum suum cum sigillo Archidiaconi⁴ et Capituli Beatæ Mariæ Karlioli et Roberti

⁴ The See was vacant at this time (see on Bishop Bernard, Appendix D) hence the Archdeacon is addressed by Abbot Clement, and he may have been custodian of the See. The seal of the Archdeacon of Carlisle used at present is an ancient seal which has been handed down from an unknown past. It is oval and represents de Ros⁵ huic scripto apposit. Testibus hijs, Waltero the Blessed Virgin and Child with St Peter bearing the keys and has the legend :

CVSTODIS : SP'ALITATIS : KARLIL : DIOC' : SEDE : VACANTE

It may well have belonged to the long period when the See was vacant before Bishop Bernard (1204) and when we know that three Archdeacons at least were custodians of the See—Peter de Ros, Aumeric de Taillebois and Alexander de Lucy. There is a poor copy of the seal given in the Transactions of the Cumb. Archeol. Society (vol. viii. p. 167) and the suggestion is made that it belonged to William de Ayrmyne, Canon of York, and that he was custodian of the See. But this is an error. The said William was entrusted with the “spiritualities and temporalities” as Bishop not as custodian. He was elected in January 1325 (Bishop Halton having died in November 1324), was confirmed and received the temporalities. Pope John XXII. nullified the election, and he resigned formally in April. Soon after he became Bishop of Norwich. Another error appears in a note to the same article, where it is said “the Bishop of Carlisle is his own Archdeacon.” This by Act of Parliament is the case in the Diocese of Chester, which formerly embraced the southern part of the Diocese of Carlisle, but the Archdeacon of Carlisle has always had a separate jurisdiction; see my Visitations in the Ancient Diocese of Carlisle, p. 29—32.

⁵ There are three persons of the name of Robert de Ros, or Roos, who come within the range of this Register. The first was the son of Peter de Ros, a benefactor of St Mary's Abbey, and Adelina, sister and coheir of Walter Espec, founder of Rievaulx Abbey (Dugdale, Baronage, i. 545, Cart. Rievaulx, ed. Atkinson p. 359). He had livery of his father's lands in 1157; and he died before 1165 when his son Everard was in possession. Everard, who married Rose Trusbut of Wartre, died before 1185—86, leaving a son, the second Robert, who was then 13 years of age. This second Robert got livery of his father's lands in 1190—91 (Dugdale) and we find him in the Pipe Rolls as Sheriff of Cumberland in 1215; in 1216 he was governor of Carlisle Castle, and he had seisin given him in 1218 by Henry III. of the manors of Soureby, Hupbritesby and Karletone till he should recover his lands in Normandy. He married Isabel, daughter of William the Lion of Scotland, and had two sons, William and Robert. Having founded the Castles of Hamlake (Helmsley) in Yorkshire and Werke in Northumberland, he gave by charter the latter to his son the third Robert, who is generally known as Robert of Werke (see the charter in Calend. Doc. Scot. ed. Bain i. 177). The second Robert is often distinguished as Robert of Hamlake; he died in 1226—27. Robert of Werke was justice itinerant in 1235 (see the note on No. 92); he held the manor of Penrith in 1237, and was concerned in the many changes made about the Cumberland manors in relation to Alexander, King of Scotland (see note 9 on No. 14 and the refs. s. v. in the Index vol. i. ed. Bain, Calend. Doc. Scot.) He was chief Justiciar of the King's Forests ultra Trent. He married Isabella de Albin, and we hear of him as late as 1272, engaged in a plea with his brother William de Ros. In this charter, it must be the first Robert de Ros.

⁷ Israel was chamberlain to Robert de Vallibus. In two grants to the Priory of Lanercost (Register, MS. iv. 21, 22) of land in Cumqueneath, he calls him "Dominus meus." He attested the Foundation Charter of Lanercost (MS. i. 1) and several others in that Register. John was also chamberlain; see Regist. Lan. MS. i. 1, 3, where he is co-witness with Israel, Camerarius.

sens scriptum pervenerit Robertus filius Willelmi filij Odardi de Chorkeby æternam in Domino salutem. Noverit universitas vestra quod Ego ratam et gratam habeo pactionem et compositionem quam Pater meus fecit cum Abbate et Conventu Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Monachis de Wederhale super cantaria Capellæ de Chorkeby Ita scilicet quod Ego præsentī scripto obligo me et hæredes meos imperpetuum ad observationem prædictæ pactionis et compositionis sicut scriptum inter prædictas partes confectum et utrinque sigillis munitum plenius in se continet. Quod tamen si aliquo casu processu temporis factum fuerit auctoritate istius scripti irritum et inane sit. Ego autem hæc omnia prædicta fideliter tenenda et observanda imperpetuum pro me et hæredibus meis tactis Sacrosanctis juravi, et eosdem tam præsentī scripto quam dicto juramento pro me et ipsis præstito ad perpetuitatem observationis obligavi et insuper præsentī scripto sigillum meum opposui. ² Alan, another son of William son of Odard, see note 2 on No. 37.

³ Porter of the Priory at Wederhal, as in No. 84, where he makes a grant of land; he is frequently a witness.

⁵ From the witnesses, the date is about that of No. 99, which is 1223—29.

William de Corkeby, and brother to this Robert son of William, who occurs in No. 45, and No. 37. John Denton says that he was Lord of Langthwait (Cumberland, p. 133, but as usual without authority); a charter referred to on No. 47 speaks of the grant of a moiety of Langthwaite in Corkby (see note 5 there). He made a grant of his body and of land in Warthwic to the Priory; see No. 57.

⁹ Robert de Hamton may be the first sheriff of this name who appears often in this Register, see note 4 on No. 54.

¹⁰ Adam Armstrang, called of Ulvesby (Ousby) in No. 183 (W. de Daker being Sheriff, 1236—47); he attests No. 144, which is dated 1247.

47. ¹ These 4 acres in Corkeby were evidently of importance and are the subject of the deeds Nos. 50, 53.

⁴ Thomas de Molton, or Moletona, or Multon, or Maleton, was one of several of this name in this 13th century. According to Dugdale (Baronage, i. 567) Thomas de Multon came from Lincolnshire, and in 1208 was Sheriff of that county. He married Ada, the widow of Richard de Luci, in the second year of Henry III. (1217—18) and that year got seisin of all her lands and of Richard's in Cumberland and Westmoreland (Patent Rolls, 2 Hen. III. p. 1, m. 2). Ada was the daughter and coheir (with Johanna her sister) of Hugo de Morville (see the note on No. 101). Richard de Luci died in 1215 or shortly before (Pipe Rolls for Cumb. 16 Joh.) leaving two daughters, Amabilis, or Amabel and Alicia; that same year Thomas de Multon had obtained the wardship of these two daughters and coheirs of de Luci by the payment of 1000 marks, and then married them respectively to his two sons by a former marriage, Lambert and Alan de Multon. He was a witness to the great Charter of Liberties of Henry III. in 1225 (Stubbs, Select Charters, p. 354). He paid a fine of 5 marcs in 1227 for a confirmation of King John's charter to Richard and Ada de Lucy of the Forest of Cumberland and for a charter of a fishery to be made in the forest of Englewode on the banks of the Eden but not to injure the neighbouring fishery of the city of Carlisle (Fine Rolls, 11 Hen. III. m. 9, ed. C. Roberts, i. 155). In 1233, he was Sheriff of Cumberland, and had charge of the Castle of Carlisle. He is the Thomas Maleton mentioned with his wife Ada in No. 174 dated Sept. 9th, 1227, also in No. 105. He made an agreement with the Abbey of Holm Cultram concerning pasture and a fishery in the river Eden (Register Holm Cult., MS. p. 5; Dugdale, Monast. v. 608). By his second wife, Ada, he had a son Thomas, who succeeded him, and who had livery of his lands when he died in 1240 (Pipe Rolls, Cumberland, 25 Hen. III.). This second Thomas de Multon married Matilda de Vallibus, daughter and heir of the second Hubert de Vallibus, and thus came in for half Alano de Lascel⁵, Roberto de Vaus⁶, Ricardo de Castle of the Morville property, through his mother Ada, and for Gillesland and other possessions through his wife. Hence, he is often called "Thomas de Multon of Gillesland," to distinguish him from others of the name. He and his wife appear in a charter in 1253 (Dugdale). Like his father, he was keeper of Inglewood forest. He appears with his father and Alan his brother in No. 105, and is witness to the deed No. 145 (1262—65). He confirmed a grant of pasture in Laysingby made by his grandfather to the Abbey of Holm Cultram (Regist. H. C. MS. p. 22), wrongly ascribed to the father by Nicolson and Burn (Hist. ii. 74). He made important grants to the Priory of Lanercost (see Regist. Lanercost, MS. ix. 1 ; x. 6), was a party with his wife to agreements with that Priory in 1255 and 1256 (MS. ix. 4, 12) and with Alan de Maleton was witness to a charter dated 1252 (MS. xii. 22). He died in 1271, leaving a son Thomas (the third) who had livery of the lands which his father had in his own right the same year. The widow Matilda lived until 1293 (see the note on No. 194). This third Thomas became heir to all the de Morville property in 1272 (see Dugdale, Baronage, i. 468) in consequence of the failure of the issue of Johanna Gernon, sister of his grandmother Ada (see the note on No. 103) and came into possession in 1274. He died in 1293 leaving a son Thomas who died in 1295 (Inquis. p. m. 21 & 23 Edw. I. Nos. 36 and 62; Calend. Geneal. ed. Roberts, ii. 461, 506) and a fifth Thomas came into possession. In this charter, Thomas de Molton is the second of the name.

The following pedigree will make the relationships more clear :

tion Charter of Earl Henry to Holm Cultram in 1150 (for whom see on Gerald de Lascels, No. 112) but most probably one who married Isabella, daughter and heir of Robert son of William de Corkeby (note 1, No. 37). Her first husband was Roald son of Alan (de Richemund, see the note on No. 192). With him she confirmed in 1252 the agreement with the Priory of Lanercost of wood and pasture between Torcrossoc and Cumquenecach made by Robert son of William, her father (Regist. Laner. MS. vii. 8; xii. 22). In the Coram Rege Rolls for 1266 (50 Hen. III. No. 126, m. 8 d.) we find her with her husband Alan de Lascelles and reference made to Roald fitz Alan the first husband of Isabella. In 1265, she had with her husband Alan de Lascels paid a fine of $\frac{1}{2}$ marc for a judicial writ (Fine Rolls, 49 Hen. III. m. 8, ed. C. Roberts, ii. 420). Alan de Lascels is called "knight" in No. 77; and he would seem to have died before 1284; for in a deed cited in the incorrect list of Lords of Corkby written out by Lord Wm. Howard (see Hutchinson, History Cumb. i. 171) Isabella, relict of Alan de Lascelles and Domina de Corkby makes a grant in 12 Edward I. to her relative John son of Robert (de Warthwic). In Milbourne's copy of John Denton's MS. Cumberland (ed. R. S. Ferguson, p. 162) there is a confirmation granted in 1284 by Isabella, relict of Roald son of Alan (her first husband) of the moiety of Langtwaite in Corkby to William de Corkby.

Illud vero sciendum est quod octavum piscem quem solebam habere de Coffino Monachorum retinui in manu mea sicut antea de Tyllol, whom he succeeded in 1295 at the age of 30 (Fine Rolls, 23 Edw. I. m. 14; Calend. Genealog. ed. C. Roberts, ii. 495); and Geoffrey was the son of the second Peter de Tillol son of Simon (see note 15 on No. 38, and note 9, No. 56), and Robert died in 1319—20. But the Robert of this charter occurs with Galfrid in No. 194, dated 1271, where he is called "seneschal of Gillesland"; he appears with Geoffrey son of Peter de Tylylol in the Patent Rolls in 1261, and again in 1266 with Geoffrey de Tillol and Richard de Castlecairoc (see Calend. Doc. Scot. ed. Bain, i. 442, 476). Also in the Register of Lanercost (MS. x. 14; xv. 18) he is in 1259 and in 1278 a witness with Geoffrey, and in 1285 a witness with Robert de Warthwic (MS. xiii. 11).

¹⁰ John de Denton is co-witness to No. 194, with many of those who attest this deed, in 1271; but see on No. 125.

48. ¹ This deed is similar to the more formal quitclaim No. 38 so far as the fishery is concerned.

⁴ This is an error for Radulf de la ferte or de la feritate ; see note 4 on No. 43.

⁶ Adam de Brunfeld was the son of Thomas de Brunfeld before mentioned, see note 7 on No. 17.

³ Soreby, or Saureby (Sowerby) in Cumberland was called later Castle Sowerby, and adjoined the parish of Caldbec. The name is derived from saure (old Norse söggr) "wet," "swampy," with the Danish termination by "a dwelling," and is naturally a not uncommon name in the district. It was one of the six manors mentioned in the note on Scotby in No. 14 as allotted to Alexander of Scotland. Despite the retention of the advowsons by Henry III., John Balliol on April 20th, 1294, as appears from Bishop Halton's Register (MS. p. 4), presented William de Londors to the Church of Soureby; and in June of the same year Anthony Beck, Bishop of Durham, presented John de Langeton, Chancellor of England, these manors having then passed into his hand. On the petition of the Prior and Convent of Carlisle, the Church was given to them by Edward I. on April 5th, 1307 (Patent Rolls, 35 Edw. I. m. 17) and the Dean and Chapter still hold the advowson. The same month and year, the tithes were appropriated by Bishop Halton to the Convent for the repair of the Cathedral after the great fire of 1292, on the condition that a Canon Regular of the House held the Vicarage (Register Bp Halton, MS. p. 105). The manor of Soureby, together with the manors of Karleton and Hupbritesby (Upperby), was given by King John in 1214 to Robert de Ros of Werk, till he should recover the lands he had lost in Normandy when in the King's service (Patent Rolls, 16 Joh., m. 7, n. 37). In the transactions with the King of Scotland regarding the Cumberland manors, Robert de Ros junior got part of the manor of Penrith in exchange for the three manors mentioned above; see Pipe Rolls, 22 Hen. III. Rot. 4, 9, also Patent Rolls, 22 Hen. III. m. 6. The King undertook to give Robert an exchange of equal value, if Penrith were assigned to the King of Scotland, which took place. In 1257, Soureby was assigned by Alexander II., King of Scotland, to his consort, Queen Margaret, for her chamber (ad cameram suam) (Patent Rolls, 41 Hen. III. m. 11, Record Com. p. 29).

been founded here by the Priory of Carlisle in the time of Radulph Engain, and soon after the Church, and therefore not long before this date, about 1175 ; but the charter of Henry II. shews they were granted, with all appertaining, by Gospatric son of Orm. The advowson was afterwards granted to Bishop Walter Malclerk by the Priory. There is an Alan Persona de Caldebec witness to a grant of William de Fortibus, 2d Earl of Albemarle who died in 1241, to the Priory of S. Bees (Dugdale, Monast. iii. 578), but he is of later date than the present.

⁵ The date is probably a little later than that of No. 38, and about 1175.

50. ¹ This is the same land as in No. 47. It is here granted by Robert de Corkeby to John son of William, the father of Hawisia, who was wife of William Sutor, and they granted the land to the Church of Wederhale. It is again referred to in No. 53.

⁴ The brother, or more probably the nephew, of the elder Walter de Windeshore, see note 12 on No. 38 and the reff. there. He is co-witness with his brother Walter and this Robert son of William to charters in the Register of Lanercost (MS. iii. 7, 12) and is co-witness to other charters with Robert son of William alone (MS. iv. 11; v. 18; vi. 28). He is not the same with the William de Wyndesoure and his son William who appear in Nos. 203, 220. There seem to have been many of the name.

⁵ This may be Robert de Leversdale, see No. 46.

⁶ The brother of this Robert and the same as Alan de Langethwaite (see on No. 37 and compare the names in Nos. 51, 52).

⁷ From No. 138 we learn that Anselm de Neuby (see note 16 on No. 38) was the father of Richard. For the land in Neuby granted by Richard to the Priory of Wederhal, with consent of his wife Emma, see No. 139. He is witness, with this Robert son of William, in the Register of Lanercost (MS. iv. 11) and to several other charters there.

¹⁰ Probably Elias son of Werri de Aguillonebi, who attests the next charter; Werri was the brother of Laurence Agelun, who is a witness here (note 3, No. 37).

51. CARTA ROBERTI FILII WILLELMI DE CORKEBY DE TERRA CUM UNO TOFTO IN CONSTANTINECLENE.

OMNIBUS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs præsentis literas visuris vel audituris Robertus filius Willelmi de Corkebi Salutem in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra me Divinæ pietatis intuitu pro salute animæ meæ et Antecessorum meorum et successorum concessisse et dedisse et hac præsentis carta mea confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus totam terram illam cum tofto uno in Constantinclene¹ quam Robertus filius Gerardij² de me aliquando tenuit cum servicio ipsius Roberti et hæredum suorum cum omnibus pertinentijs suis et aisiamentis et libertatibus ad prædictam terram pertinentibus in pratis et pascuis in moris et mariscis in aquis et ripis in bosco et plano in vijs et semitis et exitibus infra Villam et extra in puram et perpetuam et liberam Elemosinam Tenendam et possidendam in perpetuum liberam et solutam et quietam ab omni seculari servicio consuetudine et exactione. Et sciendum quod Ego Robertus et hæredes mei hanc prædictam terram cum omnibus pertinentijs suis sicut supradictum est contra omnes homines prædictis Monachis in perpetuum warantizabimus. Et ut hæc mea donatio et concessio firma et stabilis in perpetuum perseveret præsentis scripto sigillum meum apposui in Testimonium. 52. CARTA ROBERTI FILII WILLELMI DE DIMIDIA CARUCATA TERRÆ IN VILLA DE WARTHVIC.

SCIANT omnes tam præsentēs quam futuri quod Ego Robertus filius Willelmi dedi et concessi et præsentī carta mea confirmavi Alano fratri meo dimidiam carucatam terræ in Villa de Warthwic scilicet illam dimidiam carucatam terræ quam Hugo de Waltervill¹ tenuit de Patre meo Tenendam et habendam de me et hæredibus meis sibi et hæredibus suis in feodo et hæreditate reddendo mihi et hæredibus meis annuatim unam libram cimini² vel tres denarios ad nundinas Karlioli pro omni servicio. ⁵ The same as Laurence Agelun (No. 50) or son of Aguyllun (No. 37). Elias was his nephew.

⁷ The date will be later than the preceding charter, as William the nephew of Robert de Corkeby and son of John de Warthwic is a witness here.

52. ¹ Hugo de Wautervilla witnesses one of the deeds of Robert's father, William, No. 55.

53. QUIETA CLAMATIO CHRISTIANÆ FILIÆ RANULPHI DE QUATUOR ACRIS TERRÆ IN FEODO DE CORKEBY.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus hoc scriptum visuris vel audituris Christiana filia Ranulphi¹ Salutem in Domino sempiternam. Noverit universitas vestra me in libera potestate mea et in ligia viduitate mea concessisse et quietum clamasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis de Wederhale et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus de me et hæredibus meis vel meis assignatis totum jus et clamium quod habui vel aliquo modo habere potui in quatuor acris terræ² cum pertinentijs in feodo de Korkebi quas Willelmus Tussezemer³ dedit in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam domui de Wederhale et dictis Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus scilicet toftum et croftum quod Odardus tenuit et dimidiam acram proximam terræ Werrici in parte occidentali et tres acras ultra viam unam quam Reginaldus molendinarius tenuit et duas acras juxta terram Joseph in parte orientali. Ita quod nec Ego Christiana nec hæredes mei nec aliquis ex parte mea aliquod jus vel clamium de cætero in prædicta terra aliquo modo exigere vel vindicare poterit. In cujus rei testimonium præsentī scripto sigillum meum apposui. Hijs Testibus, Roberto de Warthwic, Roberto de Castlecairoc, Willelmo de Warthwic⁴, Hugone de Talkan⁵, Johanne

53. ¹ This is Ranulph, a fourth son of William son of Odard of Corkeby, see Nos. 55, 149, where he is mentioned with the eldest son John; he may have died before his father and Robert have taken his place. Christiana would therefore be of the same generation as William de Warthwic who is a witness here.

54. CARTA ROBERTI FILII WILLEMI DE CORKEBY DE QUADAM PORTIONE TERRÆ AD FACIENDAM GRANGIAM.

UNIVERSIS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam præsens scriptum pervenerit Robertus filius Willelmi de Corkeby salutem. Noverit universitas vestra me pro salute animæ meæ et Aliciæ de Lascels uxoris meæ necnon pro salute animarum Predecessorum et successorum meorum dedisse et præsentī carta confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhale et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus quandam portionem terræ in Villa de Korkebi juxta curiam meam ad faciendam ibi grangiam et ad includendum ad curiam faciendam ad commodum suum. Quæ porcio se extendit in latitudinem a semita quæ ducit de Korkebi ad aquam de Edene usque ad sepem curiæ meæ Et in longitudine a dicta sepi usque ad quandam fraxinum quæ stat extra curiam meam juxta angulum sepis et a prædicta fraxino lineariter ex obliquo usque ad finem fossati quod est juxta prædictam semitam quæ ducit de Korkeby ad Edene Habendam et tenendam in perpetuum in liberam et puram et perpetuam Elemosinam cum omni libertate introitus et exitus ad dictam grangiam et curiam. Ego vero R. et hæredes mei hanc Elemosinam prædictis Monachis warantizabimus in perpetuum. Et ut hæc mea donatio perpetuæ firmitatis robur optineat Ego præsens scriptum sigilli mei impressione corroboravi. Hijs Testibus Bartholomeo Priore Karlioli, Magistro G.

⁶ John Brið de Corkeby is also witness to No. 145 with Eustace de Baliol, sheriff from 1262 to 1265.

Archidiacono¹, Magistro T. Werri Officiali², Symone³ et Waltero Decanis de Karliolo et Cumberlandia, R. de Hamtun Vicecomite Karlioli⁴, Richardo de Levington⁵

54. ¹ Gervase de Louthur, Archdeacon of Carlisle: he appears first as plain Magister in No. 21 (see note 3 there) and as Official of Carlisle in No. 46 et al.

³ Symon, dean of Carlisle, is witness to a deed in the Register of Lanercost (MS. xii. 18) with Robert Sheriff (de Ros 1215—16), Magister G. de Louthur and Magister T. Werri.

⁴ Robert de Hamtun. One Robert de Hamptone was Sheriff of Cumberland in 1275—77; and Robert son of William de Hamptone was Custos for Bishop Walter Malclerk in 1223—1229. These would seem not to have been the same, and the interval between them is long. It is the earlier Robert who is to be taken here, as Prior Bartholomew died in 1231 (see on No. 20). Nicolson and Burn (History, i. 548) say that Robert de Hampton married Margory, a daughter of Adam de Levington, and therefore sister of Richard de Levington the co-witness here. A Robert appears as juror in an Inquisition ad quod damnum in 1268, and is mentioned in another in 1272 as the son and heir of Margory de Hampton (Calend. Doc. Scot. ed. Bain, i. 492, 548). This must be the later Robert. He appears as sheriff in an Inquisition in 1276; and in 1277 he was dead, leaving a widow also called Margory (see Bain, ii. 18, 24, 28). The earlier Robert also occurs in this Register as Robert son of William, sheriff (No. 75 et al.). He is a witness with William de Daker, sheriff (1236—47) in the Register of Lanercost (MS. vii. 7). In Testa de Nevill (p. 379) Robert de Hampton holds the forest haye of Plumpton.

linton; his brother William is there mentioned, and he is named Adam the son of Adam the son of Richer, or Richard. This agrees with a plea in the Coram Rege Rolls (11 Hen. III. No. 27, m. 4; Calend. Doc. Scot. i. 176) in May, 1227, concerning the boundaries between the lands of Richard de Levinton and Peter de Tyllol, where Adam is called Richard's father, and Richer, seized of the property in the time of Henry II., "the father of Adam." This Richard is witness to several charters in the Register of Lanercost, perhaps, the most important, one of Roland de Vallibus (MS. ii. 21), other witnesses being Bishop Walter, William (Rundel) Prior of Wederhal and Peter de Tyllol and one (MS. xiv. 8) where William de Daker, sheriff (1236—47) is witness. In June, 1250, on the death of this Richard, Ranulph, his brother and heir, gave security for £100 for livery of his lands; Richard left a widow Sara and six sisters who had portions (see reff. Fine Rolls, ed. Roberts, ii. 80; Inquis. post mort. 34 Hen. III. No. 47; 28 Edw. I. No. 18). On the Barony of Levington, see No. 48, note 3; this Richard held it in the time of Henry III. as is shewn in Testa de Nevill (p. 379). Ranulph's daughter, Helwysa, married Eustace de Balliol, see on Nos. 145, 103.

55. CARTA WILLELMI FILII UDARDI DE UNA BOVATA TERRÆ IN VILLA DE WARTHWIC.

WILLIELMUS filius Udardi omnibus hominibus et amicis suis tam præsentibus quam futuris Salutem. Sciatis me consilio et assensu Johannis hæredis mei et Osannæ uxoris meæ dedisse et concessisse et hac carta confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhal et Monachis ejusdem loci et Capellæ Sancti Leonardi de Warthwic unam bovata¹ terræ in eadem Villa de Warthwic scilicet quinque acras in Westcroft et duas acras in Graistanflat et unam acram juxta holm cum prato ad prædictam terram pertinente Tenendam et habendam in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam cum communi pastura et omnibus aisiamentis ejusdem Villæ. Dedi etiam dictis Monachis totam decimam pannagij mei et molendini mei ubicunque fuerit situm in terra mea. Insuper autem remisi et quietum clamavi imperpetuum de me et hæredibus meis dictæ Domui totum jus et clamium quod habui in marisco qui jacet inter terram de Wederhal

¹⁰ John, son of William who is Clerk of Wederhal in No. 51.

¹¹ From the Sheriff, or Custos, R. de Hamtun, the date of the charter is between 1223—1229; this agrees with the witness Prior Bartholomew, who died in 1231, and with others such as G. Archdeacon and Richard de Levington.

55. ¹ A bovate of land is here equal to 8 acres; in No. 138 it is half of 15½ acres. The bovate, or oxgang, was supposed to be as much land as an ox could till annually. There has been much discussion as to the value of the carucate, or plough's worth, of land. It would seem in this district to be equal to 8 bovates, which is the general rule; although at times elsewhere it is equal to 4 bovates. In the Register of Lanercost (MS. ii. 8; xiii. 6) the carucate is twice defined "unam carucatam terræ, scilicet sexaginta quatuor acras terræ." We may therefore take the carucate in this Register (No. 14 et al.) as equal to eight bovates, i.e. in one case 64 acres, in the other 62 acres. On this subject, see Domesday Book, de Gray Birch, p. 217; F. Seebohm, Village Communities, p. 62; J. H. Round, Feudal England, p. 35. At a later period we have the bovate in Wetheihal

⁴ Gervase de Louth, Archdeacon, see note 3 on No. 21.

⁷ That is, the rural Chapter of Carlisle. The meetings of these rural Chapters were held, generally every quarter, under the presidency at first of the rural dean, but soon under that of the Archdeacon. The Chapter was a consultative body, and discussed the more difficult business brought forward. These Chapters, or meetings of Chapters, fell into disuse before the Reformation. In the early Registers of the Bishops of Carlisle, in the 13th and 14th centuries, there are numerous instances of the Rural Deans executing the orders of the judicial courts, collecting the fines, and getting in the taxes imposed on the clergy by the Crown. See Gibson, Codex Juris Eccles. p. 1012, quoting Lyndwood's Provinciale.

⁸ Thomas son of John was Sheriff of Cumberland, rather Custos, or pro-Vicecomes for Bishop Walter, in 1230 and 1231; and Custos in 1214. This is no doubt the same as Thomas son of John, who in No. 201 is called "sheriff of Westmoreland" with Richard Brun, "sheriff of Cumberland"; the latter was probably Custos for Bishop Walter 1234—36 (see on No. 97). John de Veteriponte was sheriff of Westmoreland from 1227 to 1241, the office having been granted to Robert de Veteriponte and his heirs for ever by King John in October 1203 (see on No. 204 and Nicolson and Burn, History, i. 267 n.). It does not appear that John de Veteriponte had a son Thomas; and in a charter of his to the men of Kirbythore (Nicolson and Burn, i. 24) Thomas son of John, one of the witnesses, is spoken of as nunc vicecomite meo, not filio meo. In No. 201, therefore, Thomas son of John is Custos for John de Veteriponte. He was one of the justices itinerant in 1235 (see No. 92) when they decided a curious case between Thomas de Lascelles and Gilbert, Abbot of Holm Cultram (Pedes Finium, 19 Hen. III. No. 22; compare Dugdale, Monast. v. 606). He was appointed a justice for special purposes on several occasions (as in 1228): in 1225, he was one of the collectors of the "Fifteenths" in Cumberland and Westmoreland (see Stubbs, Select Charters, p. 355; Close Rolls, Record Com. i. 245; iii. 147; Testa de Nevill, p. 378 a); in the Register of Lanercost, he attests a deed as sheriff of Carlisle (MS. ii. 19), and another as sheriff of Cumberland (vii. 9).

⁹ This is the son of Simon and grandson of the first Peter de Tillel (see note 5 on No. 28). This second Peter was a minor at the time of his father's death in 1201 (see note 15 on No. 38). In 1227, he was engaged in a suit with Richard de Levinton concerning the boundaries of their lands (see note 5 on No. 54). He was one of the special justices with Thomas son of John appointed in 1236. He died in 1246, and we learn that his widow's name was Maria de Tilliol from the order that

These lands are set out in the Inquisitio post mort. dated Dec. 5, 1246, which also states that his heir and son Galfrid was 16 in the first day of Lent in that year (31 Hen. III. m. 46, and comp. Calend. Geneal. ed. Roberts, i. 18). From the sheriff, the date of this charter is 1230 or 1231; evidently from the subject, a little later than No. 54.

57. ¹ See on Alan de Langethwaite in No. 46, note 7; this gift of his body to the Priory is noteworthy.

² Langewait, or Langethwaite, was in Corkby, see No. 47, note 5; not improbably this was the adjoining manor of Little Corkby in the parish of Hayton; a property called at the present day Longthwaite lies partly in Little Corby.

58. COMPOSITIO FACTA INTER ROBERTUM FILIUM

³ This was the son of John de Warthwic and nephew of the grantor.

WILLELMI ET WILHELMUM FILIUM JOHANNIS DOMINOS DE WARTHVIC ET ABBATEM EBORACENSEM DE MARISCO SUBTUS CONDORSUM DE WEDERHALE.

60. CARTA JOHANNIS DE WARTHWIC DE QUODAM MESUAGIO TOFTO ET CROFTO IN EADEM.

NOTUM sit omnibus legentibus vel audientibus literas has quod Ego Johannes de Warthwic filius Willelmi filij

59. ¹ John de Hañ. may be J. de Hamerton who is a witness to No. 19 in 1220, but it is not probable.

² On others of the name of Neuby, but earlier than Robert in No. 148, see No. 38, note 16. It does not appear what relation, if any, this Robert was. His widow Beatrix and his sons appear in Nos. 87, 88.

³ This is the composition in No. 56. All these persons seem to have had an interest in this marsh between Wetherhal and Warwick (see below).

⁴ The date from the witness Thomas son of John, Sheriff, must be 1230 or 1231, see on No. 56.

Odardi cum consilio et assensu Alivæ sponsæ meæ et hæredum meorum dedi et concessi et præsentī carta confirmavi Deo et Sancto Constantino de Wederhale et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus pro salute animæ meæ et Parentum meorum unum mesuagium¹ in terra mea de Warthwic illud videlicet quod Ricardus carucator de me tenuit Tenendum et Habendum in liberam puram et perpetuam Elemosinam cum tofto et crofto et omnibus pertinentijs suis cum communi pastura et cum omnibus alijs libertatibus et aisiamentis ad Villam de Warthwic spectantibus. 61. CARTA HENRICI BIRKENHEUED DE TRIBUS ACRIS TERRÆ IN HOLMO JUXTA PONTEM DE WARTH-WIC.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quos præsens scriptum pervenerit Henricus Birkenheued et Beatricia uxor sua et Sibilla filia ejusdem Beatriciæ salutem. Noverit universitas vestra nos de consensu et voluntate hæredum nostrorum dedisse et concessisse et hac præsentī carta nostra confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhale et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus

60. ¹ This is the same message as in No. 41 and the terms of the charter are very similar; but here, apparently, after the death of the grantor's father, William, who was then alive and witnessed the deed.

tres acras¹ terræ in holmo juxta pontem de Warthwic quas quidem tres acras Robertus filius Gerardi de Waverton Pater dictæ Beatriciæ adquisivit de domo de Wederhal. Tenendum et habendum dictis Monachis quiete integre et pacifice absque omni servitio et calumpnia de nobis et hæredibus nostris in perpetuum in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam Nos vero et hæredes nostri dictas tres acras terræ dictis Monachis contra omnes homines in perpetuum warantizabimus defendemus et acquietabimus in perpetuum. Et ut hæc concessio et præsentis cartæ nostræ confirmatio rata sit et stabilis imperpetuum præsentis scripto sigilla nostra apposimus. Hijs Testibus Domino Roberto de Mulcastre tunc Vicecomite Karliolensi², Dominis Willelmo de Vallibus³, Roberto de Castlecairoc, 61. ¹ From the next charter, we see that this land was in a certain place called Constantineclene (see No. 51), and here that it was in the holm near Warthwic bridge.

² Robert de Mulcastre, or Moelcastre (see on No. 111) was Sheriff in the latter half of 1259 and in 1260. In 1266, he was bailiff for Hugh le Bigod in Lydel, and in an Inquisitio p. m. in 1268, he is named one among several "knights gladio cinctos" (52 Henry III. No. 30). He was appointed a justice at Carlisle in July 1273: there is also a convention with Alan de Penintone, in 1278, about the manor of Molecastre (hodie Muncaster) given in Calend. Doc. Scot. ed. Bain, ii. 29.

³ This is not William, a son of the first Robert de Vallibus, and a witness to his Foundation Charter of Lanercost, where he is so called, and who was probably Lord of Caterlen and witness to No. 138 (see there). The William who is witness here, and to several other charters, lived half a century later. There was also a William de Vallibus who married Alienora de Ferrers, or de Ferariis, daughter of the Earl of Derby, without the King's license, and was in 1247 fined 200 marcs to have seisin of her lands. His widow having married Roger de Quency, Earl of Winchester, without license, Roger was fined in 1253. At that date, therefore, William was dead, which is prior to the date of this charter. In 1253, John de Vallibus, brother and heir of William, paid part of the fine of 80 marks which his brother had left undischarged; and we have a William de Vaus mentioned in 1254 (see Fine Rolls ed. Roberts, ii. 15, 149, 160; Originalia 38 Hen. III. m. 9). This will,

62. QUIETA CLAMATIO ALANI FILIJ JULIANÆ DE WAVERTON DE IJ^s. ACRIS TERRÆ IN WEDERHAL.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus præsens scriptum visuris vel audituris Alanus filius Julianæ de Waverton Salutem in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra me reddidisse et quietum clamasse pro me et hæredibus meis Abbati Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Monachis Sancti Constantini et Sanctæ Trinitatis de Wederhale ibidem Deo servientibus probably, be the present witness, and will be the William son of John de Vaux who, about this time, is referred to in a charter in the Register of Lanercost, the said John being also the son of a William de Vallibus (MS. vii. 18; ii. 10). In the same Register, this William is witness to a charter dated 1255 (ix. 12) and to another dated 1252 (xii. 22). In No. 67 below, he is witness to that charter, the date of which must be 1257—59.

⁴ John de Boulton, or Bodilton, is called "citizen of Carlisle" in an Inquisition made in 1247 (Inquis. p. m. 31 Hen. III. No. 15); and in 1250, there is an Inquisition as to the land which John de Boulton (or Boleton) "holds at farm at the king's will, in the suburb of Carlisle," William de Wardewyk and others being jurors (Inquis. p. m. 34 Hen. III. No. 46). In 1251, a plea was entered at Westminster against him and Peter le Legat by Hugh le Bygod (Calend. Doc. Scot. i. 337); and he appears, with many of his co-witnesses here, in No. 76. Alexander de Bolotun, probably one of the family, was Mayor of Carlisle in 1270 (see No. 96).

⁶ Laurence is called, in No. 146, "son of Walter le Porter."

⁷ Robert Mynot, or Mynoc, is, with this Thomas de Rothewelle, called in No. 87 "servant to the Lord Prior"; and the latter in No. 88, with Richard Mansel "servant to the Prior of Wederhal."

tres acras terræ quas habui in villa de Wederhale in quodam loco qui vocatur Constantineclene ut jus Ecclesiæ suæ sine ullo retenemento. 63. CARTA WERRI DE PONTE DE REDDITU XIJ DENARIORUM AD LUMINARE SANCTÆ MARIÆ.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus hanc cartam visuris vel auditoris Werri de ponte Salutem in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra me suscepisse fraternitatem in domo Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhale et quod nomine Fraternitatis Ego et hæredes mei tenemur solvere annuatim duodecim denarios ad Pentecosten prædictæ Domui specialiter ad luminare coram altari Beatæ Virginis Mariæ Ego vero Werri hunc prædictum redditum me et hæredes meos sine aliqua difficultate ad prædictum terminum soluturos tactis Sacrosanctis juravi Et ad insuper ad majorem securitatem præsentis scripto sigillum meum apposui. 62. ¹ This will be Robert the son of William; both Robert and his son William are mentioned in No. 61.

² The date of the charter is later than No. 61; William de Warthwic does not now sign; probably from Robert de Tillol about the date of No. 47.

63. ¹ This must be the same as in No. 54 (see note 4 there) when he was Sheriff or Custos, 1223 to 1229, which agrees with the other witnesses here.

² Adam de Hoton, or Hutton, is called "knight" in No. 187. Probably of Hutton in the Forest. He was one of the jurors in an

UNIVERSIS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam præsens scriptum pervenerit Johannes coquus Salutem æternam in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra quod teneo in campo de Wederhal quatuor acras terræ de Abbate et Conventu Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et de Monachis de Wederhale in feudo et hæreditate illas videlicet quas emi de Waltero janitore quas idem Walterus janitor ad instantiam meam dictæ domui dedit¹ et quietas clamavit per cartam suam Ego autem Johannes et hæredes mei pro prædictis quatuor acris terræ sex denarios prædictæ domui reddemus annuatim imperpetuum medietatem ad Festum Sancti Martini in yeme et medietatem ad Pentecosten pro omni consuetudine et exactione. Et ad hujus rei securitatem et perpetuam firmitatem præsentī scripto sigillum meum apposui. Hijs Testibus, Willelmo filio Rogeri², Symone Sacerdote, Roberto filio Willelmi, Jo-Inquisition in 1246 with Richard de Levington and others (Inquis. p. m. 31 Hen. III. No. 4); and in another, in 1268, he is called a "Verdurer of the Forest of Engilwode" (Inquis. p. m. 52 Hen. III. No. 30). From Testa de Nevill (Record. Com. p. 379 a, b) we learn that his wife was Alicia who afterwards married Robert de Neubiggen.

64. ¹ The Quitclaim of Walter the porter is given in No. 84, with several of the same witnesses.

² This must be William son of Roger de Corkeby who is called "knight" in Nos. 159, 187. In the additional charter No. 243, he and his wife Osanna speak of their antecessors the Lords of Corkby, and as if they had a like power; but at this time Robert son of William was Lord of Corkby, and Isabella his daughter, who married Alan de Lascels, succeeded him (see note 5 on No. 47). It is difficult to explain hanne de Agulluneby, Johanne filio Willelmi, Henrico coquo, Johanne de Hayremynne³, Suano de Agulluneby, Roberto de Paris, Hamelino nepote Prioris⁴ tunc temporis, Radulpho Clirico et alijs⁵.

65. CARTA JOHANNIS SPENDLIME ET MARGARETÆ UXORIS SUÆ DE 4^r ACRIS TERRÆ CUM QUADAM DOMO IN WEDERHALE.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quos præsens scriptum pervenerit Johannes Spendlime et Margareta uxor sua Salutem in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra nos de consensu et voluntate hæredum nostrorum dedisse concessisse et hac præsentī carta nostra confirmasse de nobis et hæredibus nostris Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis et his position. I can only conjecture that he may have held the adjoining manor of Little Corkby, lower down the river Eden, in the parish of Hayton; and that it was to his son William de Corkby that Isabella, in 1284, granted the moiety of Langthwaite in (Little) Corkby; see note 5, No. 47, also No. 57, with which the account of the wood in No. 243 should be compared. William son of Roger occurs frequently. He is witness to the charter No. 144 dated 1247; and the same year he is one of the jurors in an Inquisitio post mort. with Rouland de Vallibus and with William de Corkebi, probably his son (31 Hen. III. No. 32). In the Register of Lanercost he is witness to a charter (MS. ii. 19) with Thomas son of John, Sheriff (1230—31) and Roland de Vallibus, also to one of Roland de Vallibus (ii. 21) with Bishop Walter (1223—46) and William Prior of Wederhale (before 1239). His son William occurs in this Register (Nos. 163, 178) and a son Robert (No. 112), and his wife's name was Osanna (No. 116).

³ John de Hayremine, or Hermine, or Eyremine or Airenmine, was the son of William de Eyremine (see No. 60) and is so called in his two charters Nos. 85, 175. He is witness in 1241 to the dated deed No. 171. They held land "in campo de Wederhal" and in Kaberg on the east of the Eden.

⁵ The date cannot be fixed, but was probably about 1239, see note 4.

Sancti Constantini de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus pro salute animarum nostrarum quatuor acras terræ in territorio de Wederhal cum domo propinquiore domui suæ et terra ad domum pertinente. Ita scilicet quod Croftum habeat eandem latitudinem in inferiori parte quam habet domus in superiori parte in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam, unam scilicet acram et unam rodam super sabulum inter Wederhal et Warthwic, Et dimidiam acram versus Cumquintin juxta Tranemyre et dimidiam acram ultra Henbuskes et unam rodam super Polimyhuou et unam rodam ex opposito de Brunacre et dimidiam acram ultra le Rig in bank et unum Wandale¹ in Borganes et unum wandale juxta Honbusks et unum wandale super Thabriggelat et unam rodam super Musehou et unam rodam ultra le loning² quæ vocatur morode. 65. ¹ Wandale, from Anglo-Saxon wang, "an open field" or "plain," and dæl, "a share," was a division, or share of the open arable field of a vill or township.

66. CONVENTIO INTER JOHANNEM SPENDLIME ET HENRICUM DE TUTESBIÏ. PRIOREM DE WEDERHALE DE J^a BOVATA TERRÆ IN WEDERHALE.

ANNO Domini MCCLVII^o. ad Festum Sancti Martini¹ in yeme facta fuit haec Conventio inter Johannem Spendlime et Margaretam uxorem ejus ex una parte et fratrem Henrici de TutesbiÏ.² tunc temporis Priorem de Wederhal et Monachos ejusdem domus ex altera videlicet quod dicti Johannes et Margareta de consensu et voluntate hæredum suorum concesserunt et dimiserunt dictis H. Pro hac autem dimissione et concessione³ dederunt dicti Prior et Monachi dictis Johanni et Margaretæ tres marcas argenti in eorum magna necessitate. Ad hanc vero conventionem fideliter sine dolo et omni cavellatione tenendam tam dictus Johannes quam Margareta uxor ejus affidaverunt et tactis Sacrosanctis juraverunt. In cujus rei

³ This is a curious concession for 60 years to the Priory of one of two bovates held by the grantors as tenants, at the same rent; and made because of three silver marcs given by the Priory to John and Margaret "in their great necessity."

68. ¹ William de Agulluneby was, according to J. Denton (Cumberland, p. 105) the son of Alan, who was (see No. 45) the son of Elyas de Agulluneby.

² John de Robertby, as in No. 69.

70. CARTA MATILDÆ FILIÆ JOHANNIS SPENDLIME DE TOTA TERRA SUA ET TOFTO ET CURTILAGIO IN WEDERHALE.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam literæ præsentēs pervenerint Matilda de Barrock filia Johannis Spendlime Salutem in Domino sempiternam. ² The date must be later than the two preceding charters, and not far off the date, 1285, of the witness noted above.

70. ¹ Tranemyre was towards Cumquintin (see No. 65) and thus would be near the Via Regia from Appleby to Carlisle (see No. 5).

² In one transcript (A) altered to Serwahum. This name would seem to be a corruption either for S. Servanus or S. Severinus. In the grant by Henry VIII. to the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle, in January, 1547, of the Churches of Wetherhal and Warwick, the Chapels of S. Anthony and S. Severin are mentioned as belonging thereto (Illustrative Docum. XL., XLI.). The Endowment Charter of the Cathedral, granted in May, 1541, speaks of the Chapel of S. Anthony with two closes of land adjoining containing four acres. Tradition identifies this Chapel with a piece of ground marked on the Ordnance Map to the right of the road between Wetherhal and Cumwhinton. The piece of land mentioned in the present charter probably adjoined the other chapel, which has not been identified. This may have been the Chapel of S. Servanus, sometimes written Serwanus, a Scottish saint in the 6th century, about whom there is some confusion, but he is said to have been the instructor of S. Kentigern; and the latter, we are told, sent S. Constantine to preach the word in Galwedra (Galloway). There is thus a connection with the patron saint of Wetherhal, see on S. Constantine in No. 2 and compare Bp Forbes, Life of S. Kentigern, pp. 40, 366, and Dict. of Christian Biog. s. v. Servanus. Or this may have been the Chapel of S. Severinus, who was a Bishop of Bordeaux in the 4th century and often confused with his contemporary Severinus, Bishop of Cologne (see Dict. of Christian Biography, s. v.) but he was little known in England.

⁴ This daughter of John Spendlime was now a widow, hence the date of this charter must be some years later than No. 67 or No. 68.

71. ¹ William de Heriz is a witness to the charter granted by Earl Henry son of King David to the Abbey of Holm Cultram in 1150 (Illustrative Docum. xxiv.). The William de Heriz who is a witness here was probably his son; but see below. The family of Heriz seems to be often connected in different deeds with the family of Brus.

Deo servientibus dimidiam carucatam terræ de Cumquintin² solam et quietam ab omnibus servicijs et commune pascuum Dominicæ pecuniæ³ eorum simul cum mea. Testibus Willelmo de Heř.⁴ et Gaufrido⁵.

72. CARTA HILDREDI DE CARLEOLO DE TERRA ET SILVA QUIETA CLAMATIO MONACHIS DE WEDERHALE.

NOTUM sit omnibus legentibus vel audientibus literas has quod ego Hildredus de Carlel¹ terram et silvam illam

² Cumquintin, hodie Cumwhinton, was a manor in the parish of Wetherhallying to the west, and long in the family of de Carleol. This half carucate of land would seem to be the same as that granted by Uctred son of Liulf and now confirmed by W. de Heriz with common of pasture (see No. 14).

³ "Property," not money here but cattle (pecus).

⁵ This charter must be in the latter half of the 12th century.

72. ¹ This will be the Hildred de Karleol to whom, and to his son Odard, Henry I. gave lands in Gamelby and Glassaneby, one Odard being then sheriff (Testa de Nevill, p. 380 a; Coram Rege Rolls, 11 Joh. No. 41, m. 9; Abbrev. Placit. Rec. Com. p. 66 b; Calend. Doc. Scot. i. 80). It will be noted that among the first set of witnesses in this charter are Odard the son of Hildred and Odard the sheriff. This grant must have been prior to 31st of Henry I., for in the Pipe Rolls for Carlisle of that year we find Hildred and Odard his son rendering account of 40s. for the grant of the land of Gamel son of Beř. (Gamelby). Hildred may have been sheriff that year, 1130—31, though the Pipe Roll is not conclusive. In the earlier part of the Roll, Hildred seems to be acting as sheriff, but nowhere is he styled "sheriff"; yet we know from No. 1 that from the beginning of the century there were sheriffs of this district of Carlisle. Again, in the same Roll, "Odard the sheriff" is named and appears to have held the office the previous year or years, and we should be inclined to unde calumpnia inter me et Monachos de Wederhale fuit Deo et Sanctæ Mariæ et Monachis Eboracensibus in Wederhale degentibus pro salute animæ meæ ab omni calumpnia liberam et quietam clamavi et de jure eorum Ecclesiæ cognovi ac Deo et Sanctæ Mariæ Sanctoque Constantino necnon Monachis prædictis super altare Ecclesiæ de Wederhale præsentæ Parochiæ² ejusdem Ecclesiæ cum virgâ³ dedi secundo vero solario meo Carlel idem concessi coram Monachis et militibus et quibusdam burgensibus de Carlel. Hujus concessionis fuerunt Testes Radulphus Prior de Wederhale⁴, Rainaldus Monachus, Odardus Vicecomes⁵, Ricardus Miles⁶, Ricardus de Meisi conclude that he rather than Hildred was sheriff in 1130—31. Thus these two Hildreds are probably identical, and one may have been sheriff; these two Odards must be different. This Odard son of Hildred had a son Robert surnamed de Hodelme, in Dumfriesshire, and a grandson Odard de Hodelme who was the grandfather of Christiana de Treby, 2d wife of Robert de Brus the Competitor, and heiress of Gamelby and Glassonby (Assize Rolls, Cumb. 20 Edw. 1. m. 32; Regist. Laner. MS. xiv. 4, also see note 1 on No. 73).

³ Tenure by the virge, or rod, was a species of copyhold, see Jacob, Law Dictionary, s. v.

Pipe Roll of 3 John (1201) as holding his land by cornage; and the second Adam son of Odard appears as having livery of his father's land in the Pipe Roll of 10 John (1208); he is also a witness to No. 52. This second Adam was witness as Adam de Wygeton to a charter in the Register of Lanercost (MS. vii. 17) when Alan de Caldebec was sheriff or custos, i.e. in 1204—5 or 1214—15. He was dead in 1225 when his son, the third Odard de Wigeton, had seizin of his father's lands on payment of 10 marcs to the King (Fine Rolls, 10 Hen. III. m. 9, ed. Roberts, i. 134). This Odard the sheriff may have been the father of William son of Odard and Osbert, his brother, Lords of Corkeby (see below on Odard de Corkeby). The local historians call this Odard the sheriff, Odard de Logis, first Baron of Wigton (see Additional Charter, No. 245). In 1238, we find the third Odard (son of the 2nd Adam) who has lately died, and Bishop Walter is given custody of Odard de Wygeton's lands, Christina his widow and Walter his heir; he occurs also in No. 211. In 1253 Isabella de Muscamps, widow of Adam de Wygeton (apparently a younger brother as Isabella is only 18 and Adam was about 2 years younger than she when they were married), claims $\frac{1}{13}$ of the lands of Wygeton, Melmorby and other places as against the son and heir Walter, to whom however seizin was given. This Walter son of Odard de Wygeton quitclaimed certain lands in Wigeton to the Abbey of Holm Cultram on Feb. 1st, 1265 (see Dugdale, Monasticon, v. 611). On the above facts, compare the extracts from the Coram Rege and other Rolls in Calend. Doc. Scot. ed. Bain, i. pp. 264, 362, 415. In The Genealogist (New Series, v. 25) J. H. Round discusses the "two Odards"; but while arguing correctly that Odard son of Hildred is different from Odard the sheriff, he seems to identify the latter with the sheriff of Northumberland who, he shows, was Odard of Bamburgh, the son of Sigulf. This identity is very improbable. Where Odard the sheriff appears, as cited above, it is clearly as sheriff of Carlisle. The name was very common at the time.

Clerico, Waltero Agullun¹⁰, Safrac, Radulpho filio Widonis, Ervisio, Stephano de Corkeby, Acta, Radulfo filio Galfridi,

This seems to be the probable pedigree :

⁶ Ricardus Miles is in the Pipe Rolls of 31 Henry I. ; see on No. 15.

⁷ This is probably William de Heriz, the elder of the name, see on No. 71.

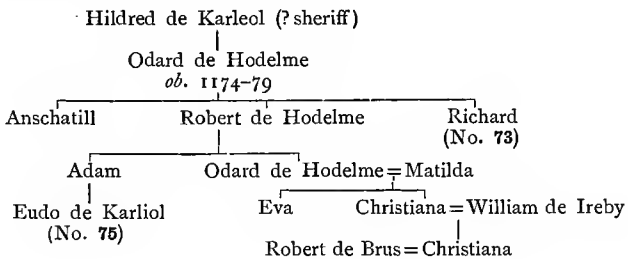

⁸ The conjunction between the names helps to show that Odard the father of Anshatill is identical with Odard the son of Hildred.

⁹ See the note above on Hildred de Carlel ; from the Coram Rege Roll there quoted, it appears Odard held the lands in Gamelby and Glassaneby in the parish of Addingham after his father Hildred ; we learn also that the manors derived their names from Gamel son of Beŕ. and Glassam son of Brictric, two of the King's drengs. His son Robert held them until the King, in 1177, fined him 15 marcs for his rebellion and finally took them from him in 1179. This Robert and his brother Richard occur in No. 73. In his pleadings before the court in 1199 (see below note 1, No. 73) Robert asserts that at the siege of Carlisle by William of Scotland in 1174, his father Odard was in Carlisle Castle in the service of King Henry (II.) : and Odard probably died before 1179 when the land being taken from Robert came into the hands of the Crown. Odard is then called Odard de Odelma, or Hodelm, also the title of his son and grandson (Testa de Nevill, p. 380a). He is witness, as Hudard de Hodelma, to an important charter granted by Huctred son of Fergus to the Hospital of S. Peter at York (Calend. Doc. Scot. ed. Bain, ii. 422) whose date is between 1158 and 1164 ; among his co-witnesses are Hubert de Roberto fratre Stephani, Odardo de Corkeby¹¹, Grimchillo preposito de Scoteby, Aschillo, Colfweino, Alnodo, Vivat, Odo, Rogero Forestario, Ranulpho, Unspach de Carlel, Roberto nepote Hildredi¹², Stephano, Helgo, Simulpho Clerico, Roberto Clerico, Werrico Clerico¹³.

Vallibus (ob. 1164), Robert son of Trute, sheriff (1158—74), Richard his brother, Christian, Bishop of Galloway, Robert, Archdeacon of Carlisle, Everard, Abbot of Holm Cultram, Peter de Tilliol, Richard de Heriz, Robert Dunbredan and others.

The following table may be of use :

¹⁰ This seems to be the earliest of the family, so many members of which appear in this Register; and it is clear that he cannot be put, as by the local historians, at the time of the Conquest; see also note 3 on No. 37.

73. CARTA RICARDI ET ROBERTI FRATRIS EJUS DE COMMUNA ETC., IN CUMQUINTIN.

1130—31; and if we hold Odard the sheriff to be the sheriff of Carlisle in 1130 or before, this would give nearly the date of the charter.

73. ¹ These were the sons of Odard, and so grandsons of Hildred de Carlel. Nothing is known of Richard except that Robert, a witness, seems to be his son. Robert, as we saw, held the lands in Gamelby (see note 9 on No. 72). He was fined 15 marks in 1177 for having joined the King's enemies (Pipe Rolls, 23 Hen. II.). He is called Robert de Hodeuma or Hodelma, and had taken part in the revolt of the younger Henry, the King's son, which had been joined by William the Lion, the King of Scotland, in 1173—4. The lands in Gamelby and Glassaneby were seized by the King, and were accounted for by the sheriff of Cumberland in the Pipe Rolls for 1179 and several subsequent years. They were claimed against Robert by Richard son of Troite as the next heir. After considerable litigation (see Coram Rege Rolls, 1 Joh. m. 9, 11 Joh. m. 9; Abbrev. Placit. Rec. Com. pp. 22 a, 66 b) Richard son of Richard son of Truite got seizin of them in 1199; but Robert again brought them into court, and in 1210 his son Odard de Hodiema seems to have got possession of them (see Pipe Rolls, 12 Joh.; Calend. Doc. Scot. i. 44, 83, 95, 294). Hence Robert died about 1209. This Odard had two daughters, Eva and Christiana, by his wife Matilda who were also his heirs (i. 294). Robert had also a son Adam, see on Nos. 75, 185.

³ As in No. 74, Syward. On the Mayor of Carlisle, see No. 95. The Præpositus, or Provost, would be probably the chief officer of the city before a Mayor was appointed.

74. ¹ This charter conveys, in addition to the grant of the last charter, common pasture.

75. ¹ Eudo de Karliol is called in No. 186 the son of Adam son of Robert. This is no doubt the Robert mentioned in the two last charters (see on No. 73). We saw that his son Odard had part of his property, and this in Cumquintin had fallen to his son Adam. Eudo seems to have gone over to "the King of Scots, the King's enemy," in 1217; and seizin of his lands was given to Robert de Vallibus during the King's pleasure (Close Rolls, 2 Hen. III. 2, m. 15, Rec. Com. i. 343 a). He was again in possession in 1225, when some litigation as to Cumquintin and Cumbredale had arisen (see the extract from the Coram Rege Rolls, 9 Hen. III. No. 22, m. 1 in Calend. Doc. Scot. i. 160, ed. Bain). He had a son William (No. 76) and a grandson Eudo (No. 78).

² This would seem to be an error for G. Gervase de Louthor, who must have been Official about the time of this charter, see on No. 21.

³ Robert son of William de Hamptone was Sheriff or Custos for Bishop Walter in 1223—29, see note 4 on No. 54.

⁴ This is John, Prior of Lanercost (on Lanercost Priory, see No. 117), who is a witness with Robert son of William to a grant in the Register of Lanercost (MS. iii. 8) by John, brother of Robert son of Anketin; but he can scarcely be the John, Prior, who occurs in a grant of Matilda de Vallibus (MS. ix. 16) who died in 1295. The latter called John de Galwythia resigned in 1283 and died 1289 (Chron. de Lanercost, ed. Stevenson, pp. 113, 133).

⁶ The date, from the sheriff, is 1223—1229; and this agrees with No. 54 where there are many of the same witnesses.

78. CARTA EUDONIS FILII WILLELMI FILII EUDONIS DE KARLIOL DE OCTO SOLIDIS IN CUMQUINTIN.

OMNIBUS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs ad quos præsens scriptum pervenerit Eudo filius Willelmi filij Eudonis de Karlel Salutem in Domino sempiternam. Noveritis me dedisse concessisse et hac præsentī carta mea confirmasse Domino Abbati et Conventui Beatæ Mariæ Eboraci Priori et Monachis de Wederhale ibidem Deo servientibus octo solidos annui redditus in Villa de Cumquintin percipiendos de terris de Forlandes et Ofnames in eadem Villa Scilicet medietatem ad Festum Sancti Martini in yeme et aliam Medietatem ad Pentecosten. Quem quidem redditum prædicti Abbas et Conventus Prior et Monachi prius habuerunt de dono et Feoffeffamento Adæ filij Rogeri de Karliol de prædictis terris in Villa de Cumquintin. Tenendum et habendum eisdem Abbati et Conventui Priori et Monachis et eorum successoribus de me et hæredibus meis et assignatis libere et quiete et integre. Reddendo inde annuatim mihi et hæredibus meis aut assignatis meis unam Rosam¹ in die Nativitatis Sancti Johannis Baptistæ pro omnibus servicijs consuetudinibus actionibus et demandis. Ita quod liceat prædictis Abbati et Conventui Priori et Monachis districtionem in prædictis terris facere pro illo reddito octo solidorum suis terminis non soluto. Et si

⁵ William de Laversdale was a witness to No. 194 in 1271, and see on No. 69.

⁶ The date must be later than that of the preceding charter to which this grantor is a witness, therefore probably after 1260, but long prior to No. 190, even if that be the charter of this same Richard Mansel. This is also evidently prior to the next charter of the same 8s. rent, which is about the date of No. 190, 1285—98.

78. ¹ In No. 76 the sum of 6*l.* was to be paid annually in lieu of services, customs &c., now a rose on June 24th is substituted.

contingat quod sufficiens districtio in prædictis terris Forlandes et Oflandes fieri non poterit Volo et concedo pro me et hæredibus meis et assignatis quibuscunque quod prædicti Abbas et Conventus Prior et Monachi pro voluntate sua in feodo meo de Cumquintin ad quascunque manus illud devenerit pro illo annuo reddito ut permittitur suis terminis non soluto districtiones faciant et prout magis eis expedit exequantur. Et Ego prædictus Eudo et hæredes mei vel assignati prædictum redditum octo solidorum Abbati et Conventui Priori et Monachis supradictis contra omnes homines et fæminas warantizabimus acquietabimus imperpetuum defendemus. In cujus rei Testimonium huic scripto sigillum meum apposui. Hijs Testibus, Michaele de Hardcla tunc Vicecomite Cumberlandiæ², Johanne de Terriby³, Thoma de Neuton⁴ Coronatoribus⁵ ejusdem

² Michael de Hardcla, or Hartcla, was Deputy Sheriff of Westmoreland in 1276 and 1277, and Sheriff of Cumberland in part of the year 1285 and then until 1298. He is witness to two charters in this Register dated 1291, 1292 (Nos. 199, 203). We learn from No. 234 that his wife's name was Joanna. He was a justice itinerant in Cumberland in 1300. He was a brother of Andrew de Hardcla, Earl of Carlisle and Lord Warden of the Marches, who was executed for high treason in 1323. On hearing of the Earl's arrest, Michael de Hardcla, who was at "le Peel de Heyhevede" (Highet or Highhead, in the parish of Dalston), fled into Scotland with others of his friends (Chron. de Lanercost, ed. Stevenson, p. 250). He appears to have had some claim on the manor of Dalston, and a payment was made to him by Bishop Irton as late as 1279 (see Nicolson and Burn, History, ii. 311). See also on Kirkandrews in No. 195. Harcla (later Hartly) was a manor in the parish of Kirkby Stephen, long in the possession of the de Hardcla family.

³ John de Terriby and Thomas de Neuton were both knights (see No. 110) and appear together as jurors in Inquisitions in Cumberland e.g. in 1268 (Inquis. p. m. 52 Hen. III. No. 30), in 1280 with Sir Wm. de Boyville and Alexander de Boulton, Mayor of Carlisle (Inquis. p. m. 8 Edw. I. No. 81); John de Terriby was a juror in 1270 in an Inquisition on the lands of the late Hellewysa widow of Richard de Wernune (Vernun) under whom he held land (Inquis. p. m. 54 Hen. III. No. 19); also in 1293 in Tynedale (Inquis. p. m. 21 Edw. I. No.

Comitatus, Waltero de Mulcaster⁶, Willelmo de Bovilla⁷
Militibus, Roberto de Warthwic, Roberto de Crogelin⁸,

13). He appears as a juror in the Placita de Quo Waranto in 1292 (Record Com. p. 115, sq.).

⁴ Thomas de Neuton (see note above) was also a juror with John de Staffholle in 1293 (Inquis. p. m. 21 Edw. I. No. 13). He appears with John de Terriby in the Placita de Quo War. (see the ref. in the note above).

⁶ Walter de Mulcaster, see on No. 111.

⁷ William de Bovilla or Boyvill. Several persons of this name occur, one as early as the 12th century. This is Sir William, the knight, who is frequently mentioned. He was one of the jurors in an Inquisition regarding the lands held of the King by Helewysa, widow of Eustace de Baylloll, in 1272 (Inquis. p. m. 56 Hen. III. No. 35). In 1274, he was the King's escheator, and was accused of certain malpractices with regard to the lands above mentioned. In 1291, he was keeper of the Castles of Dumfries, Wygeton and Kirkcudbrith for Edward I.; and that year he appears to have died, for he had been dead some little time in March 1st, 1292 (Calend. Doc. Scot. ed. Bain, ii. 3, 6, 39, 127, 138, also Doc. illustrative of Hist. of Scot. ed. J. Stevenson, i. 241, 282). Frequent mention is made of him, with some of his co-witnesses here, in 1292, in the Placita de Quo Waranto (Record Com. p. 145 seq.). The family of Boyvill held the Barony of Levington and a younger member Guido became by marriage Lord Thursby near Carlisle (J. Denton, Cumberland, p. 151). Sir William de Boyvill held it at this time. He also held lands in Ainstapelit (Ainstable) on the east of the Eden (J. Denton, p. 118) which are referred to in No. 168, and which his son John is said to have inherited. In Bishop Halton's Register (MS. p. 39) there is the presentation by a Sir W. de Boyvill, knt., probably the son of the witness here, in 1298, of Mr R[ichard] de Abindon to the Rectory of Thoresby. In 1305, the younger Sir William, having died, there was a remarkable Inquisition held de Jure Patronatus which is set out in the same Register (MS. p. 90).

79. CARTA ROBERTI DE LEVERISDALE FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHALE DE MORTUO BOSCO IN SILVA DE CUMQUINTIN.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam præsens scriptum pervenerit Robertus de Leverisdale Salutem in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra me Divinæ Caritatis intuitu pro salute animæ meæ et pro salute animarum prædecessorum et successorum nostrorum dedisse concessisse et confirmasse Abbati Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Conventui ejusdem loci et Monachis de Wederhale in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam quod ipsi Monachi habeant mortuum boscum imperpetuum de bosco de Cumquintin ad sustentationem domus de Wederhal et capiant ubi voluerint sine impedimento mei vel hæredum meorum. Et sciendum est quod ego Robertus et hæredes mei hanc Elemosinam prædictis Abbati et Conventui et Monachis de Wederhale imperpetuum defendemus et warantizabimus.

that date by the Priory of Lanercost (Register of Lanercost, MS. xii. 25, see also xiii. 17). He was a juror with John de Terriby in the Inquisition in 1270, mentioned in note 3 above. He appears in Placita de Quo Warant. with John de Staffoll in 1292 (Record Com. p. 118).

¹¹ There is much information concerning the witnesses about the date of the Sheriff, 1285 to 1298, and it does not seem that we can bring the date of the charter within closer limits.

³ There is no Sheriff, or Pro-sheriff, of the name in the lists; but there is some confusion about this time, and there is no return for the years 1257 and 1258 when he may have acted.

83. ¹ Gilbert de Curwen was Sheriff of Cumberland from 1278 to 1282. Little is known of him. In the Register of Holm Cultram (quoted in Dugdale, Monasticon, v. 597) his son Gilbert speaks of the charters of Gilbert his father and Patrick, his grandfather, who was the son of Thomas son of Gospatric, son of Orm. A full account of the family is given by W. Jackson in the Transactions of the Cumberland Archæol. Soc. v. p. 181 sq. In 1292, Thomas as defendant in a plea affirmed that his name was de Culewen, not de Currewenne (Assize Rolls for Cumb. 20 Edw. I. m. 12).

² Robert de Laferete, or de la Ferte, or de la Feritate, was a knight (see No. 111) and a son of the younger Radulph de la Ferte (see note 4 on No. 43). He appears in 1266 as having a safe conduct to go to the Court, as well as Robert de Tillol and Richard de Castelkaroc (Patent Rolls, 50 Hen. III. m. 18); also as one of 4 knights jurors in 1292 in the Placita de Quo War. (Record Com. p. 115 b). In 1296, as Lord of Beaumont, apud Bellum Montem, he presented Elias de Thirlewall to the Church there (Register of Bp Halton, MS. p. 27).

³ Adam de Selegile, or Slegyle, was forester of Stanemore in Westmoreland until the death of John de Veteriponte in 1241 (see on No. 204 and Nicolson and Burn, History, i. 578). The family held the manor of Slegill which was in the parish of Morland and adjoining Neuby in that parish. A messuage in Selegile was granted to the Priory by Gilbert de Slegile and confirmed by his widow (see on No. 220). Another Adam appears with Margaret daughter of Gilbert, as late as 1292, in the Placita de Quo War. (Record Com. p. 788) defending their rights in Thybeya (Tebay); but he must be of a later generation, for Adam de Slegile is witness with Thomas de Aslachby, who attests this deed, to No. 201 whose date is probably 1231—40 (see there). See also the Levens Hall MS. referred to above, where the present Adam and his son Robert (No. 207) are mentioned, with Gilbert and William, also William de Neuby, probably the son of the grantor.

89. ¹ Adam de Neuthona, or de Neuton, is witness to No. 137 which dates 1236—47. His father Richard lived in the time of King John, and was a juror in 1210 in an inquisition often referred to (Coram Rege Rolls, 11 Joh. No. 41, m. 9). They held the manor of Newton, or West Newton, in the parish of Bromfield (see Nicolson and Burn, Hist. ii. 163). Adam appears in a Final Concord between Lambert and Alan de Muleton in 1230, as holding land in Ormesby (Feet of Fines, Cumb. 15 Hen. III. No. 12) and as one of the justices of a special assize at Carlisle in 1237 (Patent Rolls, 21 Hen. III. m. 8 d.). He confirmed a grant of his grandfather Adam son of Odard to the Abbey of Holm Cultram (Regist. Holm Cultram, Harleian MSS. 1181, p. 386). The manor of Grinsdale near to Carlisle appears to have come by marriage in part to Richard de Neuton, and part to William le Sor (J. Denton, Cumberland, p. 81). In the Register of Lanercost (MS. v. 4) we have a grant to that Priory by Dominus Richard de Neuton of the Church of S. Kentigern of Grenesdale in the time of John, Prior of Carlisle (the end of the 12th century), and Adam de Neuton is witness to several charters of William le Sor granting lands in Grenesdale (MS. v. 9—15). Richard de Neuton, son of Adam, made a convention with Henry, Abbot of Holm Cultram in 1262 (Register, Harleian MSS. 1181, p. 387). He died in 1267, and his son William then did homage for his lands (Fine Rolls, 52 Hen. III. m. 12, ed. Roberts, ii. 462).

⁴ The date of this charter may be a little later than the two preceding, but is probably from 1250 to 1260.

90. ¹ Alan de Neuby, the son of Robert whose widow Beatrix made the grant in No. 87, here grants the same land to the Priory.

² The witnesses to this charter are almost identical with those to No. 68 which was after the date 1257—59. That agrees with the present charter, which must be not long after the three preceding, 1250—60.

Dickinson, col. 385.

² Roger Bertram was also justice itinerant in 1227 in Cumberland, see No. 174. He was an important person in the reign of Henry III. We hear of him in the time of King John (1211—12) as being excused scutage (Pipe Rolls for Northumberland, 13 Joh.). In 1220 he was one of those who with Hubert de Burgo, chief justiciary, gave their charters of good faith to Alexander II. of Scotland on the part of King Henry III. (Rymer, Fædera, new ed. i. 160); and in 1229 he was one of those appointed to conduct Alexander to meet the King at York; and again in 1235 to conduct Alexander and his Queen to London (Rymer, Fædera, new ed. i. 221). He was a witness to the famous agreement between the two Kings at York in 1239, in the presence of the Cardinal Legate Otto (Fædera, i. 234). He appears to have lived until about 1263, when his widow Laderana laid claim to certain lands before the King's Court (Coram Rege Rolls, 47 Hen. III. No. 120, m. 8 d.).

³ See on No. 44. This is not the second Robert there mentioned, Robert of Hamlake who died in 1226—27, but his son, Robert de Ros of Werke.

OMNIBUS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs tam præsentibus quam futuris Ricardus filius Ricardi filij Trute¹

93. ¹ Of the family, see note 5 on No. 54; Richer was the great-grandfather of Richard and grandfather of Adam de Levington, and was seized of the property in the time of Henry II.

³ Gervase de Louth, see note 3 on No. 21; here "Official," and therefore probably between 1223 and 1229—30.

⁴ This is probably Robert who with John son of William, also a witness, was a son of William son of Odard of Corkby.

⁵ The date of the charter will be between 1223 and 1230.

94. ¹ Richard son of Richard son of Trute was the nephew of Robert son of Troite, Sheriff of Carlisle, 1158—73, and the son of his brother Richard (see notes 8, 9 on No. 36). He appears with his father in the Pipe Roll for 1194 on a payment of 40s. for a covenant between them. His father Richard had claimed Gamelsby and Glassanby which had been seized by the Crown from Robert de Hodelme, son of Odard de Karleol; on this claim Robert was charged 20 marks in 1177, although it is stated he had not got the property (Pipe Rolls, 23 Hen. III.).

Salutem. Notum sit vobis me dedisse concessisse et hac præsentī carta mea confirmasse Deo et Beatæ Mariæ et Sancto Constantino de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus pro salute mea et animæ uxoris meæ Antigonæ et Antecessorum meorum et successorum unum toftum extra portam Bocharði² quem Radulphus Clericus Richard the son of Richard got seisin of the property in 1199 on payment of 100 marks (Pipe Rolls, 10 Ricard. I. and 1 Joh., and see the other reff. on Robert son of Odard in No. 73). This Richard, the son, seems to have been concerned in the rebellion of John de Curcy, the conqueror of Ireland in the time of Henry II. (Pipe Roll, 9 Joh.); his lands were seized by King John in 1202; (some that he had in Crogelin and Niewebiggige (Newbiggin) were restored in 1208, but Gamelsby went back to the other family (see Pipe Rolls, 4 and 9 Joh.). His name often appears in the Pipe Rolls, e.g. as paying 100s. for a hearing before the justices at Westminster, in 1195 and following years; as paying scutage in 1205; as paying 2 marcs in 1200 and other years for hunting hares and foxes. From the Register of Holm Cultram (MS. p. 22) we learn that this Richard conceded Neuby in the Barony of Linstock to Reginald de Karlel on his paying 10s. rent and 16s. cornage; and Reginald granted (MS. p. 23) Neuby to the Abbey, the same terms being specified; also Margaret, wife of Robert de Wathepol, daughter and heir of Richard son of Trute (i.e. the second Richard), released her rights in Neuby which her father had conceded (MS. p. 23). This charter, from some of the parties named, was about 1236. These grants were confirmed by Bishop Walter (MS. p. 24) and other Bishops of Carlisle, who were lords of the Barony. Richard the son by a charter in the Register of Lanercost (MS. vi. 11) confirms a grant which his father (called de Bampton) had made (MS. vi. 10) of two tofts outside the Porta Bocharði at Carlisle to the Priory. The father's grant speaks of Alicia his daughter, who was buried there. The son in this charter speaks of his wife Antigone. This Richard the son of Richard is often spoken of as Richard son of Trute, a not uncommon abbreviation of a name, as in the case of Gilbert son of Roger son of Reinfrid (see No. 209), but some confusion results.

² This toft is in the same locality as the two which passed from Richard to the Priory of Lanercost (see the note above). The Porta Bocharði was the gate of the city of Carlisle on the south, and was said to have its name from Bocharð a Fleming, one of the early settlers brought from the south, and from whom was also named the neighbouring vill of Bocharby. In the next charter, we have the vicus Bochardi, or Bochar's Street, which led through this port or gate; the Street being called later Bochar's gate or Bochergate.

³ Adam de Kirkeby, see note 6 on No. 19.

⁵ The date of this charter from Prior John must be the end of the 12th or the beginning of the 13th century.

95. ¹ The Hospital of S. Nicholas at Carlisle (referred to in No. 80 with John the Chaplain) was founded by one of the Kings of England, but the name is not recorded. It was founded and endowed for the sustentation of thirteen lepers, both men and women, one Master (or Rector) Chaplain to reside, and to keep the common seal, and to sing mass at his discretion, also a Chaplain to sing mass daily for the benefactors of the Hospital. It appears that after a time other poor persons, not lepers, but debiles et impotentes, were by consent admitted and sustained under the same rules; see Patent Rolls et Fratres ejusdem Loci Salutem. Noveritis nos concessisse dedisse et hac nostra presenti carta confirmasse

15 Edw. III. m. 48, where a summary of the rules is also given. Hugh Todd in his MS. Notitia Cathedralis Carleol. (p. lxvii.) says with his usual inaccuracy "Hospitale hoc fundavit Willielmus II., Rex Angliæ &c. prout conjicere fas est: nam sub ejus tempus constat Prioratum de Wedderhal de hac Domo Terras et Redditus tenuisse"; but it need hardly be said that the Priory of Wederhal held no lands or rents from the Hospital in the time of William II. The earliest notice appears to be in the MS. Register of Bishop Kirkeby (p. 482) that a moiety of the tithes of Little Bampton (in the parish of Kirkbampton) was, with the consent of Bishop Bernard, given to this Hospital by Adam son of Robert on condition to have always two almsmen from that parish. This Adam was the son of Robert son of Odard, and great grandson of Hildred de Carlel (see on No. 73), and he lived in the time of Bishop Bernard, 1204—1214. In the pleading, in answer to the summons of Edward I. in 1292 Quo Waranto, the Bishop of Carlisle, Bishop Halton, claimed the advowson of the Hospital. It was asserted that King John was seized thereof in fee, and conferred it upon Robert son of Ralph his clerk (Placita De Quo Waranto, Record Com. p. 122) and the jury found for the King. Besides the present charter, we have in this Register the convention dated 1270 between the Master of the Hospital and the Prior of Wederhal (see No. 96) and a grant made by the Hospital (see No. 170). An account of certain endowments and other matters is given in Bp Nicolson's MSS. (iii. 65); and see a paper on Local Leper Hospitals by H. Barnes, M.D. in the Cumb. Archæol. Soc. Transac. (x. 95), but some points in the latter require revision; at the end, the part of the Patent Roll of Edward III. referred to above is given in full. In 1377, the Scots attacked Carlisle, but finding it strongly defended burnt the Hospital of S. Nicholas in the suburbs of the town and then went off "ad Manerium de Rose" (Chron. de Lanercost, ed. J. Stevenson, p. 292). On May 10th, 1477, the Hospital was granted by Edward IV. to the Prior and Convent of Carlisle in consequence of their petition (both documents are set out, apparently from the Liberate Rolls, in Nicolson, MSS. iii. 67 and i. 297). It passed to the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle under the Endowment Charter of Henry VIII. on May 6th, 1541; and among the charges on their estate, that Charter names 46s. 8d. annually to a Chaplain celebrating Divine service in the Hospital "coram tribus Bedellis et hominibus leprosis," and £5. 17s. to the said poor Bedells. At length, as we learn from the Parliamentary Survey of the Manor of John de Chapple, dated June 11th, 1650, "it was altogether ruynated in the tyme of the leaguer before Carlyle" (1645). The Survey states the extent of the property, together with "the Church Yarde abuttinge upon the highe waye on the easte and southe" to be $2\frac{1}{2}$ acres.

There are three or four others given in Dugdale, Monast. vi. 757.

² Alexander Bakun is also a witness in Nos. 134, 136 where he is named Seneschal of Gillesland. He has the same title in two charters in the Register of Lanercost (MS. iv. 14, 16) which, from the witnesses, are about the same date (1230) as No. 211, where he is again a witness. He was appointed a temporary justice on an assize at Appelby in Sept. 1236 (Patent Rolls, 20 Hen. III. m. 2 d.). In 1232 he paid £10 for having custody of the land and heir of William de Ulvesby, and 10 marcs in 1235, similarly of Radulph de Bochardeby (Fine Rolls, ed. Roberts, i. 222, 280).

Et licebit eis dictam terram dare vendere et invadiare cuicumque et quodocunque voluerint sine contradictione nostra salva nobis et domui nostræ Fina prænominata scilicet quinque solidis per annum ad terminos præscriptos de predicta terra. Et nos warrantizabimus prædictam terram cum omnibus pertinentijs suis præfato Johanni et assignatis suis quamdiu eam nobis ipsis warrantizare poterimus. ³ Husgavel, sometimes husgable, is house tenure, and then a tax laid upon houses. The word gavel is Celtic, not Anglo-Saxon, from gabhairn, "to take" or "receive." Conf. gavelkind, and see Skeat, Etymol. Dict. s. v.

⁷ John de Bohalton was "a citizen of Carlisle," see on John de Boulton, No. 61, note 4.

It may be useful to give here a list of such early Mayors of Carlisle as are known; the list in the Appendix to Royal Charters of Carlisle, ed. R. S. Ferguson, is incorrect:

The Chronicon de Lanercost (ed. J. Stevenson, pp. 41, 53) says that his name was Radulf Barri, being a nephew of Bishop Walter, that he succeeded Prior Bartholomew in 1231 and died February 9th, 1247. ⁵ Richard Brun, or Le Brun, appears several times as Sheriff of Carlisle or of Cumberland in this Register; but his name does not occur in the official lists of the Sheriffs. He was probably "custos" for Bishop Walter, who was Sheriff until his resignation in 1246, and it may be "custos" in 1233—35, and not Thomas de Multon as usually stated. He was a justice to hold a special assize at Carlisle in May, 1237 (Patent Rolls, 21 Hen. III. m. 8 d.). The family seem to have been lords of the manor of Bowness on Solway (see on Radulph de la Ferte, No. 43), also of Bothill in the parish of Torpenhow.

⁶ The date of the charter is after 1231 when Radulph became Prior, and probably not later than 1235.

⁵ John de Selebi, clerk, was instituted to the Church of Foston, on the presentation of the Abbey of S. Mary, at York, in January, 1231 (Archbp Gray's Register, ed. J. Raine, p. 42).

101. ¹ Little or nothing seems to be known of the immediate ancestors of Symon de Morvilla. A Hugh de Moravilla is witness with William Engaine to the charter of Earl Henry, son of King David, to the Abbey of Holm Cultram in 1150, and may have been the father or other relative (Illustrative Doc. xxiv.). Simon married Ada, the daughter of William Engaine, through whom he obtained the great barony of Burgo, or Burgh, by Sands. This barony was granted by Ranulph Meschin, "Lord of Cumberland," to Robert de Trivers (said to be his brother-in-law) together with the custody of the Forest of Cumberland (Testa de Nevill, p. 379 b); his daughter and heir Ebria (the Domina Ybri of this charter) married Radulph Engaine, or Engahin. It was their son William whose daughter and heir, Ada, by his wife Eustachia (Regist. Lanercost, MS. ii. 15) married, for her first husband, Simon de Morvilla; her second husband was Robert de Vallibus, see note 4 on No. 28. Simon had, by his wife Ada, a son Hugo de Morvilla, often called wrongly his grandson; see No. 102, where Hugo speaks of Symon pater meus; moreover, in the Register

Wederhal eandem dimidiam carucatam terræ in Croglyn² quam Domina Ybri³ eis dedit in Elemosinam cum omnibus quæ ad eam pertinent Et duas salinas⁴ in Parochia de of Lanercost (MS. ii. 11) in a charter of Ada daughter of William Engayne, mention is made of Robert de Vallibus, her husband, Hugo de Morvill, her son, and Simon de Morvill, her former husband; also in another charter in the same Register (MS. ii. 14, also 16) Hugo de Morvill, granting the Church of Laysingby, twice speaks of Ada Engayne as mater mea. And yet almost all the local histories call Hugh de Morvill the grandson of Simon, and son of one Roger. The error seems to be due to Dugdale (Baronage, i. 612) who also says that Simon had two sons Richard and Roger; and the other writers have diligently copied him; for once J. Denton (Cumberland, p. 68) is right. In the Pipe Roll for 1158, Simon de Morevilla is noted as owing 50 marcs for the land of Radulf Engaigne, which he paid the next year. He had therefore lately got livery of this property. It appears also that he held Leysingby in 1166, when the Sheriff granted him by Royal writ an abatement of 18s. 4d. The next year the abatement was 13s. 9d. paid dum idem Simon vixit, shewing that he died in 1167. There were several other persons of the name of Morvill about this time connected with the district, besides the Hugh de Moravilla in 1150 mentioned above. The Hugh de Morvill, who was one of the knights that slew Thomas Becket in 1170, has been confused (as by Dugdale) with Hugh the son of Simon; but he was lord of Knaresburg in Yorkshire, which he got as early as 1158; and he is said to have died in the Holy Land. A Hugh de Morville and a Richard de Morville were witnesses to the charter given by David, King of Scots, to Robert de Brus referred to in note 1 on No. 106. Richard de Morville, Constable of Scotland, often occurs about this time; and John de Morville was fined £20 for advising the surrender of the castle of Appleby in 1174 (Pipe Rolls, Westmoreland, 22 Hen. 11.).

³ On Ybri, or Ebria, de Trivers, see note 1 above; she seems to have given a tenth part of the vill of Croglyn to the Priory, see No. 152.

Burgo⁵, unam scilicet quam Radulphus Engahin⁶ dedit eis, alteram vero quam Willelmus filius ejus⁷ dedit eis. Hanc terram et has salinas pro animabus Prædecessorum meorum ab omni terreno servitio liberas quod ad me pertinet predictis Monachis in Elemosina concedo et præsentī carta confirmo. Testibus hijs, Hugone de Morvilla⁸, Radulpho Clerico de Burgo et alijs multis⁹.

The workmen were called salinarii. The rock salt does not seem to have been worked until quite a recent period.

⁸ Hugo de Morvilla was the son of Simon and of Ada Engaine; see the note above on Simon. We learn from Testa de Nevill (p. 379 b) that Hugh held his lands by payment of £10. 2s. 10d. cornage, which lands came to him from his ancestor Robert de Trivers, and therefore through his mother Ada Engaine. These would include, besides the barony of Burgh, the manors of Kirkoswald and Laysingby, which his father Simon held (Pipe Rolls, 13 Hen. II.) and in connection with which Hugo often appears. He married Helewisa de Stuteville, of the family of the Barons of Lyddale, whose ancestor Turgis Brundis got that Barony from Ranulf Meschin (Testa de Nevill, p. 379 b). She was a daughter of Robert de Stuteville, whose wife's name was also Helewisa (see Dugdale, Baronage, i. 456), and who is a co-witness with Hugo de Morevil to the charter granted by Henry II.

102. CONFIRMATIO HUGONIS DE MORVILLA FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHALE DE DUABUS SALINIS IN PAROCHIA DE BURGO.

SCIANT omnes qui viderint vel audierint literas istas quod Ego Hugo de Morvilla¹ reddidi et hac carta mea confirmavi Monachis de Wederhale duas salinas in Parochia de Burgo quas Symon Pater meus confirmavit eis ex dono Radulphi Engahin et Willelmi filij ejus. Tenendas impetuum quietas et liberas ab omni terreno servitio. Sciendum vero quod una istarum salinarum jacet juxta to Hubert de Vallibus (Illustrative Documents xxii.). Hugo had two daughters, who inherited his property, Alda or Ada, who married Richard de Lucy, and Johanna, who married Richard Gernun (see below on Nos. 103, 104). He held also the forestry of the Forest of Cumberland (Pipe Rolls, 6 Ric. I.). He paid two destriers for leave to make a marriage between his daughter, Ada, and Richard (de Lucy) of Egremunt (Pipe Rolls, 2 Joh.). He died in 1202—3; when his wife paid 60 marcs that she might not be compelled to marry and might have her dower; and William Brierewere paid 500 marcs for having the custody of his younger daughter, Johanna, and other privileges (Pipe Rolls, 4 Joh.; and see on Nos. 103, 104). It appears from a convention between William Brierewere and Helewisa de Stuteville that William quitclaimed to her of her dower the manors of Chircoswarde (Kirkoswald) and Lesingebi (Lazonby), and she quitclaimed to him the manor of Hisale (Isel) (Calend. Doc. Scot. ed. Bain, i. 57). Hugo de Morvilla also made grants, or confirmed the grants of his mother Ada, to the Priory of Lanercost, of the Churches of Laysingby and Grenesdale, pasture and two salt pans in Burgh, a free net in Eden and lands (Hærasion or Hareskeugh) in the manor of Kirkoswald (Regist. Lanercost, MS. ii. 12, 13, 14, 16, 17); also to the Abbey of Holm Cultram, the Church of Burgh and lands and pasture in Laysingby, the grant being witnessed by Thomas son of Gospatric (Regist. Holm Cult. MS. pp. 13, 14, 22) and Thos. de Brunefeld, and confirmed by Bishop Bernard. After his death, his wife Helewisa married William son of Ranulph of Graystoc; and in 1210 she was again a widow, and was in the custody of Robert de Veteriponte (see Pipe Rolls, 11 Joh.).

102. ¹ On Hugo de Morvilla, see note 8 on the preceding charter.

² Robert de Dunbredan rendered account of 20s. in 1210, for pannage in the Forest (Pipe Rolls, 11 Joh.), but may be son of this witness; Robert is witness to three of the charters of Hugh de Morvill in the Register of Lanercost (MS. ii. 12, 14, 16) and to the charter of Huctred son of Fergus, 1158—64 (see note 9 on No. 72).

³ Radulph de Folevile is also witness to two of Hugh's charters in the same Register (MS. ii. 14, 17).

⁵ The date of this charter lies between the deaths of Simon and Hugh, i.e. 1167 and 1202—3.

103. ¹ On the death of Hugo de Morvilla, his daughters, Ada and Johanna, inherited his great property. The elder Ada was already married to Richard de Lucy of Egremunt (see note 8 on No. 101, also No. 104), the younger, Johanna, was afterwards married to Richard Gernun or de Vernun, the nephew of William Briewere. This William Briewere was a person of great importance in the reigns of Richard I. and John; he was made Justiciar by the former (Roger de Hoveden, ed. Stubbs, iii. 16); as in this case, he seems often to have secured the wardship of minors with a view to profit; he died in 1226—27 (see Dugdale, Baronage, i. 700). In the 4th year of John, William Briewere accounted for 500 marcs to have the daughter (Johanna) of Hugo de Morevill with her inheritance, the right to marry her to his son Richard or his nephew Richard Gernun, and the forestry of the Forest which Hugh had (Pipe Rolls, 4 Joh.). Two years afterwards, we find that Richard de Lucy had got all these privileges, with the reasonable share of his wife Alda in her father's land, on the payment of 900 marks and five palfreys; and Richard Gernun had the younger daughter Johanna and the reasonable share falling to her, on the payment of 500 marcs (Pipe Rolls, 4 & 6 Joh.). Richard Gernun and his wife Johanna had two daughters, Helewisa who became the wife of Richard de Vernun, dying in 1269—70 (Inquis. p. m. 54 Hen. III. No. 19), and Ada who married first Ranulph Boyvill of Levington, and then William Furnival, and outlived them both, dying in 1270—71 (Inquis. p. m. 55 Henry III. No. 9); the daughter of Ada, named Helewisa de Levington, became the wife of Eustace de Bailliol and died 1270—71 (see Pipe Rolls, 31 Hen. III.; Inquis. post mort. 56 Hen. III. No. 35, Calend. Geneal. ed. Roberts, i. 157; Patent Rolls, 45 Hen. III. m. 8 d.). Johanna de Morvilla (or Gernun) died in 1246—7, when the first Richard and Radulph Boyvill did homage for her property (Pipe Rolls, 31 Hen. III.; Inquis. p. m. 31 Hen. III. No. 32; Fine Rolls, 31 Hen. III. ed. Roberts, ii. 10 and Calend. Geneal. i. 16). In 1227, Richard and Johanna entered into an agreement with the Abbey of S. Mary, at York, in regard to lands at Cringledic (see on No. 174). The manor of Aikton in the Barony of Burgh, which fell to them, was said to be their chief residence.

104. CARTA RICARDI DE LUSEY FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHALE DE DUABUS SALINIS IN PAROCHIA DE BURGO.

SCIANT omnes qui viderint et audierint litteras istas quod Ego Richardus de Lucy¹ cum consilio et assensu Adæ uxoris meæ et amicorum meorum concessi et hac carta mea confirmavi Monachis de Wederhal duas Salinas between Henry III. and Alexander II., King of Scotland, Sept. 25th, 1237 (Rymer, Fœdera, new edn. i. 233).

104. ¹ Richard de Lucy and Ada his wife have already been spoken of in the notes on Nos. 101 (note 8) and 103 (note 1). In Testa de Nevill (p. 379*b*) he is mentioned as holding, with Richard Gernun, the land of Hugo de Morvill on a cornage rent. He was not the Richard de Lucy who was Chief Justiciar of England for so long in the 12th century, but the son of Reginald de Lucy and Amabilia "Countess of Copland," the second of the three daughters and coheirs of William FitzDuncan and Alicia de Romely, daughter of William Meschin (see on No. 2, note 5). In 1200—1, he accounted for 300 marcs for having his land in Coplanda and Cambridge, for leave to marry whom he will, and other privileges. In 1204—5, he had married Ada de Morville and got her property and the forestry of the whole Forest of Cumberland (see on No. 103, and for the preceding relationships the Pipe Rolls for 2, 3, 4 and 6th of John, and Dugdale, Baronage, i. 563). He died in 1215 or shortly before, and his widow then obtained livery of her lands (Pipe Rolls, 16 Joh.). He left two daughters, Amabilis and Alicia, of whom Thomas de Multon the elder (see note 4 on No. 47) obtained the wardship; their mother Ada married this Thomas; and his two sons, Alan and Lambert de Multon, respectively married the daughters Amabilis and Alicia, though under age (see Testa de Nevill, p. 378*b*; Coram Rege Rolls, 7 and 8 Hen. III. No. 17 m. 22 d.; Feet of Fines, Cumb. 15 Hen. III. No. 12). Ada became the mother of Thomas de Multon the younger, who married Matilda de Vallibus.

Descent of the parties referred to in the preceding note:—

106. CARTA DAVID COMITIS FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHAL DE VILLA DE KARKAREVILL ET ECCLESIA EJUSDEM.

OMNIBUS videntibus vel audientibus litteras has David Comes¹ Salutem. Sciatis me concessisse Deo et Sanctæ

² Drumboc, or Drumbegh, said to be "the bog of the bitterns," was in the parish of Bowness on Solway. Here was a Roman station, not certainly identified, but near the end of the great Roman wall.

³ The date of this charter must be before 1240 when Thos. de Multon died, and after his marriage in 1217—18.

106. ¹ This was apparently the Earl David who was afterwards David I., King of Scotland from 1124 to 1153, and not the Earl David who was brother to King William the Lion. He was the youngest son of Malcolm Ceanmor and Queen Margaret, and ruled over Scotland south of the Forth and Clyde to the Solway Firth with the title of Comes or Earl, from 1107 to 1124 (see Skene, Celtic Scotland, i. 445, 455). His sister Matilda had married Henry I.; his wife was also

107. CONFIRMATIO ROBERTI FILIJ BUEC FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHALE DE TOTA TERRA QUAM PATER SUUS DEDIT EIS IN BUCHASTRE.

UNIVERSIS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs hoc scriptum visuris vel auditoris Robertus filius Buec¹ de Buchastre called Matilda. He founded the monastery of Selkirk in 1113, and among the Norman Barons who are witnesses to the charter is Robert de Brus (quoted by Skene l.c.). There are two original charters extant, copied in facsimile in National MSS. of Scotland, i. Nos. xix., xx., by which King David gave to Robert de Brus Anandale (Estranent or Strathanan) with the rights of forest therein; see also Illustrative Docum. 1. For his charter to Wederhal when King, see No. 198.

² Karkarevill was probably in Anandale, but I have been unable to identify the place. There was a Kirkonevill in Galloway, mentioned in the Register of Holm Cultram.

⁴ The date of the charter will be during the time David ruled as Earl, 1107 to 1124.

107. ¹ Bueth, or Buec, or Boed, would seem to have held the district which afterwards formed the Barony of Gilsland, or Gillesland, and the country immediately to the north of it. The name appears here in the place name Buchastre, Buchecastre, or Buethcastre. But Gille, or Gilles, the son of Bueth, brings us more into historic times. In an Inquisition found in the Register of Glasgow, and made in 1120—21 by Earl David concerning the lands of the Church of Glasgow, one of Salutem. Noveritis me intuitu caritatis pro salute animæ meæ et prædecessorum meorum et successorum concessisse et presenti carta confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhale et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus totam terram cum pertinentiis several "Cumbrenses iudices" was Gill. filius Boed (Haddan and Stubbs, Eccles. Doc. ii. 17). From him, no doubt, Gillesland took its name. In the charter of Henry II. in 1157 granting this district to Hubert de Vallibus, the district is described as "totam terram quam Gilbertus filius Boet tenuit" (Illustrative Docum. XXII.). Gilbert would be an incorrect rendering of Gille or Gilles, but there is no doubt who is meant. On Gillesland, see No. 191. In the Foundation Charter of Lanercost (Illustrative Documents XXIII.) and in the Confirmation by Pope Alexander III. in 1181 (Register, MS. viii. 17) certain lands are described—"per has divisas per quas Gille filius Bueth illam melius et plenius in vita sua tenuit," and again—"Dedi autem eis omnem corticem de merremio meo proprio...in boscis meis infra Baroniam meam de terra quae fuit Gille filii Bueth." There is abundant evidence, therefore, of Gillé the son of Bueth holding part of the territory before Hubert de Vallibus obtained the grant from Henry II. In the Register of Lanercost (MS. iii. 1) there is a charter of one Buethbarn, granting the church of (Nether) Denton to the Priory of Lanercost. This is confirmed in the next charter (MS. iii. 2, also xii. 26) by Robert son of Bueth who speaks of Buethbarn as his father. To both these charters, Robert, Archdeacon (of Carlisle) and Robert de Vallibus are witnesses. In the charter following (iii. 3) also by Robert son of Bueth, he speaks of his father Bueth and John his nephew. Buethbarn and Bueth are therefore identical, but must be different from that Bueth whose son Gille lived in 1120. Bueth seems to be the family name, and Buethbarn, or Bueth's child, one of the family. Robert son of Bueth was the brother-in-law of Robert son of Asketill (or Anketin or Asketin) who was father of the "nephew John" spoken of above (Register, MS. iii. 5, 8). They join in two grants to the Priory of Lanercost (MS. iii. 6, 10); and in the latter mention is made of Bueth, also of Eda and Sigrida, one of whom Robert son of Asketin had married. In the Pipe Rolls, we find that Robert son of Bueth was fined one marc in 1177, for having been with the enemies of the King. He is witness to several of the charters of Robert de Vallibus and others of the period (Regist. Lanercost, MS. i. 6, 8; ii. 9, 12). Robert de Buethcastre is said to have given the Church of Bewcastle to the Priory of Carlisle.

Hijs Testibus, Adam de Raveneswic⁵, Willelmo fratre ejus⁶, Gilberto Sacerdote de Camboc⁷, Rogero Capellano, ² Buchastre, or Buethcastre, is now Bewcastle; the name Bueth appears in other places in Gilsland, as Buetholme and Buethby (Regist. Lanercost, MS. iii. 8 et al.). The manor of Buchecastre is mentioned in No. 109. It lies about 7 miles due north of Lanercost and is the northernmost parish of the county of Cumberland, touching Scotland on the north-west and Northumberland on the east and north-east. Here was a Roman station, not far from the Maiden Way; and in the churchyard is the famous Saxon Runic Cross. The castle, of later date than the time of Gille son of Bueth, probably occupies the site of the castle where the family of Bueth resided, and where Gille son of Bueth held the district until his death. We find the family now holding the vill and manor, in the days of Robert de Vallibus. It was called Bewecastell as early as 1488 (Cal. Doc. Scot. ed. Bain, iv. 315); see also on Adam de Swynburne, No. 111.

⁵ Adam de Raveneswic appears in the Pipe Rolls in 1178, and again in 1185.

Irthing. This parish has practically died out, and has become merged in the neighbouring parishes of Lanercost and Stapleton. The Church was originally a rectory; in March 1259, Radulf de Tyllioll was rector, and entered into an agreement with the Priory of Lanercost in regard to the tithe and the division between Cambok and Lanercost (Register of Lanercost, MS. xv. 18). In 1304, there was an inquisition as to the right of patronage, when it was determined that Richard de Tyrer and the Priory of Carlisle had alternate right of presentation; on the presentation of the latter, Alexander de Crokedayke was instituted; and in 1305, on the presentation of the former, Simon de Tyrer was instituted, an annual pension of 2s. customary ab antiquo being allowed to the Cathedral of Carlisle (Register Bishop Halton, MS. pp. 78, 91). There was no Church, only "very small remains," or any Rector, in the time of Bishop Nicolson, 1703. It does not appear in the Valor of Henry VIII.

⁹ Alan son of William de Raveneswic, and therefore nephew of Adam.

The advowson of the Church was granted about this time to the monks of Wederhal (No. 121) and William, clerk, now presented by Robert son of Bueth, was presented anew by them and instituted by Archdeacon Peter de Ros (No. 120). This presentation by Robert is confirmed by Peter de Ros in No. 123.

111. ¹ This Parsona was Richer the Parson of Buchcastre (see Nos. 109, 110) and the word Buchcastre is probably omitted here.

² Walter de Mulcaster, or Molecastre, is mentioned with the above Robert de la Feritate in an Inquisition held in 1281—82 with regard to the manor of Lydel on the Scotch border (Inquis. post mort. 10 Edw. I. No. 26). He there is said to hold North Eston and a tenement in Arthuret. He seems to have been known as Sir Walter de Mulcaster of Arthuret, to the north of Carlisle; but Mulcaster, or Moelcastre (hodie Muncaster), connected with other members of the family, was on the west coast, south of the Derwent. The word is derived from the Celtic moel, “a bare hill” or “headland”; compare the Mull of Cantire.

party to the plundering of the Priory of Hexham. He seems later to have made peace with the King. In 1338, or shortly before, Adam died, as well as his son Henry; and his daughter Barnaba, wife of Sir John de Strivelyn, succeeded to Bothecastre and his other property. This daughter Barnaba was living in 1357—58, and her lands in Cumberland were restored by the King, Edward III., on account of the services of her husband, although in the time of the King's father she had been in allegiance with the Scots, and lived in the family of Robert de Brus. In 1401, the Castle of Bothe belonged to John, son and heir of Sir John de Middelton. See the numerous refs. in Calend. Doc. Scot. ed. J. Bain (especially ii. 32, 172; iii. 238; iv. 1, 2, 121). The account in Nicolson and Burn (History ii. 476) is strangely incorrect.

112. ¹ It does not appear exactly who this Gerard de Lascelis was. He held lands in Levington (see below on Hedresford) by agreement with the Lord of Levington (see on No. 114). As we have seen, the family of Lascelis was connected with the Corkeby family, not far from this time, Isabella, daughter of Robert son of William, having married Alan de Lascelis for her second husband (see on Nos. 37, 47). Gerard had a son Elyas who appears in No. 116. There was a Gerard de Lasceles in the preceding century, who held lands in Asby, Westmoreland. In a grant of lands made by him about 1160—70 to the monks of Byland, his brother Alan de Lasceles is mentioned, his son Alan, his son-in-law Richard de Crosby and a Robert de Lasceles a party to the agreement. It is attested by Robert Archdeacon of Carlisle, also by Maureward de Appleby. The elder Alan of these may well have been the Alan de Lascelis who with Archdeacon Robert witnesses the charter of Earl Henry to Holm Cultram in 1150. The original charter of this Gerard de Lasceles is one of the Levens Hall MSS.; see 10th Report Hist. MSS. Commission (iv.) p. 321.

intuitu et pro salute animarum Prædecessorum et Successorum meorum dedisse concessisse et præsentī carta mea confirmasse Deo et Abachiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci necnon et Monachis Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhal viginti acras terræ arabilis in territorio de Hedresford² in cultura quæ vocatur Scalingrig et unam acram et unam rodam terræ in eodem territorio in alio loco in eadem Cultura quæ dicitur Scalingrig. Habendas et Tenendas in liberam puram et perpetuam Elemosinam, et dicti Monachi habebunt in perpetuam Elemosinam in prædicta Villa de Hedresford ex dono meo et concessione pasturam ad trecentos multones³ vel ad trecentas oves. Et habebunt imperpetuum ex dono meo et concessione pasturam in prædicta villa ad novem boves et ad quatuor vaccas cum sequela unius anni et ad unum Equum et unam Equam cum sequela unius anni et ad quatuor porcos vel quatuor sues cum porcellis suis usque ad tempus separationis. Et insuper capient sufficienter omnia estuveria⁴ sua ad edificandum claudendum et comburendum in boscis et moris et in omnibus alijs locis ad Villam de Hedresford spectantibus sine alicujus visu vel impedimento scilicet quantum pertinet ad prædictum Tenementum. Et sciendum est quod si quid de prædictis acris in prædicta cultura

115. QUIETA CLAMATIO GERARDI LASCELS FACTA

114. ¹ This is, no doubt, R. for Ranulph de Boyvill of Levington, the brother and heir of Richard de Levington (see note 5 on No. 54). He would obtain this property, which he and A. his wife had here leased to Gerard de Lascels, through his wife Ada. She was one of the two daughters of Johanna, daughter of Hugh de Morville, and Richard Gernun; she married William Furnival on the death of Ranulph de Levington (see note 1 on No. 103). Ranulph had livery of the lands of his brother Richard de Levington in 1250; but he did not keep them long, as he was dead in January 1253—54, leaving a daughter and heir Helewisa, who married Eustace de Balliol. Ada, his widow, became heir to her sister Helewisa, widow of Richard de Vernun, in 1270 (Inquis. post mort. 54 Hen. III. No. 19) and died shortly after.

PRIORI DE WEDERHALE DE UNO BISANCIO QUOD RECIPERE SOLEBAT AB EODEM.

OMNIBUS hanc cartam visuris vel auditoris Gerardus de Lasceles Salutem æternam in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra me remisisse et quietum clamasse de me et Hæredibus meis imperpetuum Deo et Beatæ Mariæ Eboraci nec non et Priori et Monachis Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhale unum Bisancium¹ quod solebam annuatim percipere de Camera prædicti Prioris de Wederhal prout continebatur in quadam carta quam habui de Abbate et Conventu Eboraci quam prædicto Priori in confectione hujus cartæ reddidi. Et pro hac remissione et quietâ clamatione dederunt mihi in magna necessitate mea de bonis Ecclesiæ suæ viginti quinque solidos et octo denarios. Et ne Ego vel aliquis Hæredum meorum contra hanc cartam venire poterimus illam sigilli mei impressione roboravi. Hijs Testibus Domino R. Priore Karlioli², Domino W. Archidiacono Karliolensi³, Domino W. Vicecomite Karlioli⁴, Domino Ricardo de Levington, Domino Petro Tyllo, Domino Willelmo filio Rogeri de Korkebi, Willelmo de Warthwic, Johanne Stelfot, Roberto de Horneby⁵, Willelmo de Langcost et alijs⁶.

115. ¹ Bisancium, "a besant" or "byzant." The silver besant, which is evidently meant here, was worth about two shillings. The gold besant was worth about £15, and was so called from the place where they were first struck, Byzantium (Constantinople). The word has come to us from the Latin, through the Old French. Gerard makes here a curious quitclaim of this annual besant for the sum of 25s. 8d. given to him by the Convent in his great necessity.

116. OBLIGATIO GERARDI DE LASCELS DE NON MOVENDA LITE CONTRA PRIOREM DE WEDERHALE VEL ALIQUEM DE SUIS.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus presentes litteras inspecturis vel audituris Gerardus de Lascelis Salutem æternam in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra quod Ego tactis Sacrosanctis juravi pro me et Elya filio meo quod nunquam Ego nec ipse movebimus calumpniam, vel litem contra Willelmum Priorem de Wederhal¹ vel aliquem hominum suorum coram Justiciarijs vel aliquo alio Ballivo in mundo Ratione alicujus Controversiæ motæ inter dictum Priorem et homines suos et me et filium meum. Et si (quod absit) instigante Diabolo quandoque contra tenorem presentis scripti Ego vel filius meus venire presumpserimus tanquam perjuri et excommunicati in omnibus locis repellamur. Et insuper Ego Gerardus sub prædicto juramento, prædicto Priori Centum solidos nomine pænæ persolvam, Renunciando Civilis Fori privilegio et omni juris auxilio. In cujus rei Testimonium presenti scripto sigillum meum apposui. [Testibus] Domino Willelmo filio Rogeri et Osanna uxore sua, Alano de Langetheit, Alano Malekat², Willelmo Clerico de Agulunby, Willelmo et David de Korkeby³, Galfrido, Hamelino, Henrico, Adam, Ricardo Clerico servientibus de Wederhale, Stephano et Alexandro de Neuby⁴ et alijs⁵.

116. ¹ William Rundel, Prior of Wederhal, who was made Abbot of S. Mary's, York, in 1239, see Appendix E.

² This is probably Alan Malekak; as Alan Malecake he granted lands in Brampton to the Priory of Lanercost (Regist. Lanercost, MS. ii. 7) and William son of Roger attests the deed. The name occurs in the Chart. of Whitby (ed. Atkinson, i. 112) and the Chart. of Rievaulx (ed. Atkinson, p. 118 et al.).

117. CONFIRMATIO EPISCOPI KARLIOLENSIS SUPER COMPOSITIONEM FACTAM INTER MONACHOS DE WEDERHALE ET CANONICOS DE LANERCOST DE ECCLESIA DE DENTON¹.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam hoc presens scriptum pervenerit W.² Dei Gratia Karliolensis Episcopus Salutem æternam in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra Nos compositionem factam coram iudicibus a Domino propterea delegatis inter Monachos Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et de Wederhal et W. et R. de Buchecastre Clericos³ ex una parte et Canonicos de Lanercost⁴

117. ¹ This is a Confirmation by Bishop Bernard of the Composition made in No. 119 between the Monks of Wederhal and the Canons of Lanercost, and confirms the Church of (Nether) Denton to them for ever; see note 3 on No. 34.

³ The term "clerks" is, apparently, not here the law term, but is used of the incumbents of the two moieties of the living. The legal "clerk" was very generally in the ministry. The term was also used to denote a secular in opposition to a regular priest.

et W. Archidiaconum de Notingham⁶ ex altera super Ecclesia de Denton⁶ ratam habere et firmam. Et quia volumus conditionem dictorum Monachorum et Canoniorum intuitu Dei et Caritatis in dicta Ecclesia meliorare Noveritis quod de assensu Capituli nostri concessimus et confirmavimus dictis Monachis de Wederhal et Canonicis de Lanercost prædictam Ecclesiam de Denton in usus proprios imperpetuum. Ita quidem quod liceat dictis Monachis et Canonicis post decessum W. et R. Clericorum in dictam Ecclesiam ingredi auctoritate propria et eandem pacifice possidere imperpetuum sine aliquorum contradictione vel impedimento salvis Nobis et Successoribus nostris Sinodalibus et Archidiaconalibus. Et ut hoc scriptum nostræ concessionis et confirmationis perpetuæ

⁶ This was William Testard, Archdeacon of Notingham (on the one t being correct, see Skeat, English Etymology, i. 258), which was then in the province and diocese of York. He took an active part in the violent controversy between the Chapter of York and Archbishop Geoffrey Plantagenet, brother of Richard I. He had been the agent of Archbp Geoffrey at Rome in 1190, when the quarrel began; but with Hamo the Treasurer (who attests No. 119) he joined the others against him in 1194, and in September of that year was one of those who, with Simon of Apulia (who attests No. 119) and Geoffrey de Muschamp, carried the appeal to Rome. In 1199, he was present when the dispute was submitted to the arbitration of the Bishop of Lincoln and others; but it was not settled until 1200, when at Westminster William Testard and others were received by the Archbishop to the kiss of peace (Roger de Hoveden, iii. 272, iv. 98, 126 and see Bishop Stubbs' excellent account of the controversy in his Preface to vol. iv.). He is a witness to the confirmation charter of Archbp Geoffrey to the Priory of Lanercost (Register, MS. viii. 15) with Geoffrey (de Muscamp) Archbishop of Cleveland, who was made Bishop of Lichfield in 1198, and J. (John) Bishop of Whiterne or Candida Casa, who was certainly at York with G. de Muscamp in 1195 (R. de Hoveden, iii. 286). William Testard was made Dean of York October 29th, 1214 (Patent Rolls, 16 Joh. Record Com. p. 123a) and died before 1221.

UNIVERSIS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs ad quorum notitiam hoc præsens scriptum pervenerit H. Dei Gratia Karliolensis Episcopus¹ salutem æternam in Domino. Quoniam ex injuncto nobis Curæ Pastoralis Officio tenemur subjectorum nostrorum et præcipue Religiosorum commoditati misericorditer providere, Noverit universitas vestra Nos Divinæ Pietatis intuitu de assensu Capituli Nostri Karliolensis Ecclesiæ Ecclesiam de Dentona quam felicis memoriæ prædecessor noster W.² quondam Karlio-

⁷ Adam de Aspatic, Dean of Allerdale, see note 5 on No. 43.

⁸ Adam de Kirkebithore was lord of the manor of Kirbythore in Westmorland, the son of Waldiev son of Gamel son of Whelp; he and his father granted certain lands there to the Abbey of Holm Cultram (Register Holm Cultram, p. 126, seq.; the charters are also set out in Nicolson and Burn, History i. 376 from Machel MSS. v. 471, 479). In 1206 he appeared as defendant in an action brought against him by Matilda, wife of William Mauchael, concerning lands in Crackenthorp (Pedes Finium, 8 Joh. Westmorland). From the above-named charters it appears that he had a brother Alan and a son Gilbert (see also on No. 200). His father Waldiev in witness to a grant of lands in Coleby by William de Bretton in the time of Abbot Clement 1161—84 (Additional Charters No. 252).

⁹ We have John, Prior in 1204 (see on No. 31), and the other witnesses occur about the early years of the century. They agree with the date assigned to Bishop Bernard in Appendix D, 1204—14.

118. ¹ Hugh de Beaulieu, 3rd Bishop of Carlisle, February, 1218—19 to 1223, see note 1 on No. 19.

lensis Episcopus Domibus de Wederhale et de Lanercost communiter concessit sicut in ipsius autentico scripto et carta Capituli super hoc confectis plenius continetur, eisdem domibus et viris Religiosis in eisdem manentibus cum omnibus suis pertinentiis ad eorum proprios et communes usus perpetuo concessisse et præsentis scripti patrocínio confirmasse. UNIVERSIS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs ad quos præsens scriptum pervenerit R. de Gysburne² et W. de Novo Castro³ Priores et P. Supprior de Dunelmo æternam

⁴ Adam de Kirkeby, see note 6 on No. 19.

⁵ Philip de Ardenne, or Arderne, was one of the emissaries of Henry III. in 1228 to the Pope about the affairs of the Bishopric of Durham (Close Rolls, II Hen. III. m. 20, Record Com. i. p. 207 b).

⁶ The date of the charter lies between 1218 and 1223.

119. ¹ This is the Composition which is confirmed in the two preceding Charters.

² Roald was Prior of Gyseburne in 1199, and a contemporary of Archbishop Geoffrey Plantagenet (see Chart. Gyseburne, ed. Brown, p. xxvii).

in Domino Salutem. Noverit universitas vestra quod causa quæ vertebatur inter Monachos Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Monachos de Wederhal et W. et R. de Buchecastre Clericos ex una parte et Canonicos de Lanercost et Magistrum W. Archidiaconum de Notingham ex alia super Ecclesia de Denton nobis a Domino propterea commissa amicabiliter sopita est. Ita scilicet quod præfati Monachi de Eboraco et de Wederhal habebunt totam medietatem prædictæ Ecclesiæ de Denton et Canonici de Lanercost aliam medietatem nomine Ecclesiæ de Brancton, Et prenominati W. et R. clerici de Buchecastre persolvent annuatim jam dictis Monachis apud Wederhal duos solidos nomine pensionis prædictæ Ecclesiæ, et alios duos solidos Canonicis de Lanercost nomine pensionis ejusdem Ecclesiæ de Denton. Et si contigerit eandem Ecclesiam vacare Monachi prædicti præsentabunt Clericum ad suam medietatem, et Canonici de Lanercost præsentabunt Clericum ad suam medietatem. Et si contingat Deo volente quod alterutra portio...sive Monachorum sive Canonicorum præfatorum quocunque modo eisdem melioretur et Monachi et Canonici jam dicti communiter percipient emolumentum inde proveniens et inter se dimidiabunt. Et ut ratum permaneat quod coram nobis sollempniter actum præsentis scripto sigilla nostra dignum duximus apponere. Hijs Testibus S. Decano⁴, H. Thesaurario⁵, Magistro G.

just at this time, 1198, and died in 1208. No Prior W. is given in Dugdale, Monasticon.

Canonico Eborum⁶, Magistro R. de Karliolo Canonico de Lanercost⁷.

Stubbs, iii. 283 sq.). Concerning the subsequent contest, see note 5 on No. 117. Other details concerning Simon are given by Roger de Hoveden. He was made Bishop of Exeter in October, 1214, and died in September, 1223.

⁵ Hamo, or Hamund, was Treasurer of York and a party to the troubles mentioned above on William Testard and Simon of Apulia. From 1186 to 1189, when Hubert Walter was Dean and Geoffrey Plantagenet was Treasurer, Hamo was precentor of York. Benedict Abbas (ed. Stubbs i. 352) names him as one of the five nominated to Henry II. by the Chapter of York, in September 1186, to fill the long vacant See of York, all of whom the King rejected. When Geoffrey was elected to the See in 1189, Hubert Walter the Dean, who was disappointed of the office, led the Chapter in hostile action against him. Hamo had held the office of Precentor many years, and had been promised the treasuryship by Archbp Roger before his death in 1181 (see Benedict Abbas ii. 88). When Geoffrey was appointed in 1181, Hamo too was a disappointed man; and when the office was given to Bouchard de Puiset in 1189, he refused to instal him. At first he was friendly with Archbp Geoffrey, and took his part against the Chapter in 1190, and was one of his agents in Rome. In 1194 on the renewed quarrel of the Archbishop with the Chapter, Hamo took active part against him. On the peace which was made, see above on W. Testard. When Bouchard de Puiset died in 1196, Eustace, the keeper of the king's seal, was made Treasurer; and Hamo was again disappointed; but when Eustace was made Bishop of Ely in March 1198, Hamo at last became the Treasurer of York, and Reginald Arundel succeeded as Precentor (R. de Hoveden, iv. 41, 98). He appears to have held the office as late as July 1215 (Patent Rolls, 17 Joh., Record Com. p. 151 a). Hamo and Simon the Dean attest three charters of Bishop Bernard in the Chartulary of Whitby (ed. Atkinson, i. 41).

120. CONFIRMATIO CUSTODIS EPISCOPATUS KARLIOLI SUPER INSTITUTIONE WILLELMI CLERICI PRÆSENTATI AD ECCLESIAM DE DENTON¹.

PETRUS DE ROS Archidiaconus Karliolensis et custos Episcopatus² ejusdem Universis Clericis et Laicis per Episcopatum Karlioli constitutis litteras has visuris vel audituris in Domino Salutem. Quoniam ea quæ coram nobis gesta sunt ad præsentium et posterorum memoriam volumus pervenire, Noverit universitas vestra Robertum filium Buec de Buchcastre in præsentia mea et aliorum multorum fide dignorum advocationem Ecclesiæ de Denton Abbati et Conventui Sanctæ Mariæ Eborum et Monachis de Wederhale carta sua concessisse et confirmasse et eundem Abbatem de jure Patronatus ejusdem Ecclesiæ coram nobis sansisse. 120. ¹ This is the Confirmation of the institution of William, Clerk, to the Church of Denton, to which he had been presented de novo by the Abbot of York and the monks of Wederhal, to whom Robert son of Bueth had granted the advowson (see below and No. 121). Robert had previously presented William, Clerk (No. 108), and the institution had also been confirmed by Peter de Ros (No. 123).

² Peter de Ros, Archdeacon, was Custos of the See in the vacancy before Bishop Bernard. He ceased to be Archdeacon before 1192 when Robert held the office (see note 3 on No. 31).

SCIANT omnes tam præsentis quam futuri quod Ego Robertus filius Buec cum consilio uxoris meæ et amicorum meorum concessi et dedi et hac mea carta confirmavi Deo et Sanctæ Mariæ Eborum et Monachis de Wederhal Ecclesiam de Dentona cum terra eidem Ecclesiæ pertinente et cum omnibus pertinentijs suis et octo insuper acras terræ in omnibus aisiamentis intra Villam et extra quas David² tenuit in liberam puram et perpetuam Elemosinam pro animabus Patris et Matris meæ et pro salute mea et Uxoris meæ et omnium Parentum meorum. Hanc vero donationem Ego Robertus et hæredes mei warantizabimus eis contra omnes homines. Testibus, Thoma Officiali Karliolensi³, Willelmo Decano⁴, Johanne Parsona de Arturet⁵, Pipe Rolls for 1177 and 1178 as not having yet got seisin of Westham (Westlinton). As Adam son of Adam de Leventon, he is witness to a charter of Robert son of Bueth in the Register of Lanercost (MS. iii. 10).

⁶ From Archdeacon Peter de Ros, the date of the charter must be before 1192 and probably very shortly after 1180, with which date the witnesses agree.

121. ¹ This is the grant of the advowson of the Church of Denton to the monks of Wederhal, which necessitated the presentation de novo of William, Clerk, and the Confirmation in the preceding charter.

³ Thomas de Thorp, see on No. 40.

⁴ William de Kirkbride, Dean of Carlisle, as in No. 120; see note 4 on No. 31.

⁵ Arturet, or Arthuret, or Ardderyd (qu. Arthur's head) was on the river Esk, in the Barony of Liddell, or Lyddale, which was given

122. CONFIRMATIO PRIORIS ET CONVENTUS KARLIOLENSIS SUPER ECCLESIA DE DENTON¹.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam hoc præsens scriptum pervenerit Johannes Prior et Conventus Sanctæ Mariæ Karlioli Salutem. Noverit universitas vestra nos ratum et gratum prebuisse assensum collationem et concessionem quam Venerabilis Pater B. Episcopus noster² by Ranulf Meschin to Turgis Brundis, a Fleming, and which was in the time of King John and Henry III. held by Nicholas de Stutevill, his descendant (Testa de Nevill, Record Com. p. 279 b). Arthuret Church lies about 8 miles north of Carlisle. It was the border parish from which the parish of Kirkandrews on Esk was taken; and it included the ancient parish of Eston, mentioned in No. 14, but it does not appear when the latter was absorbed. The advowson of the Church of Arthuret, according to the Register of Bishop John de Rosse, in 1330 (page 262), was given by Turgis de Russedale, "Lord of the manor of Lydale," to the Abbey of Jeddwerth (Jedburgh), which grant was confirmed by Bishop Bernard (see on No. 247, also Inquis. ad quod dam. 2 Edw. III. No. 3, Record Com. p. 288). It was here the great battle of Ardderyd was fought in 573, the last between the Christians and the pagans; the victory gave Rydderch, the friend of Kentigern and Columba, the whole kingdom of Cumbria, and he placed his capital at Alcluyd or Dumbarton (see Skene, Celtic Scotland ii. 190; Chron. Pict. pp. xciii, 161).

⁷ The date of this charter must be shortly before that of No. 120, and after that of No. 108; probably shortly after 1180, certainly before 1192.

122. ¹ This is the Confirmation by the Prior and Convent of Carlisle of the act of Bishop Bernard in No. 117.

² Episcopus noster shews that Bishop Bernard was alive at this time. We note that his concession is to the Houses of Wederhal and Lanercost.

fecit Abbati et Conventui Sanctæ Mariæ Eborum et Domibus de Wederhal et Lanercost super Ecclesia de Denton in proprios usus eorum habenda sicut in ejusdem Episcopi nostri Instrumento super hoc confecto plenius continetur. Ad cujus rei perpetuam confirmationem præsentī scripto sigillum Capituli nostri apposuimus³.

123. CONFIRMATIO WILLELMI CLERICI INSTITUTI IN ECCLESIAM DE DENTON PER PETRUM DE ROS CUSTODEM EPISCOPATUS KARLIOLI SEDE VACANTE¹.

PETRUS DE ROS Archidiaconus Karliolensis Custos Episcopatus ejusdem Universis Clericis et Laicis per Episcopatum Karliolensem constitutis Litteras has visuris vel audituris in Domino Salutem. Sciatis nos recepisse Willelmum Clericum de Denton in Ecclesia de Denton vacante ad præsentationem Roberti filij Buec de Buchecastre ad quem jus Patronatus de jure spectare dinoscitur, et eum in ipsam Ecclesiam cum omnibus pertinentijs suis Canonice instituisse et institutionem ipsius præsentī carta nostra confirmasse salvo jure Episcopali et nostro et Officialium nostrorum. Hijs Testibus, Thoma de Thorp Officiali Karliolensi, Willelmo Decano Karliolensi, Adam de Levington, Gilberto de Camboc, Ricardo de Harton, Alano de Ravenwic, Thoma fratre ejus, Randulpho de Ranewic, Thoma Diacono de Warthwic et multis alijs².

124. QUIETA CLAMATIO FACTA WILLELMO CLERICO SUPER MEDIETATEM ECCLESIE DE DENTON PER CANONICOS DE LANERCOST.

³ The date of this charter must be very shortly after No. 117.

123. ¹ This is the Confirmation of the institution of William, Clerk, to Denton on the presentation of Robert son of Bueth, and must have preceded that of No. 120 when William had been presented de novo by the Abbey of S. Mary, York, and the monks of Wederhal.

S.¹ PRIOR de Lanercost humilisque Conventus ejusdem loci Universis Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filiis Salutem. Noverit universitas vestra nos Divinæ Pietatis intuitu concessisse dedisse et hac præsentī carta confirmasse Wilhelmo Clerico de Denton totam medietatem² Ecclesiæ de Denton cum omnibus pertinentijs suis reddendo nobis inde annuatim duos solidos quos de Vicario suo recipiet ad Nundinas Karleoli. Et ut hæc nostra concessio rata et illibata permaneat eam præsentī scripto et sigilli nostri appositione roboravimus. Hijs Testibus, Ricardo de Heiton³ Parsona, Stephano fratre ejus, Bernardo Parsona de Ulmsby⁴, Reginaldo filio ejus, Fabiano Clerico et Wilhelmo fratre ejus, Gilberto Parsona de Camboc, Clemente Sacerdote et multis alijs⁵.

125. CARTA JOHANNIS DE DENTON DE OCTO ACRIS TERRRÆ IN EADEM.

UNIVERSIS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs tam præsentibus

124. ¹ This is Symon, Prior of Lanercost, who appears in the Confirmation to that Priory by Pope Alexander III. in 1181 and Pope Lucius III. in 1184 (Regist. Lanercost MS. viii. 17, 18). There was another Prior Simon, Simon de Driffeld, who succeeded John de Galwythia (see on No. 75) August 16th, 1283 (Chron. de Lanercost ed. Stevenson p. 113).

⁴ Ulmsby, Ulvesby or Ulfbsby, now Ousby, was a parish in Cumberland on the east side of the river Eden, between Kirkland and Melmorby.

The following would seem to be the order of this series of charters:—(1) No. 108, (2) No. 123, (3) No. 121, (4) No. 120, (5) No. 119, (6) No. 117, (7) No. 122, (8) No. 124, (9) No. 118, and (10) No. 34.

quam futuris ad quorum notitiam hoc præsens scriptum pervenerit Johannes de Denton¹ salutem. Noscat universitas vestra me Caritatis intuitu dedisse concessisse et hac præsentī carta mea confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eborum et Monachis Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhal et Luminariis Ecclesiæ suæ octo acras terræ in territorio de Denton in cultura scilicet quæ vocatur Werduthel in escambio illarum octo acrarum quas Robertus filius Bueth Avunculus meus prædictis Monachis in liberam puram et perpetuam dedit Elemosinam. Habendas et Tenendas sibi in liberam puram et perpetuam Elemosinam cum omnibus pertinentijs libertatibus et aisia-mentis suis infra Villam et extra adeo libere et quiete in omnibus ut aliqua Elemosina liberius et quietius dari possit aut possideri. Et ego et Hæredes mei warantizabimus prædictis Monachis prædictas octo acras terræ cum perti-mentijs contra omnes homines imperpetuum. Et ne quis Hæredum meorum contra hoc factum meum venire impos-terum possit præsentī scripto cum sigilli mei appositione illud corroboravi. 125. ¹ John de Denton was the son of Robert son of Asketill, or Asketin, or Anketin; his father had married a sister (Eda or Sigrida) of Robert son of Bueth; hence below he calls the latter avunculus meus (see note 1 on No. 107); in the different form of his name, he attests the charter of Robert son of Bueth, No. 121. His name occurs often in the Register of Lanercost under both forms; thus (MS. v. 26) John son of Robert son of Anketin grants land in Pirihton to Agnes his sister and her husband Eustachius; Robert and Anketin his brothers being witnesses; as John de Denton, he grants the whole land of Pirihton to the Priory (MS. iii. 7). He had a son John who (MS. iii. 9) confirmed the grants of his father John to the Priory of Lanercost; this son John de Denton granted them charters in 1273 (MS. ix. 15) and 1278 (MS. x. 14), and is the John de Denton mentioned in this Register in No. 47, and in No. 194 in the year 1271.

126. QUIETA CLAMATIO ELYE FILIJ DAVID DE DENTON FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHALE DE TOTA TERRA QUAM DE EIS TENUIT IN DENTON.

UNIVERSIS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs tam præsentibus quam futuris Elyas filius David de Denton¹ Salutem. Noverit Universitas vestra me Dei amore et pro salute animæ meæ resignasse et quietam clamasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis de Wederhale et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus totam terram cum pertinentijs quam aliquando de prædictis Monachis tenui in Denton. Habendam et Tenendam sibi imperpetuum ad sustentamentum luminis coram altari Sanctæ Trinitatis in eadem Ecclesia Ipsamque pro me et hæredibus meis et in pleno Comitatu Karleoli abjurasse. Et ne aliquis hæredum meorum possit in posterum aut debeat contra hanc resignationem et quietam clamationem venire Ego prædictus Elyas de Denton prædictis Monachis de Wederhal præsens scriptum cum appositione sigilli mei confirmavi et corroboravi imperpetuum. Hijs Testibus, Domino Roberto filio

² Denth. will be a contraction for Denton. Robert, son of Robert de Denton, and brother of John, is mentioned in the note above, and Simon son of Robert de Denton occurs with John, Prior of Lanercost, in the Register of Lanercost (MS. xv. 19).

126. ¹ David de Denton held this land in the time of Robert son of Bueth (see No. 121) but it does not appear what relation he was though several of the family attest this deed.

127. CARTA WALTERI BAYNINI DE VIGINTI ACRIS TERRÆ IN CAMPIS DE BORDDOSWALD.

SCIANT præsentēs et futuri quod Ego Walterus Bayninus¹ consilio et consensu uxoris meæ et Hæredum meorum dedi et concessi et hac præsentī carta mea confirmavi Deo et Beatæ Mariæ et Ecclesie Sanctæ Trinitatis de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus viginti acras terræ in campis de Borddosewald² cum omnibus pertinentijs et libertatibus infra Villam et extra prædictæ Villæ pertinentibus Scilicet in Bosco in Plano et in omnibus Aisiamentis in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam pro

² Robert son of William de Korkeby does not appear in the lists of sheriffs; he was probably 'custos' at this time; see note 4 on No. 37.

⁴ John de Denton, the elder of the name; see on No. 121.

⁸ Probably the date is early in the 13th century, and not far from that of No. 125.

127. ¹ Walter Baynin, Beinín, or Benn, occurs frequently in the Register of Lanercost; he makes a grant to the Priory (MS. iv. 20); is witness to a charter of Ranulph de Vallibus (MS. i. 19) also of Robert de Vallibus (MS. i. 6 et al.); is co-witness with Bishop Bernard to a Confirmation of Odard son of Adam (MS. xiv. 21); and he appears in the Pipe Rolls as late as 1214.

salute animarum Dominorum meorum Ranulphi de Vallibus et Roberti³ filij sui et pro salute animæ meæ et omnium antecessorum meorum libere et quiete ab omni terreno servicio et exactione sicut aliqua Elemosina liberius dari vel confirmari potest. Et sciendum est quod Ego Walterus prædictus et Hæredes mei prædictam Elemosinam præfatis Monachis contra omnes gentes warantizabimus imperpetuum. Et ut hæc mea donatio et concessio rata et inconcussa perseveret in posterum præsens scriptum sigilli mei appositione roboravi. Hijs Testibus, Roberto de Korkeby tunc temporis Senes-

⁵ Trewermain, or Tryerman, formerly written Treverman. The Register of Lanercost (MS. xv. 17) gives an interesting Veredictum antiquorum wherein it is stated that Gilemor filius Gilandri, Lord of Treverman and Torcrossoc, made a chapel of wickerwork (capella de virgis) at Treverman, and procured the celebration of the Divine Offices there with the consent of Bishop Edelwan (Eagelwine, Bishop of Durham 1056—71). This Gilemor, or Gille the great, is connected by name with the Gille son of Bueth and Gillesland (see note 1 on No. 107). The chapel of Treverman was granted to the Priory of Lanercost by Robert de Vallibus in their Foundation Charter. Treverman passed to Roland de Vallibus, the brother of the second Robert (see No. 54, note 6). He is called "of Treverman" (Regist. Lanercost, MS. ii. 21) and he granted land there for the chaplain and clerk, which his nephew Hubert confirmed (MS. iv. 6). His son Alexander also gave rights to the Priory in his turbaries of Treverman (MS. ii. 22). The castle of Tryerman is rather more than a mile from Birdoswald.

128. CONFIRMATIO RADULPHI BAYNIN DE VIGINTI ACRIIS TERRÆ IN BORDOSWALD.

NOTUM sit omnibus tam præsentibus quam futuris quod Ego Radulphus Baynin¹ concessi et hac præsentī carta confirmavi Deo et Beatæ Mariæ et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus viginti acras terræ in campis de Bordoswald cum omnibus pertinentijs et libertatibus infra Villam et extra prædictæ Villæ pertinentibus Scilicet in bosco in plano et in omnibus aisiamentis in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam pro Salute animarum Dominorum meorum Ranulphi de Vallibus et Roberti filij sui, et pro Salute animæ meæ et omnium antecessorum meorum libere et quiete ab omni terreno servicio et exactione sicut aliqua Elemosina liberius confirmari potest Scilicet terram quæ dicitur Haithwait et ab Haithwait usque ad magnam quercum quæ stat super antiquum fossatum et ab illa quercu usque ad fracturam muri in qua Semita jacet quæ venit de Treverman, et ab illa fractura usque ad quercum quæ stat super murum versus Orientem et ab illa quercu usque ad

⁸ All the witnesses point to the end of the 12th or the very beginning of the 13th century as being the date of this charter; probably not long after the death of Ranulph de Vallibus in 1199.

128. ¹ Walter Baynin, who granted the preceding charter, was, as appears below, the uncle on the mother's side of this Radulph, who was apparently his heir.

Et Sciendum est quod Ego Radulphus Baynin et Hæredes mei prædictam Elemosinam præfatis Monachis contra omnes homines imperpetuum warantizabimus sicut carta Walteri Bainin Avunculi mei inde facta testatur. OMNIBUS Christi Fidelibus ad quos præsens scriptum pervenerit Symon Capellanus de Wederhal¹ Salutem. Noverit universitas vestra me remisisse et quietam clamasse imperpetuum Abbati et Conventui Sanctæ Mariæ Eborum et Monachis de Wederhal totam terram quam tenui de eisdem in Bordoswald. Ita quod dicti Monachi habeant et teneant dictam terram imperpetuum quietam de me et omnibus heredibus et successoribus meis. Et quia tempore confectionis hujus instrumenti cartam quam habui de ² John Museihe, or perhaps his son of the same name, had property in Ainstapelit (Ainstable) and, with Matildis his wife, granted 7 acres there to the Priory of Wederhal (Nos. 164, 165). He is witness to a charter of Anketill son of Robert in the Register of Lanercost (MS. v. 23) with Walter Benn and John, Prior of Lanercost.

³ From the witnesses, the date of this charter must be shortly after the preceding.

129. ¹ Symon, Chaplain of Wederhal, seems to have held the 20 acres in Bordoswald granted to the Priory by the two preceding charters, and as he has lost the charter he had from the Chapter of S. Mary's at York, he quit-claims the property he undertook to resign.

Capitulo Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci penes me non habui nec habere potui ut eam dictis Monachis resignarem, Si ipsa aliquo tempore ad nocumentum dictorum Monachorum quominus ipsi prædictam terram in pace possideant imperpetuum per me vel aliquem hæredum meorum vel assignatorum vel successorum meorum fuerit ostensa careat viribus imperpetuum et habeatur tanquam inanis et frivola. Et ut hoc scriptum meæ resignationis et quietæ clamationis perpetuæ firmitatis inconcussum robur optineat illud sigilli mei impressione roboravi. 130. CARTA ALANI FILIJ WILLELMI RAVENESWICK DE DUABUS BOVATIS TERRÆ IN TALCAN.

NOTUM sit omnibus audientibus vel videntibus has literas quod Ego Alanus filius Willelmi de Raveneswick¹ concessi et dedi in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam Sanctæ Trinitati et Sancto Constantino de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus pro Salute animarum Patris et Matris meæ et mei ipsius et uxoris meæ et Parentum meorum duas bovatas terræ in Talcan² quas

⁴ From the sheriff, Thomas son of John, the date of this charter must be 1214 or 1230—31 (No. 56); as Gervase is now Archdeacon it will be the latter date, before the death of Prior Bartholomew in 1231.

130. ¹ Alan son of William de Raveneswic appears in Nos. 107, 108, where we saw Adam, the brother of Alan, witnessing a charter of Robert son of Bueth; also Adam the brother of William living in 1178 and 1185.

Willelmus Rufus tenuit cum omnibus aisiamentis ejusdem Villæ. Et notandum quod concessi cum eisdem bovatis pasturam in eadem Villa sexaginta ovibus et octo Vaccis et quatuor Bobus et duabus Equabus cum pullis earum duorum annorum vel duobus equis. ⁴ William, Chaplain, appears with several of these witnesses in No. 50, about 1200; and 1195—1200 is probably the date here.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam hoc præsens scriptum pervenerit Adam de Cumreu Salutem æternam in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra me dedisse et quietum clamasse Deo et Monachis Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhal Rogerum filium Huctredi¹ cum omnibus Catallis suis et cum tota

² This can hardly be Symon, who was Prior at the end of the 12th century (see on No. 119), but it is possible. More probably, it should be J. for John, as in Nos. 75, 79; see note 5 below.

³ Gervase de Louth, not yet Archdeacon as in No. 129.

⁴ Robert son of William de Hampton who appears, with so many of the same witnesses, in Nos. 75, 79, was sheriff in 1223—29 (No. 54).

⁶ From the sheriff, the date is 1223—29; and from the witnesses, probably about 1225.

132. ¹ This Roger son of Huctred was a nativus, serf, or villein, who is here handed over with all his chattels and his whole family (sequela). The serfdom of the Anglo-Saxon period was transferred with the lands to the Normans. The class of serfs to which Roger belonged was that of the prædial slaves, or slaves of the estate. They were more independent than the domestic slaves, and could even hold an amount of land and other property; but they and all their belongings were entirely at the disposal of the lord, who could sell or transfer them at will. There is another grant of a nativus and his wife in No. 156. Besides the instance in the Register of Lanercost mentioned in No. 131, note 1, there are others (as in MS. vi. 13 and xiv. 8) and one (MS. i. 17) where Robert de Vallibus himself grants to the Priory Galfrid Pich, his wife and children. How these nativi often passed into the tenants of the manor, see Sir Henry Ellis, Introduction to Domesday Book, p. xxiv. (Record Com.).

evidence that he was. J. Denton (Cumberland, p. 138) followed by Nicolson and Burn (History, ii. 507) makes him a son of John, the brother of Walter de Windesore the younger. In the Register of Lanercost Salamon de Farlam is witness with Walter the younger, to a grant of Robert son of Ranulph de Vallibus (MS. ii. 1). He is very probably identical with Salomon son of David, who appears in that Register (MS. v. 18, 19) in connection with Farlam; but see more on No. 136.

² Farlam in Gillesland, about 3 miles south of Lanercost Priory, was held by Walter de Wyndesore the elder, to whom it was probably granted by the first Robert de Vallibus; the said Robert by his Foundation Charter granted or confirmed the Church of S. Thomas the Martyr of Farlam to the Priory of Lanercost, which Walter had granted (Regist. Lanercost, MS. iv. 13). Walter de Wyndesore and his son Walter the younger made grants of land in Farlam (MS. ii. 9, 19, 20) which were confirmed by Ranulph and Robert de Vallibus (i. 20, 21).

OMNIBUS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs ad quorum notitiam hoc præsens scriptum pervenerit Salomon de Farlam Salutem. Noverit universitas vestra me caritatis intuitu et pro salute animæ meæ dedisse concessisse et hac præsentī carta mea confirmasse Abbati et Conventui Sanctæ Mariæ Eborum et Monachis Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhal quatuordecim acras terræ de Dominico meo in parva Farlam¹, scilicet octo acras terræ in parte occidentali cujusdam divisæ quæ tendit a loco ubi Domus Willelmi Clerici quondam sita fuit versus Aquilonem usque in Gaytesigemire et sex acras terræ in campo qui vocatur Ruthait. Habendas et Tenendas sibi in liberam puram et perpetuam Elemosinam cum omnibus pertinentijs libertatibus communis et aisiamentis suis infra Villam et extra adeo libere et quiete in omnibus ut aliqua Elemosina liberius et quietius dari possit aut possideri. 134. ¹ On Farlam, see note 2 on No. 133; this was apparently a vill in the east part of Farlam. A good many of its localities are mentioned in two grants of Salomon son of David (Regist. Lanercost, MS. v. 18, 19), and in a confirmation by Walter de Wyndesore (MS. iv. 11); the former speaks of the Via Regia and of the land between the Lake (Tindale Tarn) and the place called Hallebanke.

date, from the witnesses, must be well on in the 13th century; and similarly in No. 136. We should naturally suppose that he was the son of the Walter who died about 1195, and who is mentioned in No. 38 (see note 12 there); but a difficulty arises in connection with the early date of Christiana who is believed to be the daughter of that first Walter. In the Pipe Rolls for Cumberland, in 1200, Duncan de Lasceles and his wife Christiana (see on No. 185) account for £10 for having her land in Boulton which was a part of her inheritance. In the year 1202, Christiana de Wyndleshore granted land in Scotland to the Priory of Lanercost for the souls of William the King (of Scotland), of her husband, her children and Walter de Wyndleshore her brother. Walter may have been alive, the King and her husband certainly were (Regist. Lanercost, MS. iv. 18). Again, in 1203, Christiana de Wyndesore accounts for 220 marcs that she may have seisin of all the land, and be reckoned the next heir, of Walter de Wyndesore in Essex and Hertford (Pipe Rolls, Essex, 5 Joh.); and in 1206, with her husband, Duncan de Lasceles, and Radulph de Hodeng, she pays 240 marcs for land held by Walter of the King in Beds and Bucks, Robert de Vallibus (the younger) and Ivo de Veteriponte being pledged (Fine Rolls 7 Joh. m. 5, ed. Hardy p. 346). This signifies that Christiana was the heir either of her father Walter, or of her brother Walter, who must have died soon after his father. Who then is this Walter, and the Walter son of Walter, who occurs at this and at a later period? Thus in the Pipe Rolls for Cumberland, Walter de Windlesore pays 46s. 8d. in 1214, and William pays 2½ marcs; in the Register of Lanercost (MS. ii. 19) Walter son of Walter de Wyndesore grants to the Priory the right of patronage in Farlam Church and two acres in Closegill, Thomas son of John being sheriff, i.e. in 1214 or 1230—31; he grants (MS. ii. 20) to the Priory all his demesne in Farlam, William de Daker being sheriff, i.e. in 1236—47, John his brother being witness to both these charters; he confirms a grant of Salomon son of David of land in Little Farlam (MS. iv. 11), William de Wyndesore being witness; and he grants (iv. 12) land in Severig (in Farlam), both of these charters being about the present date; he is witness to charters of Robert son of Ranulph de Vallibus (MS. ii.

1, 2, 3) with Duncan de Lasceles, Salomon de Farlam and others; he appears, in a charter of Christiana, daughter of Adam (MS. xiii. 14) with his father Walter, and with him again in a charter of his son Adam de Farlam for land in Clovesgill, ante Closegill (MS. xiii. 16). That he is identical with the Walter de Wyndesour of this charter, there can be little doubt, but his exact connection with the Walter of Henry II.'s time is not determined. The accounts of Sir G. Duckett (Duchetiana p. 251 sq.) recognise the difficulty, but only show the contradictory character of the pedigrees.

³ It is not probable that John de Denton, Robert son of William, and other of the witnesses who were alive in the 12th century, lived much beyond 1213—14 when some of them appear; and we may put the date of this charter pretty certainly in the first 20 years of the 13th century.

135. ¹ Aermgthuit is not identified; it was on the west coast of Cumberland; not Armathwaite in the valley of the Eden, nor near Bassenthwaite lake.

² The Priory of S. Bega, or S. Bee, was also a Cell of the Abbey of S. Mary at York, founded by William, the brother of Ranulph Meschin; it was on the west coast of Cumberland, and south of Wirkington and the other places mentioned below; see Dugdale, Monast. iii. 576.

Decano, Hugone de Moriceby⁴, Adam de Haverington⁵, Ricardo de Cleterne, Roberto de Bromthoit, Johanne de Boyvill⁶,

⁴ Hugh de Moriceby is witness with Adam de Haverington (a witness below) to a confirmation charter of William de Fortibus, 2nd Earl of Albemarle (ob. 1241) to the Priory of S. Bee (Dugdale, Monast. iii. 578). He gave land in Distington to the Abbey of Holm Cultram (Register, MS. p. 65). He appears in 1211—12 as the legal representative of Alice de Rumelli (see note 7 on No. 127), and, with Richard de Cleterne (a witness below) and others, as making an inquisition in 1246 of the lands of Lambert de Muleton (Inquis. post mort. 31 Hen. III. No. 4).

OMNIBUS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs ad quorum notitiam hoc præsens scriptum pervenerit Ricardus filius Bernardi de Farlam¹ salutem in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra me pro salute animæ meæ et Parentum meorum dedisse concessisse et hac præsentī carta mea confirmasse Abbati et Conventui Sanctæ Mariæ Eborum et Monachis Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhal quinque acras terræ in territorio de parva Farlam in campo qui vocatur Ruthait. Et ego et hæredes mei warantizabimus prædictam terram cum pertinentijs supranominatis Deo et Abbachiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eborum et Monachis de Wederhal contra omnes

⁷ From Richard de Cleterne, a witness to No. 109, between 1236 and 1247, and the other witnesses here, the date must be in the first half of the 13th century, and probably not long before 1240.

136. ¹ Richard son of Bernard de Farlam is stated by Nicolson and Burn (History, ii. 507) following J. Denton, to be the great grandson of John de Wyndesore, who had two sons Rayner and Salomon, and Rayner a son of Bernard; but they give no authority. In the Register of Lanercost (MS. v. 18) Salomon son of David and Bernard son of Ratmer grant to the Priory land in Little Farlam, called Raven, which grant is confirmed (MS. iv. 11) by Walter de Wyndesore. It is much more probable that this is the Bernard here referred to, and that Salomon son of David is identical with Salomon de Farlam (see Nos. 133, 134) who is a witness here. The witnesses to these three charters and to those in the Lanercost Register are similar, and point to the same conclusion.

² The date, from the witnesses, is probably almost the same as No. 134, in the first 20 years of the 13th century; and it is not improbable that Richard de Levington was then custos for Walter Malclerk I. after 1216 in the early years of Henry III.

137. ¹ This is the second Robert de Castelkairoc; see note 3 on No. 46.

² There is limestone now got in the territory of Castlekairoc. We note that they were to keep outside the arable land in getting the limestone, and that oxen as well as horses were used in drawing it.

138. CARTA ANSELMI DE NEUBY FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHAL DE UNO TOFTO ET CROFTO CUM QUINDECIM ACRIS TERRÆ ET DIMIDIA IN NEUBY.

³ This is Robert de Otterington, not the Robert who is so often mentioned in the 12th century. A Papal Bull, dated April 12th, 1238, gave him authority to hold the office; see Hardy, Fasti Eccles. iii. 249 and Calendar of Papal Registers, ed. W. H. Bliss, i. 170. Robert de Oterington was witness with Gervase de Louthier, Archdeacon of Carlisle, to an agreement between Radulph, Prior of Carlisle, and the Abbey of Holm Cultram about a fishery in the Eden (Dugdale, Monasticon, v. 607).

⁵ Walter de Ulvesby; see note on No. 56.

⁷ Radulph de Feritate, the later person of this name; see note 4 on No. 43.

138. ¹ Anselm de Neuby lived in the time of William son of Odard (see note 16 on No. 38) who is a witness to his charter No. 141.

² Neuby, in the Barony of Linstock; see on Nos. 86, 139.

⁵ Dispensarius or Dispensator (see on No. 158), a steward generally.

139. ¹ Richard de Neuby, son of Anselm, who granted the preceding charter.

² This is Neuby, in the Barony of Linstock (see on No. 86), which is further proved by the land being held here by Norman, Chaplain of Crosby adjoining, and by the Seneschal of Erdington (Irthington) being witness to No. 140.

Si autem alter nostrum in seculo in fata concesserit medietas catallorum quæ eum contigerit tunc habere erit Domui de Wederhal et aliam medietatem licebit ei dare ubicunque voluerit. Præterea sciendum est quod

⁶ The date of this charter must be in the early part of the 13th century; the sheriff Robert de Nuers does not help us.

141. ¹ From the witness William son of Odard de Corkeby, and his son John de Warthwic, the date, like that of No. 138, will be not long before 1195.

142. ¹ Walter de Neuby was dead in 1247, as appears from the dated charter of his widow Agnes, No. 144. It is not clear whether he was the son of Richard, the grantor of No. 139, but probably he was, as his wife Agnes, in No. 145, quitclaims her third share in the property granted by Anselm.

OMNIBUS Christi Fidelibus ad quorum notitiã præsens scriptum pervenerit Agnes quæ fuit uxor Walteri de Neuby Salutem æternam in Domino. 143. ¹ Transcript C has Wideburn. In the Register of Lanercost we have Henry de Wodeburn (MS. xiv. 10).

² Jurdan de Blaterne, or Blacerne, appears in an Inquisition made concerning the King's lands held by John de Boulton of Carlisle in 1247 (Inquis. p. m. 31 Hen. III. No. 25); he is also witness to a charter of Robert de Castelcairoc in the Register of Lanercost (MS. iv. 16).

³ Walter de Camboc is also a witness in the same Register (MS. vi. 19).

OMNIBUS Christi Fidelibus ad quorum notitiam præsens scriptum pervenerit Agnes quondam Uxor Walteri de Neuby Salutem æternam in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra me in ligia potestate et libera viduitate mea remisisse et quietum clamasse imperpetuum Deo et Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Domui Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus totum jus et clamium quod habui vel aliquo modo habere potui nomine Dotis in tertiam partem multuræ et pannagij duarum bovatarum terræ in Neuby quas Normannus Capellanus de Crosseby aliquando tenuit Et insuper tertiam partem meam quindecim acrarum terræ et dimidiæ cum tofto et crofto in eadem Villa quas Anselmus de Neuby dedit Domui de Wederhal quas Elyas aliquando tenuit cum messuagio tofto et crofto quæ faciunt dimidiam acram terræ in eadem Villa in liberam puram et perpetuam Elemosinam. 144. ¹ William de la Blamyre appears as a sub-tenant of the King's lands at Carlisle under John de Boulton in an Inquisition held September, 1250 (Inquis. p. m. 34 Hen. III. No. 46). He also attests several charters in the Register of Lanercost (MS. ii. 7 ; iv. 5, 7) with some of these co-witnesses. The name has remained to the present day as that of a well-known Cumberland family.

terræ et dimidia et toftis et croftis cum mesuagio ullum jus vel clamium nomine Dotis multuræ et pannagij quod me contingebat numquam vendicabo vel vendicabit. Hijs Testibus, Domino Thoma de Multon¹, Domino Eustachio tunc Vicecomite Karlioli², Domino Hugh de Multon³, Ricardo de Castelkairoc, Roberto de Tyllol, Roberto de Warthwic, Thoma de Beuchamp⁴, Johanne de Spaunton, 145. ¹ This Thomas de Multon is the son of the Thomas in No. 47 (see note 4 there) and succeeded to his father's lands in 1240, generally called Thomas de Multon of Gillesland. He died in 1271.

² This is Eustace de Balliol, as in the next charter. He was Sheriff of Carlisle in 1262—1265, and keeper of Carlisle Castle, on which he spent large sums and incurred debts with which his executors had to deal (Liberate Rolls, 2 Edw. I. m. 2). He appears as Justiciary in September, 1268 (Pipe Rolls, 1268—69; Patent Rolls, 52 Hen. III. m. 4). He married Helewisa (or Hawisa) de Levington, daughter of Radulph Boyvill of Levington and Ada Gernun (see note 1 on No. 103). He was a crusader, and went in 1270 with Prince Edward to the Holy Land (Patent Rolls, 54 Hen. III. m. 10, 11); there he probably died in 1271—72. In November of 1272 important Inquisitions were held concerning the lands of his widow Helewisa who was then dead. Her heir was determined to be "Thomas son of Thomas de Multon de Gillesland" who was of full age (see No. 47, and Inquis. p. m. 56 Hen. III. Nos. 35, 36); hence Eustace de Balliol left no son, and clearly did not marry again, as Dugdale asserts (Baronage, i. 524).

Verdurer of the King's Forest, and to have held land under Helewisa, widow of Richard de Vernun (Inquis. p. m. 52 Hen. III. No. 30, and 54 Hen. III. No. 19). He is witness to the charter of Matilda de Vallibus, No. 194, dated 1271.

⁵ From the Sheriff, the date of this charter is 1262—65, which agrees with what we know of the witnesses. Thomas de Multon died in 1271.

³ From the Sheriff, the date of the charter is 1262—65, like the preceding, though probably somewhat later.

³ The date must be somewhere near the date of the last charter.

148. ¹ Alexander de Neuby appears in Nos. 143 and 147 as holding land under Walter de Neuby. Robert, his son, must be different from the Robert de Neubi in Nos. 59, 148, at the earlier period 1230—31. The brothers of Robert, William and Roger, are mentioned in this charter.

Habendas et Tenendas in puram

² John de Graistoc is not in the lists of the Barons of Graystock (see note 6 on No. 137) at this period, though there is one of the name at the end of the 13th century.

150. ¹ This William de Croglyn is not the son of Elyas as in Nos. 152, 153, but of a later date, probably identical with the William of Nos. 155, 156, his son and heir being also called William (No. 155). He was witness to the charter No. 144, dated 1247, and to the convention No. 171, dated 1241.

⁵ We have the same Sheriff in No. 63, with John de Agulunby, John son of William, and Walter janitor. As in that charter, therefore, the reference is to the earlier Robert de Hamton (see note 4 on No. 54) who was Sheriff 1223—29. This agrees also with the time of Bishop Hugh in the next charter.

⁵ Beaulieu (Bellum Locum Regis) in Hampshire, of which Bishop Hugh had been Abbot. It was founded by King John in 1204; see Dugdale, Monast. v. 680, also Close Rolls, 3 Hen. III. m. 11 (Rec. Com. i. 405), where there is no mention of Beaulieu in Burgundy, though the King in his letter to Pope Honorius III. mentions Hugh, Abbot of Beaulieu.

Mariæ et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem servientibus Deo terram illam in Croglyn quam Domina Ybri dedit prædictis Monachis in perpetuam Elemosinam, scilicet totam dimidiam¹ partem Villæ de Croglyn cum omnibus libertatibus aisiamentis decimæ parti Villæ pertinentibus infra Villam et extra sine aliquo retene-mento, Et quinque acras terræ quas Pater meus dedit prædictis Monachis in perpetuam Elemosinam. Hanc vero Elemosinam Ego et hæredes mei prædictis Monachis contra omnes gentes imperpetuum warantizabimus. Clerico de Wederhal, Radulpho Clerico, Unfraio et multis alijs⁵.

152. ¹ This should apparently be "deciman" partem, as shewn in the words following and in the next charter. It was granted by Lady Ybri, or Ebria, d'Estrivers, see No. 101, where it is called a carucate of land.

153. CARTA WILLELMI FILII ELYÆ DE CROGLYN FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHAL DE DUABUS BOVATIS TERRÆ IN EADEM.

NOTUM sit omnibus legentibus vel audientibus literas has quod Ego Willelmus filius Elyæ de Croglyn cum consensu et assensu Ysoudæ Uxoris meæ et hæredum et amicorum meorum dedi et hac præsentî carta mea confirmavi pro salute Domini mei Rogeri de Bellocampo¹ et mei et pro salute animarum Antecessorum meorum Deo et Beatæ Mariæ et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam duas bovatas terræ in campo de Croglyn scilicet totam decimam partem Villæ de Croglyn tam in Dominicis meis quam in alijs locis et unum toftum et croftum juxta vadum aquæ de Croglyn quod Gilbertus avunculus meus aliquando tenuit libere et quiete ab omnibus terrenis servicijs et exactionibus cum omnibus libertatibus et aisiamentis decimæ parti Villæ de Croglyn pertinentibus infra Villam et extra sine aliquo retenemento.

153. ¹ Roger de Bellocampo, or Beauchamp, is here called the "Lord" of the manor of Little Croglyn, and in the next charter confirms these grants. In No. 172, he is Lord of Stafhole. He granted land in Cringeldic to the monks of Wederhal (No. 172) on account of which a lawsuit arose with his sisters Alice and Amabilla (see No. 173). He appears in the Pipe Rolls for Westmoreland as Custos for Galfrid son of Peter, the Sheriff in 1200 (2 John); and in 1201 he and Grecia, widow of Thomas son of Gospatric (son of Orme) are set down as owing 100 marcs for having the custody of the land and heir of Thomas; and, in 1210, Grecia is given as the wife of Roger. The Pipe Rolls for Cumberland in 1209 give his name as having custody of the land of William son of Adam de Hotton (probably not the same Adam as in No. 63). He is witness to two charters of Hugh de Morvill in the Register of Lanercost (MS. ii. 12, 13) with Thomas son of Gospatric, also to one of Adam Salsarius (MS. v. 27) who attests his charter No. 154. He gave his body to be buried in the Church of Wederhal and land to provide vestments and lights for the altar of the Virgin, see No. 172, the date of the charter being 1223—29.

Hanc vero Elemosinam Ego et hæredes mei prædictis Monachis imperpetuum contra omnes gentes warantizabimus. Hijs Testibus, Roberto de Mihers tunc Vicecomite Karlioli, Gilberto de Turribus, Alano de Caldebec, Roberto Clerico, Alano de Cumreu, Willielmo de Aireminne, Radulpho Clerico, Willielmo Clerico, Umfrido de Wederhal et multis alijs².

154. CONFIRMATIO ROGERI DE BELLOCAMPO FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHAL DE TERRA QUAM HABENT IN CROGLYN.

OMNIBUS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs Rogerus de Bellocampo Salutem. Noverit universitas vestra me pro salute animæ meæ et pro salute animarum Antecessorum meorum concessisse et hac præsentī carta mea confirmasse Deo et Beatæ Mariæ et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam totam terram quam habent præfati Monachi in Villa de Croglyn ex donatione Dominæ Ybri et Simonis de Morvilla et ex dono Willelmi filij Elyæ de Croglyn sicuti cartæ eorum testantur, scilicet totam quintam partem¹ prædictæ Villæ integre et plenarie infra Villam et extra Villam in omnibus locis et aisiamentis prædictæ Villæ pertinentibus liberam et quietam ab omni terreno servicio et exactione sicuti aliqua Elemosina liberius dari vel confirmari potest. Insuper quinque acras terræ in campo de Croglyn, quas Elyas de Croglyn præfatis Monachis in Elemosinam dedit. ² The date must be nearly the same as that of the preceding charter, i.e. the beginning of the 13th century.

Adam Salsarius was a person of importance. He was proved, by a trial at Carlisle held in 1210, to hold, by grant of King Richard I.

Ubrictebi (hodie Upperby) and the land of old Salhild (hodie Little Salkeld) in the parish of Addingham (Coram Rege Rolls, 11 Joh. No. 41, m. 9; Rec. Com. Abbrev. Placit. p. 66 b). In Testa de Nevill (p. 380 a) Adam Salsarius is mentioned as holding lands under the King (John) at an annual cornage rent of 27s. 11*d.*, which was pardoned to him; also Adam, cook to the Queen, as holding Saulkill under the King, by gift of King Richard, rendering annually 1 lb. of pepper. These two Adams, it will be seen, are identical. In 1164 Olde Salchhild and Hobrihtebi, two carucates of land and a tanning mill, appear among the escheats of the Crown in the Pipe Rolls (Carlisle, 10 Hen. II.); and they appear again frequently in that reign up to 1185. Tallage is also paid in that reign and the next for Old Salekil and for Salekil (Salkeld Regis, hodie Great Salkeld, see note 4 on No. 4). In the 5th year of King Richard (1194) on April 20th, a grant was made by that King to Adam Cook to his Queen Mother (Eleanor), of all the land of Old Salechild which had returned annually to the Exchequer £4. 16*s.*, and now to be held by the payment of 1 lb. of pepper annually at Carlisle. The deed is given in full in Machel's MSS. (iv. 131) taken from Sir William Dugdale's MSS. Turning again to the Pipe Rolls, we find that in 1193 and 1194 Adam Cook received by Royal writ 40*s.* in Uctredebi (sometimes so spelled for Hubrichtebi) and Arphinebi (Farmanby in the parish of Addingham); in 1195, 48*s.* in the lands given to him as Cook to A. (Alienor) the Queen Mother; in 1196, the sum is £4. 16*s.*, as named in the deed above, and so in the years following to the end of the reign of King John. Moreover in 1197, 1199 and other years, he is pardoned the horn-geld, or cornage rent, of 27s. 11*d.*, the sum shewn above to be excused to Adam Salsarius. In 1201, the Sheriff also accounted for £5 which Adam Salsarius had to pay for having seisin of Old Salkil on production of the charter of King Richard. In that and subsequent years, sometimes under the name of Adam le Salseir, he pays small sums, ne transfretet, for cornage and for scutage. Turning to the Placita de quo Waranto (Rec. Com. pp. 114 b, 117 a) we find all these facts confirmed before the courts in November 1292, that the vill of Old Salkeld was granted by charter of King Richard to Adam le Sauser [or Adam le Ken (sic)] and confirmed by charter of the 2nd year of King John, that it used to return £4. 16*s.* to the exchequer, and, by these charters produced, was to be held on the service of 1 lb. of pepper; moreover, that the said Adam granted it to Hugh, Bishop of Carlisle, he to pay to the King the 1 lb. of pepper ; that after the death of Bishop Hugh, it was claimed by Nicholas le Sauser and Henry son of Fulcher, the heirs of Adam, but it was decided at Westminster in 11 Henry III. that it belonged to Bishop Walter and the Church of S. Mary at Carlisle ; that Bishop Walter conceded to Henry and Nicholas and their heirs to hold it at a rent of £4. 16s. ; that in 14 Henry III. (see also Close Rolls, m. 11) the King quitclaimed the rent of 1 lb. of pepper ; that then Bishop Walter conceded all his right to the Canons and Church of Carlisle, which was confirmed by the charter of Henry III. in his 14th year. It also appears (Placita de quo War. Rec. Com. 116 a) that there was no church or advowson belonging to Old Salkeld, only a chapel which belonged to the mother church of the parish of Addingham. That Church "cum Capella sua de Salkeld" was granted to the Priory of Carlisle by Robert de Brus and Christiana, and confirmed by Bishop Radulf de Ireton in 1282 (Register of Bp Halton, p. 181), also confirmed by Edward I. July 8th, 1304. Adam Salsarius granted two charters of land in Kirkeosewald to the Priory of Lanercost, the former of which was attested by this Roger de Bellocampo. This land was quitclaimed by his widow Alicia, whose father's name was Alfrid (Regist. Lanercost, MS. v. 27 ; vi. 1, 2). Others of the name also appear there. In the reign of Edward I., about 1303, we find, among the Exchequer Miscellanea, Master John le Sausser of London, cook, giving us a hint as to the identity of Adam Salsarius, or Adam le Sauser, and Adam, cook, which is proved above. Thus we have our word "sauce," through the French, from the Latin salsa. Also in the same Miscellanea (see Calend. Doc. Scot. iv. 394) in the year 1305—6 we have mentioned Alan, the King's salsarius, to whom had been paid 9 quarters of wheat for certain things pertaining to his office. It is shewn by the Fine Rolls (5 Hen. III. m. 4, m. 3, 12 Hen. III. m. 9 ; ed. Roberts, i. 66, 70, 165) that Adam le Sauser was dead in 1221, and that his nephew Henry son of Fulcher and Nicholas le Sauser were his heirs, and were liable to a payment of 5 marcs to the King for the manor of Old Salkhill.

³ Though a little later than the two preceding, the date of this charter must be about the same time, at the beginning of the 13th century.

² This is the second Thomas de Multon of the name, mentioned in this Register; see note 4 on No. 47; the first died in 1240.

³ William Salcoc is not in the lists of sheriffs; he was, probably, pro-Sheriff or Custos. He is given as Sheriff of Carlisle, with William de Daker as Sheriff of York, in a confirmation of the Church of Crosthwaite to Fountains Abbey by William de Fortibus in the time of Bishop Silvester (1247—54) (Archbp Gray's Register, ed. Raine, p. 59*u.*). He is witness as Sheriff of Cumberland to a grant to the Priory of Lanercost dated 1252 (Regist. Lanercost, MS. xii. 22) with Thomas de Multon and William de Vallibus. He must then have been Custos for John de Balliol.

Mary in the Church of S. Laurence, Appleby (see Machel MSS. v. 522 sqq., where he appears in several documents). This cannot be the same William who was knight of the shire in 1307—8.

⁵ The date seems to be fixed by William Salcoc as 1252, or very near that year, and with this the other witnesses agree.

158. ¹ Ainstapelit, hodie Ainstable, is a parish and manor on the east of the river Eden; the parish abutting towards the north on the Barony of Gilsland and divided from Kirkoswald on the south by the river Croglyn. The Church was appropriated to the nunnery at Ermynthwait (see No. 162) and probably served by the chaplain there.

river Croglin with the Eden. The nunnery is said to have been founded by William II. in the 2nd year of his reign, 1089; and this is stated in what purports to be the foundation charter given by Dugdale. But this charter "is spurious on the face of it," as Freeman has pointed out (William Rufus, ii. 506). William II. did not get possession of this district until 1092; he is made to call himself in the charter "Dux Normannorum," and the formula used is subsequent to the time of Edward III. Two royal charters, of Edward III. and Edward IV., are also given by Dugdale (Monasticon, iii. 270) and the names of three Prioresses, all in the 16th century. The names of two Prioresses occur in Bishop Welton's Register (MS. pp. 98, 99); Isabel, who died 1362, and in her place the nuns chose Katharine Lancaster, when the Bishop sent his mandate to instal her. At the Dissolution the convent consisted of a prioress and three nuns; among the items of the survey made 29 Henry VIII. is the annual rent of 12s. paid to the Priory of Wetherall. The site was afterwards called Nunnery, a name it retains to the present day. In 1317 the King, out of compassion for the poor nuns totally ruined by the Scots, granted them pasture for their cattle in Englewood forest (Patent Rolls, 4 Edw. II. p. 1, m. 25).

³ Haiton, or Hayton, was a parish in the Barony of Gilsland about 7 miles east of Carlisle, adjoining the Parish of Wederhal. The name is formed with the common Anglo-Saxon suffix ton and hay or haigh, "a hedge," thence a place inclosed by a hedge, or an inclosure in the forest, for purposes of hunting, into which animals were driven to be killed. So we have the Anglo-Saxon hecge, "a hedge" and an "inclosure," and the French haye; compare the well known La Haye Sainte. In this sense the word haia occurs often in Domesday Book. The Church and a carucate of land were granted by Robert de Vallibus to the Priory of Carlisle, with whom it remained (see the charter of Henry III. in Dugdale, Monasticon, v. 144).

son of David in the preceding charters (see on No. 161), and perhaps the same as Michael de Vallibus in No. 150.

Alicia vel assignatis suis quamdiu nobis ipsis warantizare poterimus. Testibus, Domino Radulpho Priore Karleoli, Waltero de Ulvesby tunc Archidiacono Karleoli, Willielmo Decano Karleoli⁶, Roberto Decano Allerdal, Waltero Decano Cumberlandiaë, Henrico Berneval, Martino⁷ Parsona de Kirkeoswald⁸, Adam Parsona de Hedenhal⁹ et alijs¹⁰.

⁸ Kirkoswald was a parish and manor on the east of the river Eden, which divides it from Laysingby, or Lazonby, having Ainstable on the north and Addingham on the south. It is not very clear how it came to Hugh de Morvill; but he was in possession at the end of the 12th century, and after his death Kirkoswald and Lazonby were held by his widow, Helewisa de Stuteville; of this there is abundant evidence. In 1167, Kircoswald was in the hands of one of the Morvills, probably Simon father of Hugh, who then paid $\frac{1}{2}$ marc (Pipe Rolls, 13 Hen. II.). In Testa de Nevill (p. 379 b) the daughters of Hugh, with their husbands, are recorded as being in possession of the lands of Hugh, which they held by cornage, £10. 2s. 10d., and which he had received from his ancestor Robert Trivers or d'Estrivers. The Church was also in the patronage of Hugh de Morvill and of several of his descendants.

⁹ Hedenhal, or Edenhall, was a parish and manor on the immediate west of the river Eden, and north of the river Eamont; it was in the Forest of Inglewood, and joined the parishes of Penrith and Great Salkeld on the west and north. In 1159 it was in the possession of Henry, the younger brother of Adam son of Suan, or Suein (Pipe Rolls, 5 Hen. II.); but in a few years it passed again into the hands of the Crown. Henry II. gave it to Peter de Brus (Testa de Nevill, p. 379 a) and, from the Pipe Rolls, we learn that it was held by Robert de Brus and others of the family in the reigns of Richard and John, scutage of 1 marc being paid as late as the year 1214. The advowson of the Church of Edenhal was granted by Edward I. to the Priory of Carlisle, in whose hands it was in 1299

171. CONVENTIO FACTA INTER PRIOREM DE WEDERHAL ET ALANUM FABRUM DE GRINGELDIC.

ANNO Gratiaē Millesimo Ducentesimo Quadragesimo primo ad Pentecosten facta est hæc conventio inter Thomam Priorem de Wederhal¹ ex una parte, et Alanum fabrum de Gringeldic ex altera videlicet Quod prædictus Prior dimisit prædicto Alano totam terram suam in Ruccroft, videlicet novem acras quas Johannes de Ruccroft aliquando tenuit de Priore de Wederhal usque ad terminum duodecim annorum plene completorum. Reddet autem prædictus Alanus Domui de Wederhal singulis annis sex solidos ad duos terminos medietatem ad Festum Sancti Martini in yeme et aliam medietatem ad Pentecosten. Et sciendum quod prædictus Alanus molet ad molendinum de Gringeldic ad vicesimum vas totum bladum suum in prædicta terra crescentem similiter totum bladum quod alibi acquirere poterit et solvet vicesimum porcum ad pannagium et sustinebit domos usque ad terminum prædictum. Completis autem duodecim annis remanebit prædicta terra cum omnibus ædificiis soluta et quieta a prædicto Alano et omnibus suis. Et sciendum est quod si prædictus Prior terram illam, quam Johannes de Ruccroft detenet injuste, poterit acquirere, prædictus Alanus habebit illam cum prædictis novem acris pro prædicta firma. (Register Bp Halton, MS. p. 42), and it was appropriated to them in 1303—4 (Inquis. p. m. 32 Edward I. No. 130).

¹⁰ The date of the charter must be after 1239, when Walter de Ulvesby became Archdeacon (see on No. 56), and, looking at the dates of Martin of Kirkoswald, probably 1240—50.

171. ¹ This is not Thomas de Wymondham, Prior in 1270 (see note on No. 96), as other Priors came between (see Appendix E).

² The date of the charter is Pentecost, 1241.

173. ¹ Robert de Levington, or rather Lexinton, as in No. 226, was Justice Itinerant as early as 1230, when he was one of the judges in the great suit, Alan de Multon and his wife against Lambert de Multon and his wife, for the property of Richard de Lucy (Pedes Finium, 15 Hen. III. No. 12). The four justices mentioned here appear to have been at Carlisle also in 1242 (compare No. 226) when Alan de Multon and his wife were again before the court (Pedes Finium, 26 Hen. III. No. 31); but the names are evidently incorrectly copied here. Levington is Lexinton, Radulph de Revcleg⁷ (in No. 226 Muthleg⁷) should be Sutleg⁷, William de Culewrch (in No. 226 Colewurth) is Culewurthe, and Sollan is Jollan de Nevill.

² Jollan de Nevill, in 1244, paid a fine of 20 marcs for permission to marry Sara widow of John Heriz; in October, 1246, he was dead and his son Jollan got seisin of his property (Fine Rolls, ed. Roberts, i. 426, 464). He has been supposed, and with fairly good reason, to have been the compiler of Testa de Nevill; see the Preface to the Record Com. edition, and an article in The Genealogist, v. p. 35.

174. FINIS FACTUS IN CURIA DOMINI REGIS DE DUABUS BOVATIS TERRÆ IN CRINGELDIC.

HÆC est Finalis Concordia facta in Curia Domini Regis apud Karliolum in crastino Nativitatis Beatæ Mariæ Anno Regni Regis Henrici filij Regis Johannis undecimo coram Rogero Bertram, Briano filio Alani¹, Simone de Hal, York, from 1239 to 1244, and therefore at this time; see note 5 on No. 46.

⁵ The grant is in No. 172.

⁷ The date is three weeks from S. Michael's day, 25 Hen. III., or October 20th, 1241.

174. ¹ Brian son of Alan, or FitzAlan, was an important person in the reign of Henry III. He was Sheriff for Northumberland from 1227 to 1235. With Roger Bertram he formed part of the escort of Alexander II. King of Scotland, when he went to York in Lent 1228—29 to meet Henry III. (Close Rolls, 13 Hen. III. m. 17 d; Rymer, Fœdera, new ed. i. 193), and was often employed in Scotch affairs.

Willelmo de Eboraco Justiciarijs Domini Regis Itinerantibus et alijs Domini Regis Fidelibus tunc ibi præsentibus inter Thomam de Maleton² et Adam uxorem ejus, Ricardum Gernun et Johannam uxorem ejus petentes, et Robertum³ Abbatem Sanctæ Mariæ de Eboraco tenentem de duabus bovatis terræ cum pertinentijs in Cringeldick Unde Assisa mortis Antecessorum summonita fuit inter eos in eadem Curia: Scilicet quod prædicti Thomas et Ada Ricardus et Johanna remiserunt et quietum clamaverunt de se et hæredibus ipsarum Adæ et Johannæ eidem Abbati et successoribus suis et Ecclesiæ prædictæ totum jus et clamium quod habuerunt in prædictis duabus bovatis terræ cum pertinentijs imperpetuum. Et pro hac remissione et quietâ clamatione fine et Concordia idem Abbas recepit prædictos Thomam et Adam Ricardum et Johannam et eorum hæredes in singulis Beneficijs et Orationibus quæ de cetero fient in Ecclesia sua de Eboraco imperpetuum⁴.

175. QUIETA CLAMATIO JOHANNIS DE HERMIÑE FILIJ WILLELMI DE HERMIÑE DE DUABUS BOVATIS TERRÆ IN KABERGH.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam præsens scriptum pervenerit Johannes de Hermiñe¹ filius Willelmi de Hermiñe Salutem æternam in Domino. OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam præsens scriptum pervenerit Henricus de Hulvesthuayt Salutem æternam in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra me Divinæ Pietatis intuitu et pro salute animæ meæ et pro salute animarum Prædecessorum et Successorum meorum dedisse concessisse et præsentī carta confirmasse Deo et Abbaciæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Monachis de Wederhal in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam totum pratum meum de Smalewathis quod quidem pratum meum jacet inter divisam de Croglyn et de Kaberge. Habendum et Tenendum imperpetuum liberum solutum et quietum de me et hæredibus meis ad omnimodum commodum suum faciendum sicut sibi melius viderint expedire. Et Ego et hæredes mei dictum pratum prædictis Monachis imperpetuum warrantizabimus acquietabimus et defendemus. In cujus rei Testimonium præsentī scripto sigillum meum apposui. ⁵ Adam de Scireloc, or Schyrloc, is called of Ulvesby in No. 183.

176. ¹ John de Tabge should be de Caberge, see No. 177, where he appears with Alan "his brother," also see on No. 138.

² Comparing this with the other charter of Henry de Hulvesthwayt about 1252 (No. 157), we have evidently the same date here, and, from the witnesses, a date somewhat later than the charters preceding.

177. CARTA HENRICI DE ULVESTHUAYT FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHAL DE QUODAM PRATO IN SMALEUUAYES.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam presens scriptum pervenerit Henricus de Ulvesthuayt Salutem æternam in Domino. 178. QUIETA CLAMATIO JOHANNIS FILIJ WILLELMI DE WEDERHAL DE DUABUS BOVATIS TERRÆ IN KABERGH.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam præsens scriptum pervenerit Johannes filius Willelmi de Wederhal Salutem æternam in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra me pro salute animæ meæ reddidisse et quietas clamasse de me et hæredibus meis imperpetuum Deo et Abbati Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et ejusdem loci Conventui necnon et Monachis de Wederhal duas bovatas terræ cum pertinentijs in territorio de Kabergh quas ego aliquando tenui de dictis Monachis de Wederhal ad inveniendum unum cereum¹ octo librarum imperpetuum per Priorem dictæ Domus de Wederhale ardentem singulis diebus coram Altari Gloriosæ et perpetuæ Virginis Mariæ quamdiu aliqua Missa celebrata in honore Gloriosæ Virginis ad dictum Altare duraverit. Ego autem et hæredes mei prædictam terram cum omnibus pertinentijs suis Deo et Abbachiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Monachis de Wederhal contra omnes homines warantizabimus acquietabimus et defendemus imperpetuum. Et ne quis hæredum meorum possit in posterum contra hanc Donationem meam venire, eandem cum sigillo meo præsentis scripto apposito corroboravi. 179. CARTA RADULPHI DE HOF FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHAL DE QUADAM TERRA IN HUTESKOU IN PAROCHIA DE KIRCHOSWALD.

SCIANT omnes qui viderint vel audierint Litteras has quod Ego Radulphus de Hof cum consilio et assensu Uxoris meæ et hæredum meorum concessi et dedi et hac præsentis carta mea confirmavi Deo et Ecclesiæ Sancti Constantini de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus quandam terram in Huttescou¹ in Parochia de Kirkeoswald, 178. ¹ Cereum, "a wax candle"; the weight, 8 pounds, given here is worthy of note.

² A comparison of this charter with No. 142, which John son of William de Wederhal attests, would seem to shew that it is not far from the same date, soon after 1239, or about 1240.

179. ¹ Huttescou or Huddescoch (No. 180), called later Huddleskeugh, was in the northern part of Kirkoswald, and adjoining Hareskeugh, which runs up into the eastern fells. Land in Hareskeugh was granted to the Priory of Lanercost by Ada Engayne, wife of Robert de Vallibus, when it is called "Little Haresco," and the grant was confirmed by Hugh de Morvill, when it is called "Little Harescou," and the bounds are set out (Regist.

Lanercost, MS. ii. 11, 12; see also x. 12, 13). These bounds are in terms very similar to those used here of Huttescou.

181. CARTA GERALDI DE MELMORBI FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHAL DE UNA BOVATA TERRÆ CUM TOFTO ET CROFTO IN MELMORBY.

UNIVERSIS Christi Fidelibus ad quorum notitiam præsens scriptum pervenerit Geraldus de Melmorby salutem æternam in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra me Divinæ

180. ¹ Robert de Longo Campo, Abbot from 1197 to 1239, see note 3 on No. 10.

Pietatis intuitu et pro salute animæ meæ et animarum Prædecessorum et Successorum meorum dedisse concessisse et præsentī carta confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Monachis de Wederhal ibidem Deo servientibus unam bovatom terræ in territorio de Melmorby¹ cum tofto et crofto, Illam videlicet bovatom quæ jacet propinquior terræ Adæ filij Henrici versus orientem, Insuper autem unam acram et dimidiam terræ in Cumbretrute-wra. Habendam et Tenendam in liberam puram et perpetuam Elemosinam cum omnibus pertinentijs libertatibus et aisiamentis Villæ de Melmorby spectantibus ad sustentamentum Luminaris Ecclesiæ de Wederhal. Ego vero et hæredes mei hanc Elemosinam dictis Monachis contra omnes homines imperpetuum warantizabimus acquietabimus et defendemus. Et ut hoc scriptum ratum permaneat et inconcussum illud sigilli mei appositione corroboravi. Hijs Testibus, Symone Capellano, Ricardo Diacono, Radulpho Clerico, Waltero janitore, Thoma Dispensatore, Johanne Coquo, Johanne de Aglunby, Johanne filio Willelmi Clerici², Ranulpho filio Umfridi et multis alijs³.

181. ¹ Melmorby, said to have been the abode of Melmor a Dane, was a parish and manor on the east of the river Eden, lying under the eastern fells between Ulvesby (or Ousby) and Gamelsby in the parish of Addingham. At this time the manor was held by the second Adam son of Odard, Baron of Wigton, or his father; and later in the century we find it in possession of another Odard de Wygeton and his son Walter; see on Odard note 5, No. 72. There is a curious petition in the reign of Edward II., shewing that a fortress called the Tower of Melmorby, capable of being guarded by 12 men-at-arms, had been long held by John de Denum against the Scots, but his lands are so wasted that he cannot provide a garrison, and he prays help of the King. The petition is endorsed "Some marriage ward or farm to be looked out, and the King will give him a reward" (Calend. Doc. Scot. ed. Bain, iii. 163).

182. CARTA WILLELMI FILIJ ADÆ DE MORA DE 2 BOVATIS TERRÆ CUM TOFTO ET CROFTO IN MELMORBY.

UNIVERSIS Christi Fidelibus ad quorum notitiam præsens Scriptum pervenerit Willelmus filius Adæ de Mora¹ Salutem æternam in Domino. Noverit Universitas vestra me Divinæ Pietatis intuitu et pro salute animæ meæ et animarum Prædecessorum et Successorum meorum dedisse concessisse et præsentī carta mea confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus illas duas bovatas terræ cum pertinentijs in Villa de Melmorby cum tofto et crofto quas Henricus Blanchard de me aliquando tenuit Illas scilicet quæ jacent inter terram Beatæ Mariæ Karleoli et Littilgilsic. Habendas et Tenendas dictæ Ecclesiæ et dictis Monachis de Wederhal in liberam puram et perpetuam Elemosinam cum omnibus pertinentijs libertatibus communis et aisiamentis Villæ de Melmorby spectantibus sine aliquo retenemento ad sustentamentum Luminaris prædictæ Ecclesiæ de Wederhal. Ego vero et hæredes mei totam prædictam terram prædictis Monachis contra omnes homines imperpetuum warantizabimus acquietabimus et defendemus. Et ut hoc scriptum ratum permaneat et inconcussum illud sigilli mei appositione corroboravi. Hijs Testibus, Domino Radulpho tunc Priore Karleoli, Domino Waltero Officiario Karleoli, Domino Roberto Decano de Croglyn, Michaelae Capellano de Kirkeoswald, Henrico Capellano de Wederhale, Hugone Capellano de Warthwic et multis alijs².

182. ¹ The family of de Mora, or de la More, was connected with Gilsland. This may be the same William de Mora who attests the charter of Matilda de Vallibus, No. 194, dated 1271; under the same date he, with his wife Agnes, quitclaimed property in Farlam and Little Camboc to the Priory of Lanercost (Regist. Lanercost, MS. xii. 13); he was also witness to several of their charters.

² The date of this charter will be after 1231, when Radulph became Prior, and before 1239, when Walter de Ulvesby probably became Archdeacon (see on Nos. 56, 97).

183. CARTA ROBERTI DE ROBERTBY FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHAL DE 3 ACRIIS TERRÆ IN ULVESBY.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus has literas visuris vel audituris Robertus de Roberteby Salutem. Noverit universitas vestra me concessisse dedisse et hac presenti carta mea confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Beatæ Mariæ Eboraci et Monachis de Wederhal Deo servientibus tres acras terræ et dimidiam in territorio de Ulvesby quarum una et dimidia jacent in crofto meo ubi horreum meum stat ex parte Australi et aliæ duæ super Borganessat ex parte Aquilonis quæ se extendunt de Sunnivegile usque ad fossatum de Castlelslac ad sustentamentum Luminaris Altaris Sanctæ Mariæ Ecclesiæ de Wederhal. Tenendas et Habendas in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam cum omnibus pertinentijs et Aisiamentis et libertatibus pertinentibus ad Villam de Ulvesby salva multura vicesimi vasis molendino de Ulvesby debita. Ego vero Robertus et hæredes mei dictam terram dictis Monachis warantizabimus contra omnes homines et foeminas imperpetuum. 184. CARTA ADÆ FILIJ ALANI FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHAL DE DIMIDIA CARUCATA TERRÆ IN ORMESBY.

ADAM filius Alani omnibus legentibus vel audientibus litteras has tam præsentibus quam futuris Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs Salutem. Sciatis me dedisse et præsentem carta confirmasse Deo et Beatæ Mariæ et Sancto Constantino de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus dimidiam carucatam terræ in Ormesby¹ cum omnibus pertinentijs suis in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam ab omni exactione et servicio liberam et quietam. Similiter concessi eis communem pasturam præfata Villæ ad pecuniam Dominij sui pro anima Patris et Matris meæ et pro salute mea et uxoris meæ et omnium Parentum meorum tam vivorum quam defunctorum. Hijs Testibus, Willelmo fratre meo, Roberto de Hornesby², Huctredo Presbitero de Carlaton³, Reinaldo Presbytero, Helya Sacerdote, Kettello Clerico, et multis alijs⁴.

185. CARTA ADÆ FILIJ ROBERTI DE DIMIDIA CARUCATA TERRÆ IN ORMESBY CUM PASTURA CCC. OVIUM.

SCIANTE præsentis et futuri quod Ego Adam filius Roberti¹ cum consilio et assensu uxoris meæ Matildæ et hæredum meorum et amicorum dedi et concessi et præsentis carta mea confirmavi Deo et Abbachia Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Monachis Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhal pro salute animæ meæ et Antecessorum meorum dimidiam carucatam terræ in campis de Ormesby quæ dicitur Mirland cum omnibus pertinentijs et aisiamentis ad Villam de Ormesby ubique spectantibus infra Villam et extra sine aliquo retenemento in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam. Insuper autem præter communem pasturam 184. ¹ Ormesby, or Hornsby, is in the southern part of the parish of Cumwhitton, see below on Cumquintyngton in No. 190.

⁴ There is nothing special to help to fix the date of this charter, unless the conjecture with regard to Robert de Hornesby be correct.

185. ¹ Adam son of Robert, i.e. de Karliol, as shewn by his son, Eudo de Karliol, in the next charter. Robert was the grandson of Hildred de Carlel and son of Odard (see note 9 on No. 72). This Adam was therefore the brother of Odard de Hodema, who got seisin of some of his father's property in 1210 (see on No. 73). He gave a moiety of the tithes of Little Bampton to the Hospital of S. Nicholas, Carlisle (see on No. 95).

quæ ad prædictam dimidiam carucatam terræ pertinet dedi et concessi et hac præsentī carta mea confirmavi predictis Monachis in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam pasturam ubique in predicta Villa de Ormesby proprijs animalibus eorum et specialiter trecentis matricibus ovibus cum agnis suis vel totidem multonibus. Habendam et tenendam imperpetuum sine aliqua contradictione vel impedimento mei vel hæredum meorum. Et Ego et hæredes mei hanc prædictam Elemosinam præfatis Monachis contra omnes homines warantizabimus et defendemus imperpetuum. In cujus rei Testimonium præsentī scripto sigillum meum apposui. Hijs Testibus, Petro de Ditheric tunc Vicecomite Karlioli, Duncano de Lascelis², Roberto filio Willelmi³,

² Duncan de Lascelis appears in the Pipe Rolls as early as 1200, with Christiana his wife, as having "her land in Boultona which is her heritage, since she cannot have a reasonable part of her heritage in Scotland." This Christiana, there seems little doubt, was the daughter of Walter de Wyndeshore; see on this Walter in No. 134, note 2, where it is shewn she had property in her own right in Scotland and elsewhere. No doubt incorrectly, Waldef son of Gospatric is spoken of as her "father" instead of her ancestor in a Final Concord between Duncan de Lascelles and Christiana his wife and Hugh, Abbot of Geddeworthe (Jedburgh) regarding the advowson of the Church of Bastenethwait in 1208 (Pedes Finium, 10 Joh., ed. Hunter, ii. 10). J. Denton (Cumberland, p. 52) speaks of Christiana as a descendant of Gospatric, a bastard son of Waldeof and lord of Boulton; but I have been unable to find any authority for the statement, or that this Gospatric had any son Waldef. Duncan appears in the Pipe Rolls for Cumberland in 1205—6 as making a payment in connection with the Church of Boulton; and, with Christiana, in the Pipe Rolls for Buckingham and Bedford, the next year, as paying 240 marks for the whole land of Walter de Windlesores, held of the King in capite; and in the same Rolls for 1210—11 he occurs as owing 60 marcs and a palfrey for getting seisin of his land whereof he was disseised by the King's writ for not attending him with horse and arms in the army of Scotland. The next year there is a curious reference to this debt; and in the autumn, among the announcements of the justices, we find William Briwere in charge of Christiana, the daughter of Duncan, and responsible for the debts which Duncan and Ranulph de Hosdeng owed the Jews for Walter de

SCIANT præsentēs et futuri quod Ego Eudo de Karliolo¹ filius Adæ filij Roberti consensu et consilio hæredum meorum concessi et præsentī carta confirmavi Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Domui Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus dimidiam carucatam terræ in campo de Ormesby quæ dicitur Mirland quam Pater meus eis dedit in Elemosinam. Adico autem ex dono meo prædictis Monachis totam illam terram quæ mihi pertinebat de qua tuli Breve de nova disseisina super Warinum de Mira qui prædictam terram tenuit. Habendam et Tenendam simul cum prædicta dimidia carucata terræ in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam cum omnibus pertinentijs libertatibus communis et aisiamentis infra Villam et extra prædictæ terræ pertinentibus. Ego vero et hæredes mei totam prædictam terram cum pertinentijs prædictis Monachis imperpetuum warantizabimus et defendemus. Et ut hæc mea donatio et confirmatio firma et stabilis perseveret præsentī scripto sigillum meum apposui. Hijs Testibus, Roberto de Windlesores. Hence it is clear that Duncan de Lascels died in 1211. His daughter appears a little later as holding lands for 3 knights' fees, of the barony of Walter de Wyndesor in Buckinghamshire (Calend. Doc. Scot. ed. Bain, i. 96). Duncan de Lascels was witness to several charters of Robert son of Ranulph de Vallibus (the 2nd Robert) in the Register of Lanercost (MS. ii. 2, 3, 4, 5).

³ Robert son of William, the son of Odard de Corkeby; he married Alicia de Lascels; see note 1 on No. 37.

⁴ From Duncan de Lascels and other witnesses, the date will be before 1211, in the early years of the 13th century.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quos præsens scriptum pervenerit Henricus filius Warini de Scalewra salutem in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra me dedisse et concessisse et præsentī carta mea confirmasse Ricardo Maunsel¹ et hæredibus suis vel suis assignatis totam terram meam quam habui in territorio de Ormesby cum omnibus ædificijs de marisco extra Villam de Karlaton² et cum omnibus

189. ¹ Richard Maunsel is, probably, the same as the Richard Mansel, grantor of No. 77 and No. 190.

² Karlaton, or Carlaton, must be distinguished from Karleton, or Carleton, about 3 miles south-east of Carlisle, and given by Henry I. to Walter his chaplain, afterwards a Canon, and perhaps Prior, of Carlisle (Testa de Nevill, p. 379 b, and see on Walter, Prior, No. 28). Karlaton was a parish and manor in the Barony of Gilsland, adjoining on the north-east the parish of Cumwhitton in which this Ormesby was situated. This mariscus, or marsh, was probably on the south near the waste now existing. In the Pipe Rolls for 1158 Carlatun appears as being in the hands of Gospatric son of Mapbennoc, who pays one silver marc for it; in 1186 it appears among the escheats of the King, and is accounted for by the Sheriff; while later it is held from King John by Robert de Ros (Testa de Nevill, p. 379 a). It was one of the manors granted to Alexander King of Scotland by Henry III. (see on Scotby, note 9, No. 14 and on Robert de Ros, note 5, No. 44). The Church of Karlaton was one of the Churches granted by Robert de Vallibus in the Foundation Charter of the Priory of Lanercost; but there must have been some difficulty, as it is given in Testa de Nevill (p. 379 a) among the Churches in the gift of the King; and later, after some controversy, it was granted by

190. QUIETA CLAMATIO RICARDI MANSEL DE TOTA TERRA SUA QUÆ VOCATUR MIRLAND IN ORMESBY.

UNIVERSIS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam hoc præsens scriptum pervenerit Ricardus de Hedon¹ dictus

Edward I. to the Priory of Lanercost when he was in Carlisle on March 17th, 1307 (see Bishop Halton's Register, MS. pp. 56, 116, 140; Register of Lanercost, MS. xii. 4; Patent Rolls, 35 Edw. I. m. 25; Rymer, Fædera, new ed. i. 1012). After the dissolution the parish was merged in others, and the site of the Church alone remains. Built into the farm house near is an interesting sepulchral slab with the inscription: "Hic jacet Henricus de Newton qui fuit Vicarius de Carlaton. Orate pro anima ejus." He was made Vicar in August, 1320, presented by the Convent of Lanercost (Register of Bp Halton, MS. p. 222). Huctred, presbyter of Carlaton, is a witness to No. 184.

³ This Thomas de Multon is the second of the name, called "of Gilsland," he died in 1271; see note 4 on No. 47.

⁴ This charter is evidently later than the preceding, but must be prior to 1271, when Thomas de Multon died.

190. ¹ Richard de Hedon is the same as Richard Maunsel of the preceding charters, and the grantor of No. 77.

Maunsel salutem in Domino sempiternam. Noverit universitas vestra me reddidisse et relaxasse et omnino pro me et hæredibus meis quietam clamasse imperpetuum Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, et Domui Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhal et Monachis Deo ibidem servientibus totam terram illam cum ædificijs suis et suis pertinentijs quæ vocatur Mirland in campo de Ormesby in Villa de Cumquintyngton² sine aliquo retenemento, Quam quidem terram cum ædificijs aliquando tenui de Abbate et Conventu Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Domo Sanctæ Trinitatis et Sancti Constantini de Wederhal, Et quam quidem terram cum suis pertinentijs non tenui de eisdem nisi ad terminum vitæ meæ. Ita videlicet quod nec Ego Ricardus nec hæredes mei nec mei assignati nec aliquis nomine nostro in predicta terra cum suis pertinentijs de cætero aliquid juris vel clamij petere vel vindicare poterimus. ² Cumquintyngton, hodie Cumwhitton, lies on the east side of the river Eden, in the Barony of Gilsland, between the parish of Ainstable on the south and Corby, in the parish of Wetherhal, and the parish of Castlecarrock on the north. The place must be carefully distinguished from Cumquintin, hodie Cumwhinton, in the parish of Wetherhal, on the west side of the Eden; see on No. 71 and following charters.

191. CONFIRMATIO ROBERTI DE WALLIBUS FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHAL DE OMNIBUS TERRIS SIBI DATIS IN GILLESLAND.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam præsens scriptum pervenerit Robertus de Wallibus¹ salutem. Sciatis me pro salute animarum Patris et Matris meæ et Antecessorum et Successorum meorum concessisse et presenti carta imperpetuum confirmasse Deo et Sancto Constantino de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus omnia bona quæ Osbertus² et Willelmus filius Odardi Domini de Corkeby et cæteri liberi homines mei in Gillesland³ dederunt eis in Elemosinam tam in terris quam 191. ¹ This is Robert de Vallibus, the second Baron of Gillesland, who succeeded in 1164—65; see note 4 on No. 28.

² Osbert, elder brother of William son of Odard, see note 1 on No. 35.

³ The Barony of Gillesland was the great district on the opposite side of the river Eden to Wetherhal, lying to the east and the far north-east. It included Corkeby. The boundaries of the Barony are set out in the local histories (see Nicolson and Burn, History ii. 479; Cumb. Archæol. Trans. iv. 452). According to Camden the first Lord of Gillesland was William Meschines, brother of Ranulph (see on No. 2), but Gill son of Bueth held it by force of arms (Britannia, ed. Holland, p. 176). Of this he gives no evidence; but there is no doubt that Gille son of Bueth had the land, and probably gave it the name (see on Robert son of Bueth in No. 107). Henry II. on recovering the northern counties granted Gillesland to Hubert de Vallibus (Testa de Nevill, 379 a, and see on Robert de Vallibus in No. 28. The charter is also given in full in the Illustrative Doc. xx11.). The names of the witnesses to the grant enable us to fix the date pretty closely. R. (Roger de Bishopbridge), Archbishop of York Oct. 1154—1181, R. (Robert de Chesney) Bishop of Lincoln 1147—Jan. 1167—68, H. (Hugh Pudsey), Bishop of Durham Dec. 1153—March 1195. These witnesses give limits from Oct. 1154 to Jan. 1167—68, and Hubert de Vallibus died in 1164. The grant must therefore have been made in 1155—64, and supports the suggestion (see on No. 28) that Henry II. put Hubert in possession as soon as he got the land from King Malcolm in 1157. Hubert was succeeded by the first Robert, the grantor of this charter. The Barony passed into

⁷ See on Osbert de Ocland in No. 44, note 8.

192. ¹ This is the nephew of the first Robert de Vallibus who grants the preceding charter; see note 13 on No. 38.

⁴ Karu, probably for Karn, hodie Cairn, a stream running through Cumwhitton and part of Carlaton.

de Morvill (MS. ii. 17). He also attests, in the Chartulary of Whitby (ed. Atkinson, i. 38) a charter of Thomas de Hastings, probably his brother, confirming the grant of the Church of Crosby Ravensworth; this Thomas in 1203 succeeded his father Hugh de Hastings, who had married Helen daughter and heir of Alan de Alverstain (see note, No. 252). He also attests another charter of Thomas, granting land at Crosby to the Hospital of S. Leonard at York, which is among the Levens Hall MSS., see 10th Report, Hist. MSS. Com. (4) p. 320.

⁷ Alan de Richemund is witness to a charter of Robert de Veteriponte (who died 1228) in the time of Bishop Walter (1223—46) to the Hospital of S. Peter at York (Duchetiana p. 125, from Dodsworth MSS. vi. fol. 12). The family of Richmond appears to have been connected with the family of Corkeby. We find Isabella, the daughter of the witness here, Robert son of William de Corkeby, having as her first husband Roald son of Alan (see note 5 on No. 47); and according to a MS. of Lord William Howard (quoted by Hutchinson, Hist. Cumb. i. 171) Thomas de Richmund was her son by Roald, and another Thomas her grandson. From three deeds which were in the Milbourne collection, and extracts from which are given at the end of his copy of J. Denton's MS. on Cumberland (ed. Ferguson, p. 165), it appears that Richard de Richemound released his right in the manor of Corkeby to Sir Thomas de Richmund in 1312, and to Andrew de Harcla, Earl of Carlisle in January, 1322, and that Roald the son of Thomas released the manor to Andrew de Harcla in September, 1321. Richard was probably the younger brother of this Thomas. Compare also the pedigree p. 90.

¹⁰ The date must be very nearly the same as that of the preceding charter.

194. ¹ Matilda de Vallibus was, as she calls herself in two of her charters, "daughter of Hubert de Vallibus, Lady and heir of Gillesland, formerly wife of Thomas de Muleton" (Regist. Lanercost, MS. x. 5, 7). This Hubert was the second of the name, see note 6 on No. 192. Matilda, his only child, married Thomas de Muleton, the second of the name, see note 4 on No. 47. He died in 1271, the date of this charter; but Matilda continued to rule and hold Gillesland independent of her son Thomas, who had seisin of the lands which his father had in his own right. She granted several charters in her widowhood to the Priory of Lanercost, calling herself sometimes de Multon, but generally de Vallibus; some are dated, as in 1276, at Kircoswald (Regist. Lanercost, MS. x. 11) in 1285 (x. 18), in 1287 (xi. 8), in 1292 (xi. 6). In the writ of summons for military service issued April 16th,

19 Edward I., 1291, both Thomas de Multon Senior and Junior are summoned, and Matilda de Multon Domina de Gillesland (F. Palgrave, Parliamentary Writs, i. 256). According to the Chronicon de Lanercost (ed. Stevenson, p. 159) she died on S. Dunstan's Day, May 19th, 1295; but according to the Inquisitiones post mort. (21 Edward I. No. 25) she was dead in 1293, "Thomas son of Thomas, above 30 years of age, being her heir."

⁷ The date is the day of the Apostles Peter and Paul, June 29th, 1271.

195. ¹ Alexander de Crevequer married Amabil, or Mabilia, one of the two daughters of Adam son of Suan, the lord of the district in which Culgaith and Kirkandreas were, on the east of the river Eden (see on Adam in note 4 on No. 14). Little seems to be known of the family at this period; for some of the later members, see Dugdale, Baronage, i. 591. His wife Amabil afterwards married Galfrid de Nevill; and they confirmed the grants of Adam son of Suan to the Priory of Monk Bretton in Yorkshire, see the charter in Dugdale Monasticon, v. p. 138.

² From Nos. 14, 196, we see Kirkandreas included the Hermitage and lands adjacent with a wood. This was conveyed to Michael de Hartcla by Simon (de Warwicke) Abbot of S. Mary's at York for a rent of 40s. to the monks of Wederhal (Inquis. ad quod dam. 17 Edw. III. No. 49, Record Com. p. 313). It was probably escheated to the King on the arrest of his brother Andrew de Hartcla; for it was reconfirmed to the Priory by Edward III. in 1369 (Close Rolls, 43 Edw. III. m. 33). The last lease of Kirkandreas on the part of the Priory was made October 20th, 1538 to Christopher Crakenthorpe of Nubigging, and bears the name of William (Thornton) Abbot of S. Mary's, formerly Prior of Wetherhal (see MS. Registers of Dean and Chapter of Carlisle, i. p. 20). In the survey at the time of the Surrender, "the Herbage or Pannage of the wood of Kyrkander" was valued at £1. 6s. 8d. In the Parliamentary Survey of the Manor of Little Salkeld, made February 1649, the Mill and premises, called Millridge Mille, were valued at £6. 13s. 4d. Bishop Nicolson (MSS. vol. ii. p. 135) writes of S. Andrew's Hermitage: "This is now a small piece of woody ground or copses at the bottom of Culgaith-Parks in y^e Parish of Kirkland in lease under the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle to Richard Crackenthorp of Newbiggin Esq^{re}."

usibus proprijs. Hanc autem Elemosinam feci prædictis Monachis pro animabus Patris et Matris meæ et pro liberis meis et pro animabus Antecessorum meorum. ⁴ This should be Montebeġ, the abbreviated form of Montebegon. Adam de Montebegon married Matilda, the other daughter of Adam son of Suan. Adam de Munbegun appears in the Pipe Rolls in 1163 as paying 1 marc. He, together with his wife Matilda, confirmed the grants of Adam son of Suan to the Priory of Monk Bretton in Yorkshire (Dugdale, Monast. v. p. 138). A similar charter was given by John Malherbe (not Manseil, as in No. 197) and his wife Matilda, the widow of Adam de Montbegon. Roger de Montbegon, the son of Adam, also made a grant to that Priory (see on Adam son of Suan, No. 14). The name appears as Adam de Mundegame and de Mondeġ in No. 233, and other variations are found. He makes a similar grant to the present in No. 233, and probably at the same time.

⁸ Herveus Niger attests a charter of Robert son of Colman before 1186, see note 6 on No. 252.

⁹ The date of the charter must be after the death of Adam son of Suan, who was alive in 1159. We have Adam de Mortebeġ and Robert de Thoresby between 1160—70, and this is about the date.

⁴ The date of this charter will be before 1158 when Robert son of Troite was first sheriff, and before 1156 when Bp Athelwold died, who confirmed this grant (see No. 15) and before 1147, prior to which David I. confirmed it (see No. 198).

of the name. Manseil occurs frequently in this Register; but John Malherbe was the second husband of Matilda, daughter of Adam son of Suan (see note 4 on No. 195); as such he, with his wife, confirms the grants of Adam to the Priory of Monk Bretton (Dugdale, Monasticon, v. p. 138); they also confirmed the grant made by Henry son of Suan to the Abbey of Rievaulx (Chart. Rievaulx, ed. Atkinson, p. 62, see also p. 126).

198. ¹ David I. was King of Scots from April 27th, 1124 to his death on May 24th, 1153. As Earl David he granted the charter omnibus probis hominibus suis totius Cumberlandiæ et Westmerlandiæ Francis et Anglis Salutem. No. 106. By his accession, he united the northern and southern districts into one kingdom of Scotland (see Skene, Celtic Scotland, i. 459). In 1136 he invaded England, nominally on behalf of his niece the Empress Matilda, against Stephen, and received Carlisle and part of the district from that King. In 1138 the Scots again ravaged the northern counties. David was defeated in August at the Battle of the Standard, but Cumberland and other portions of the north were allowed to remain with him (see Henry of Huntingdon, Book viii.; John of Hexham, Chron. and Richard of Hexham, Gesta Steph. in ann. 1138, with the good notes of J. Raine, Memorials of Hexham, i. 77 seq. p. 113 seq., and Chron. de Mailros in ann. 1136 seq.). On September 26—29, 1138 David was at Carlisle, and a Provincial Council was held under Alberic, the Papal Legate, Bishop of Ostia, at which Bishop Athelwold was present (see the reff. given above). David founded several bishoprics and monasteries, among the latter Kelso, Melrose (refounded) and Jedburgh (see Skene, Celtic Scotland, ii. 376 seq.; Haddan and Stubbs, Eccles. Doc. vol. ii. Pt. i.). He died in 1153 at Carlisle (John of Hexham in ann. 1153).

² This was John, Bishop of Glasgow. He was consecrated by Pope Paschal II. about 1117, and was the strong opponent of the jurisdiction over Scotland of Archbishop Thurstin and the See of York. He appears to have held out, though enjoined to yield by successive Popes (see Haddan and Stubbs, Eccles. Doc. ii. 16 seq.). At the Council of 1138, referred to above, he was ordered to return to his See from the Abbey of Tiron, where he had retired in 1133. He died in 1147 (John of Hexham, Chron. in ann.; Chron. de Mailros in ann., ed. Gale and Fulman, p. 167) having been the tutor of King David and his life-long friend.

apposui. Hijs Testibus, Dominis Michael de Hartcla tunc Vicecomite Cumberlandiæ, Thoma de Derwenwater¹, Willelmo de Strikeland², Roberto le Engleys³ Militibus, Gilberto de Brunnolvesheued tunc Vicecomite Westmerlandiæ⁴, Domino Waltero tunc Rectore de Neubiggin⁵, 199. ¹ Thomas de Derwentwater, knight, appears frequently as one of the jury in the Assize trials at Appleby in 1292 (see Placita de quo War., Record Com., p. 123*b et. al.*) and was himself called upon to shew quo waranto he held a market in his manor of Keswyk in Derwentfelles without license of the King. He attests the charter No. 203 dated 1292, and was member of Parliament for Westmoreland in 1297. He died in 1302—3 and was succeeded by his son John (Inquis. post mort. 31 Edw. I. No. 15).

This Walter, Rector, or as he is there called, parson of Newebigginge Church, appears in the Coram Rege Rolls in 1258—59, on an action brought against him and Walrand de Soureby by Robert de Veteripont, because they entered his park of Whynefel and there took stags and bucks without his leave (Calend. Doc. Scot. ed. Bain, i. 420).

⁶ Hugh de Louth^{er} was a person of importance in the reigns of Edward I. and Edward II.; he was sheriff of Edinburgh about this time, a justice itinerant in 1301 and 1307, and a knight of the shire of Westmoreland in 1300 and 1305. The manor of Newton Regny was granted to him by Robert Burnel, Bishop of Bath and Wells 1275—92, and confirmed by Edward I.; the terms under which it was held under the King are given in Placita de quo War., Record Com., p. 115 b. From him the present family of Lowther is descended, he having married a daughter of Peter de Tylliol. He assisted in taking Andrew de Harcla in 1323 and was rewarded by Edward II. (Chronicon de Lanercost, ed. Stevenson, pp. 250, 251). There is more about him in Nicolson and Burn (History, i. 429) taken from the Machel MSS.

⁷ Robert de Neubiggin was one of the family who held the manor of Newbiggin (see note 5 above); it was afterwards merged in the family of Crakenthorp, the present holders (see on No. 207). This Robert, according to Machel, married Agnes, a daughter of Wackerfield. In a grant of his son Laurence to the Abbey of Holm Cultram (Dugdale, Monasticon, v. 614) he is called "seneschal of Neubigging."

200. ¹ Bishop Robert Chause, 1258—78, see note 1 on No. 34. These letters of excommunication may have been procured in consequence of the failure of an action brought by the Abbot of S. Mary's at York against Michael de Harcla and others (an "assize of novel disseisin") touching a fosse destroyed in Culgethe in 1273 (see Patent Rolls, 1 Edw. I. m. 11).

² Kirkeland is the most southern of the parishes of Cumberland on the east side of the Eden, in it Culgayth was situated, see on No. 195. The Church had long belonged to the Bishop of Carlisle, and was granted by Bishop Marmaduke Lumley to the Priory of Carlisle in the reign of Henry VI. between 1431—40 (Inquis. ad quod dam., Record Com., p. 379), but as early as 1294 it paid to the Priory an annual pension of 20s. (Bishop Halton's Register, MS. p. 5).

 Datum apud Rosam⁵ XVI^o Kal. Aprilis Anno Domini

⁵ Rosa, or La Rose, later Rose Castle, about 7 miles south of Carlisle, has been a residence of the Bishops of Carlisle since the 13th century. Various derivations have been given of the name; the simplest and most probable is the name of the flower, the rose being an emblem of the Blessed Virgin Mary, to whom the Cathedral Church of Carlisle was at first dedicated. It was usually stated in the local notices of the Castle that the first mention of Rose was in connection with the writs issued in 1300 by Edward I., and dated "Apud la Rose, xxvi. die Septembris" (see Parliamentary Writs, ed. Palgrave, i. 90), and consequently that it was built by Bishop Halton (Hutchinson, Cumberland, ii. 433; Cumberland Archæol. Trans., ii. 156, vi. 14); but I pointed out some years ago that there are much earlier references to the place. There is in the Register of Lanercost (MS. ix. 14) a deed of concession of the Church of Laysingby to which this Bishop Robert Chause is a party and which is dated Apud Rosam 6^{to} Kal. Maii, 1272; another deed, of the same Bishop in the same Register (x. 8) is dated Apud Rosam 10^o Kal. Novem. 1275; and we have the present charter in April, 1274. But there is a still earlier notice. A concession of Thomas Vipont, Bishop of Carlisle, to Alan de Berwise to build a private chapel on his property in Berwise is dated "Apud la Rose vii^o Kalend. marcii Pontificatus nostri anno primo," i.e. 1256. The deed is given in full in the Machel MSS. v. 255 from the original in the possession of the family of Craken-thorp. We thus get within 10 years of Bishop Walter Malclerk, who resigned in June, 1246 and to whom the manor was granted in 1230. It seems pretty certain that the manor house, or one built by Bishop Walter, was at once made an episcopal residence. On the Bishop's residence at Lynstock see No. 239. In the 14th century, references to Manerium nostrum de Rosa are frequent; and later we have the form "The Rose" (1571). Rose was in the parish and manor of Dalston; the advowson of the Church was granted with the manor of Dalston by Henry III., in 1230, to Bishop Walter Malclerk (Assize Rolls for Cumberland, 1278; Placita de quo War., Record Com., p. 112 a; the grant is given, but no reference, in Nicolson and Burn, History, ii. 541). There is no real authority for the statement that Rose was first built by Bishop Halton. Architects put the oldest remains in the 13th century, and it is more probable that one of the Bishops before 1292 did the work. Rose was crenellated under license to Bishop John de Kirkby in the 10th year of Edward III. (1336).

⁶ The manor of Soureby, called Temple Soureby, even in 1291, was in the north-west of the parish of Kirkbythore, and adjacent to Neubiggin and to Culgayth in Kirkland here mentioned. The manor was held by the Knights Templars until their suppression by Papal Bull, May 2nd, 1312, and hence it claimed certain privileges to a late date. It was, like most of their possessions, transferred in 1320 to the Knights of S. John of Jerusalem, or Knights Hospitallers, with whom it remained until the Dissolution under Henry VIII. ; see the account of the Knights in Dugdale, Monasticon, vi. 786, 815 and the deed of transference p. 849. The amount of their possessions may be gathered from the list of 31 other places where they held property in Cumberland and Westmoreland, given in Placita de quo War., Record Com., pp. 117 b, 792 b, see also pp. 786 b, 787 b. In the Register of Bishop Kirkby (MS. p. 382) under date 1338, there is a reference to a curious award made by Bishop Ralph de Irton, 1280—92, that the inhabitants of Temple Soureby were not to be called upon to aid in repairing the Church of Kirkbythore, unless the nave had to be enlarged, when they were to pay one-third of the expense.

⁷ The date is S. Mark's Day, April 25th, 1275.

201. ¹ The family of Strickland, or Styrceland, took its name from the vill of Stirkeland Magna (see No. 203) in the parish of Morland in Westmoreland; derived from Anglo-Saxon styric, "a stirk," a young heifer or bullock. Walter de Styrceland appears in the Pipe Rolls for Cumberland as paying an amercement of 1 marc in 1214. On January 22, 1216, his "son or daughter and heir" is mentioned as one of the hostages for Gilbert son of Roger son of Reinfrid to King John for his fidelity (Rot. de Oblat. et Finibus, 17 Joh. Lancashire, Record Com., p. 571; Close Rolls, Record Com. i. 248, 335). This hostage was probably his son Adam, who attests the next charter, and of whom nothing else seems to be known. Walter attests No. 210 about 1232—35. On April 24, 1212, Walter was witness to the confirmation charter of Robert de Veteripont to the Abbey of Heppe, or Shap, together with the above-named Gilbert, Randolph Deincurt, Anselm de Furness and William de Thirneby (Dugdale, Monasticon, vi. 869). He makes a grant to Wederhal of 4 acres in No. 202. There does not seem to be any evidence that he married, as asserted, Cristina, daughter of Roger son of Reinfrid. An elaborate pedigree of the family is given by E. Bellasis, Lancaster Herald, in the Cumb. and West.
Archæol. Trans. x. 75, but no additional light is thrown on these earlier members. Later the family was connected with Sizergh in the parish of Kendal, but see more on William de Stirkeland in No. 203.
Walter and his son must have been dead when Robert, his grandson, came into possession, see on No. 203.

souls of the donors or others. This chantry was to be in the private

A similar permission was given by the Priory of Lanercost in 1293 to Robert de Denton to have a chantry in the Chapel in his manor of Lanerton; he was to pay annually 1 lb. of wax, and all offerings were to go to the mother Church of Lanercost (Regist. Lanercost, MS. xii. 25). All the endowments of these chantries were seized under 1 Edward VI. c. 14, and sold to private persons.

¹⁰ Of Thomas de Louth little is known, except that he cannot be identical with the witness of the same name to a grant by Liulf son of Liulf of Kirkbythore to the Abbey of Holm Cultram in the 12th century. He and his wife Beatrix paid a fine of a marc in 1259 to have a judicial writ (Fine Rolls, 43 Hen. III. m. 7, ed. Roberts ii. 300). He also attests No. 210.

202. ¹ Robert de Castelkairoc is the second of the name (see note 3 on No. 46), the words fratre meo probably imply that he was the brother-in-law of Walter de Stirkeland.

⁴ Hugh Francigena was probably the father of another John le

Fraunceys, to whom the manor of Maulds Meaburn was given by Robert de Veteriponte in 1242, see Machel MSS. iv. 243 and below on No. 211.

⁵ The date must be nearly that of the preceding charter, probably 1234—36.

203. ¹ William de Stirkeland in this charter names Walter de Stirkeland as his great-grandfather; and we saw (Nos. 201, 202) that Walter had a son Adam. The father of this William was Robert de Stirkeland, knight, who is a witness to No. 205. This Robert is called the son of Adam in a quitclaim to Alica de Levens (which I have not seen) among documents in the possession of the Stricklands of Sizergh; and among the same documents is a settlement by Robert de Stirkeland of the manor of Great Stirkeland on this his son William and Elizabeth, daughter of Ralph Deincourt and Helen, daughter of Anseim de Furness, on their marriage, said to be dated June 23rd, 1239 (Bellasis). At the same time the manor of Sizergh was settled upon them by Ralph Deincourt, and became the residence of the family. [Can the above date be correct when we have his great-grandfather Walter alive and in possession 5 or 6 years before? see on No. 201 and note the dates following.] An Escheat given among the Inquisitiones p. m. (3 Edw. I. No. 74) shews that Elizabeth was the wife of William in 1275, and had brought him certain lands in Westmoreland from her father Ralph Ayncurt. Robert was an inquisitor concerning the lands of Walter de Lyndesay in 1272, and on the extent of the manor of Kyrkeby in Kendale in 1274 (Calend. Doc. Scot., ed. Bain, i. 537, ii. 4); he died in 1278, when he was one of the coroners for the county. The son William, after his marriage referred to above, appears in numerous charters, many of which are referred to by Nicolson and Burn (History, i. 89), without giving their authority, but apparently taken by Machel from the Sizergh documents. Other deeds, about the date of this charter, are quoted by Sir G. Duckett (Duchetiana, p. 309). It appears that William released to his son Walter the manor of Sizergh and other lands which had come by his wife Elizabeth, who was dead in 1303 (see Inquis. p. m. 31 Edward I. No. 130).

year, 1292. But see the extracts, referred to above, in Duchetiana, p. 309 seq. where there is much about the family.

⁵ The date is the Thursday after February 12th, 1292.

204. ¹ Robert de Veteriponte, Vieuxpont, or Vipont, the father of the grantor, was a strong supporter of King John, and received from that King, in the 4th year of his reign, a grant, dated at Rouen, March 31st, of the Barony of Westmoreland, with the Sheriffwick, and the castles of Apelby and Burgh, to be held during pleasure (Patent Rolls, 4 Joh. m. 2, Record Com. p. 27 a). The next year of his reign, by a deed dated October 28th, 1203, the King gave it to him in perpetuity (see Dugdale, Baronage, i. 347; Nicolson and Burn, History i. 267, who gives the deed in full from Dugdale MSS. in Machel, and many particulars about the Veteriponts; see also for the deed Additional Charter No. 253). The deed bears upon the present charter, one of the saving clauses being: "et salvo quod dictus Robertus vel sui neque vastum neque exitium facere poterint in bruillis de Whinfell, vel in ipsis venari quamdiu vixerimus sine corpore ipsius Roberti." His father's name was William and his mother's Mahald, or Matilda, as is shewn in an Inspeximus of a charter of his to the Hospital of S. Peter (later S. Leonard) at York, granting land at Meburn (Charter Rolls, 22 Edw. I. m. 3 and 4). His mother, Matilda, was a sister of Hugh de Morville of Burgh (see note 8 on No. 101) and gave the name to Meaburn Matilda, or Mauds Meaburn, in the parish of Crosby Ravensworth (p. 13); she is also mentioned with Ivo his brother in his charter to the Abbey of Heppe, or Shap, dated Cliburn, Saturday, April 24th, 1212 (Dugdale, Monast. vi. 869). He was a justice itinerant in 1206, 1218 and 1226 (see the references in E. Foss, Judges of England, ii. 497). He married Idonea, daughter and heir of John de Builli, Lord of the Honor of Great Tickhill in Yorkshire, who survived him and died in 1242 (Dugdale, Baronage, i. 347, 349; Fine Rolls, ed. Roberts, i. 168, 357). He was a witness to the Great Charter of Henry III. in 1225 (Stubbs, Select Charters, p. 354). He died in 1227, leaving his son and heir John still a minor, and a daughter Christiana. On February 1st, 1228, writs were issued to the Constables of Appelby, Malverstang and other castles, to deliver them up to Hubert de Burgo, who had the ward of the said John "till the heir's majority" (Patent Rolls, 12 Hen. m. 6 also Fine Rolls, ed. Roberts, i. 171). John de Veteriponte did not lead the stirring life of his father, or of his son Robert, but died comparatively young in 1241 (Fine Rolls, 25 Hen. III. m. 5, ed. Roberts, i. 349). He succeeded to the Barony of Appelby and the sheriffwick of Westmoreland, and married Sibilla, mentioned here, the daughter of William Ferrers, Earl of Derby. He left his son Robert, a minor, who was given by the King in ward to Walter, Bishop of Carlisle (see Fine Rolls, ed. Roberts, i. 385 and the references in Dugdale, Baronage, i. 349). John was one of the persons sent to escort the King, Alexander II., and Queen of Scotland to London in 1235 (Rymer, Fœdera, new ed. i. 221). We have him again in this Register as witness to No. 210, and affixing his seal to No. 223, both probably in 1232—35. For his grant of the Hospital of S. Nicholas, Appelby, to the Abbey of Shap, see note 5 on No. 27.

² This present charter of John de Veteriponte was confirmed by Edward II. (Close Rolls, 17 Edw. II. m. 38).

i. 398. The care taken of this forest is illustrated by the case given in note 5 on No. 199, where the second Robert prosecuted the Rector of Neubigging and another for poaching. An account of the bounds of the forest is given in Machel MSS. iv. p. 44, and the partition between the sisters Isabella de Clifford and Idonea de Leyburn in 12 Edw. I. at p. 153.

⁴ John de Morevile, called knight in No. 205, is witness with Thomas de Musgrave, Robert de Askeby and others mentioned in this Register to a quitclaim of the Church of Crosby Ravensworth to the Abbey of Whitby by Thomas de Hastynges (Chart. Whiteby, ed. Atkinson, i. 270). He was arraigned at an assize at Carlisle by Symon Buch. in 1237 and was an inquisitor with Thomas de Hastings in 1271—72 concerning the lands of Walter de Lyndesay in Westmoreland (Calend. Doc. Scot. i. 240, 537, ed. Bain). This John must not be confounded with others of the name in earlier times, as in the Pipe Rolls for Westmoreland, 1176.

⁵ This is the same as Nicholas Malveysyn, Rector of Clifburn, in No. 218, and as Nicholas Manneysyn in No. 206, where are several of the same witnesses.

⁸ The witnesses, especially Thomas de Musgrave, Walter, Vicar of S. Michael's and Robert Franciscus, point to a date for this charter between 1250 and 1260.

206. ¹ The family of Coupland, or Copeland, held Bootle, or Bothil, in Copeland. Coupland, or Allerdale above Derwent, was the Barony granted by Henry I. to William Meschin, afterwards part of the county of Cumberland (see note 5 on No. 2). The daughter of Richard de Coupland was one of the hostages of Gilbert son of Reinfrid in 1216 (see note 1 on No. 209).

² More than one of this name is mentioned as having belonged to Askeby (probably from Aske, a Norse proper name, with the termination by) hodie Asby, in Westmoreland; and one Robert witnessed a charter of John de Veteriponte to the men of Kirkbythore (Nicolson and Burn, i. p. 24 n.). See also on John de Moreville in No. 204. This is probably the Robert who, as custos for the sheriff, is witness in 1246 to a grant by Thomas son of Henry de Redeman to the Abbey of Shap, see it given in full, Machel MSS. v. 261. He is identical with the Robert of No. 216, but perhaps not of No. 210; see there on the name.

³ Nicholas Manneysyn is no doubt the Rector of Cliburne, see note 5 on No. 206.

⁴ The date of this charter, with so many of the same witnesses, must be very nearly the same as that of the preceding.

207. ¹ John de Rossegille was a coroner for the county in 1278. The family were lords of the manor of Rosgill in the parish of Shap. He was one of the jurors in a plea against the Abbot of Bella Landa (Byland) in 1292 (Placita de quo War., Record Com. p. 789 b).

³ John Mauchael is one of several of the name in the family of Mauchael, or Machel, lords of the manor of Crackenthorp in the parish of S. Michael, Appleby. An elaborate account of the family is given by E. Bellasis, Lancaster Herald, in the Trans. Cumb. Archæol. Society (vol. viii. p. 416 seq.). To it belonged Rev. Thomas Machel, Rector of Kirkbythore, who compiled the Machel MSS. in which are collected many facts connected with the family. This John Mauchael cannot be the one who is witness to the sale of the Church of Kirkbythore in the time of King John (see note 3 on No. 200); but in November, 1272, this John was an inquisitor concerning the lands of Helewysa de Levington, widow of Eustace de Balliol (Inquis. post mort. 56 Hen. III. No. 35, and see Calend. Doc. Scot. i. 546). In 1292 he was defendant in a plea concerning a messuage and two bovates of land in Old Salkeld, which he claimed to hold as the inheritance of Beatrix his wife (Placita de quo War., Record Com. p. 127 b). In 1292, in an Assize held with regard to the patronage of the two Churches of Appleby, claimed by the King against the Abbey of S. Mary at York, John Mauchael is one of the jurors with John de Rossegille, Wm de Crakenthorp, and others in this Register (see in the Illustrative Doc. XI.). His father's name was Alexander; John was living in 1298, but his son Thomas was in possession in 1309. He may be identical with the witness to No. 210; but see the note there.

⁶ The date of the charter is not improbably 1278 (note 1) or a little later, as we see that several of the witnesses occur about 1291—92.

208. ¹ This was Alexander the 4th Abbot of Melsa, from 1197 to 1210. Melsa, or Meaux, was a Cistercian Abbey in Holderness, in the East Riding of Yorkshire, a few miles from Watton. It was founded by William le Gros, Earl of Albemarle, in 1150. See Dugdale, Monasticon, v. 388; Chron. de Melsa, ed. E. A. Bond, i. 289 and Preface p. xxix.

was Prior in 1200. The latter is probably intended here. Bridlington was a Priory of Austin Canons in the East Riding of Yorkshire, founded by Walter de Gant in the reign of Henry I. See Dugdale, Monasticon, vi. 284; Burton, Monast. Ebor. p. 212.

⁴ From the names the date of the composition is clearly about 1200.

209. CONFIRMATIO GILBERTI FILIJ REINFREDI SUPER ECCLESIJS UT PATET INFERIUS⁴.

OMNIBUS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs ad quos præsens scriptum pervenerit Gilbertus filius Reinfredi² et Elewisa

209. ¹ A copy of this confirmation grant is given in Dugdale, Monasticon, iii. 566 and is there said to be from the original in the possession of Sir Walter Calverley of Calverley, Bart.

² Gilbert son of Reinfred, or more correctly, Gilbert son of Roger son of Reinfred, or Reinfrei, was a person of great importance in Westmoreland in the reigns of Richard I. and John. Roger son of Reinfred, the father, was a justice itinerant in 1176, and was made a justice by King Richard in 1189. He married Rohaise, niece of Ranulf, Earl of Chester; he and his two sons, Gilbert and Reinfrei, were among those excommunicated by William Longchamp in 1191 (Roger de Hoveden, ed. Stubbs, ii. 87; iii. 16, 153). Gilbert was married in August, 1189, to Helewisa, the daughter and heir of William de Lancastre, second Baron of Kendal, and Helewisa de Stuteville his wife (Roger de Hoveden, iii. 7; Benedict Abbas, Gesta Ricardi, ed. Stubbs, ii. 73). He had a son William, who became the third William de Lancastre, and Baron of Kendal in right of his mother, and married Agnes de Brus (Dugdale, Baronage, i. 422, where see the reff.). From the Pipe Rolls we find that Gilbert was Sheriff of Durham in 1196—7, and of Westmoreland in 1199, of Lancashire in 1207, and of York in 1210—12. For the privileges he had granted to him in his great estates by Richard I. and John, see the references given in Dugdale (Baronage, l.c.). He joined the Barons against King John, and had to pay a fine of 12000 marcs pro habenda benevolentia Domini Regis, and on January 22nd, 1216, he gave hostages for the fine and for his fidelity (Rot. de Oblatis et Finibus, ed. Hardy, p. 571); some of these hostages are elsewhere noted (see on Nos. 201, 206). Gilbert died in 1220, when his son William did homage for his lands (Excerpta de Rot. Finium, ed. Roberts, i. 47, 48). Among the numerous deeds connected with his name, one of great interest is the agreement between Gilbert and his wife and Abbot Robert and the monks of Furness in 1196, concerning the hills of Furness and the hunting thereon, given in full in Dugdale, Monasticon, v. 249. He was also a witness to the Confirmation Charter of Robert de Veteriponte to the Abbey of Shap in 1212 (see note 1 on No. 204). The charter of Richard I. granting him exemption from payment of noutgeld is among the Levens Hall MSS. and is given by Nicolson and Burn, History, i. 31.

uxor ejus salutem in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra nos intuitu caritatis concessisse et hac præsentī carta nostra confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus Ecclesias³ de Clapham et de Kirkeby in Lonesdale, de Burton in Kendal, de Beithum, de Everesheim, de Kirkeby in Kendale, de Murland, de Brunefeld et Ecclesiam de Wirkynton. Has autem predictas Ecclesias confirmamus eis cum Capellis, molendinis, terris, pasturis, possessionibus, libertatibus et omnibus alijs pertinentijs suis sicut cartæ Antecessorum nostrorum testantur. Hijs Testibus Ricardo de Marisco⁴, Adam de Beithum, Rogero de Haversheim, Nicholao de Kendale, Johanne de Lonesdale, Magistro Hugone Ruffo⁵,

⁵ Hugo Ruffus was a collector of the "Fifteenth" in 1225—26

(Close Rolls, 10 Hen. III. m. 29, Record Com. i. 85 a). He attests two deeds in the Chartulary of Gyseburne (ed. W. Brown, ii. 88, 91), and in one instance is called son of John Ruffus. The name was not uncommon in Yorkshire.

⁷ Henry de Redman got Levens, or part of it, or the confirmation of it, from Gilbert son of Reinfrid, see the preceding note; but Levens had been granted to Henry son of Norman de Redman in 1188 by Ketell son of Uchtred, see the quotation and reference by Sir G. Duckett (Duchetiana, p. 209) who has much information about the family. His son and heir Benedict was one of the hostages of Gilbert son of Reinfrid in 1216, see note 2 above. He also attested the charter of Robert de Veteriponte to the Abbey of Shap in 1212 (see note 1 on No. 204).

de Marisco was Archdeacon. The other witnesses belong to the reign of John, so that the date lies probably in the early years of the 13th century.

210. ¹ This is William Rundel, or de Roundell, who became Abbot of S. Mary's at York, in 1239; see note 5 on No. 46.

² Alexander de Wyndesour is not identical with the Alexander who is witness to No. 38, but is probably his grandson. The first Alexander was connected with Cumberland (see note 10 and references on No. 38); and there seems little doubt that to him the first William de Lancastre, in the time of Henry II., gave his daughter Agnes in marriage, and with her whatever he possessed in Havershame, Grayrigge and Morlande. Part of Morland belonged to the Priory of Wederhal (see on No. 14). The deed is given by Sir G. Duckett (Duchetiana, p. 15 n.) from the Rawlinson MSS. in the Bodleian (B. 437, fol. 71) and among the witnesses are R. the daughter of Hubert de Vallibus, and other persons of the period. The property in Morland thus descended to this second Alexander through his father William, who had married the niece of Gilbert son of Reinfrid; and Alexander "son and heir" of William de Windlesore was one of the hostages of Gilbert in 1216 (see note 2 on No. 209). Alexander appears in the Pipe Rolls for Westmoreland in 1246, as paying $\frac{1}{2}$ marc for default; and he was succeeded by his son William.

⁵ William de Daker is not here Sheriff, which he was in 1236—47; see note 5 on No. 109.

He resigned and joined the Convent of Friars Preachers at Oxford, June 29th, 1246, where he died in 1248 (Matt. Paris, Hist. Angl., ed. Luard, iv. 564, v. 16 ; Annal. Waverley in ann.).

² It appears from the Register of the Priory of Monk Bretton, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, founded by Adam son of Suan, that Nicolas Legat and his wife Dionisia gave lands in East Marham to that Priory ; also that Dionisia Lasceles, relict of Nicholas Legat, gave all her land at Becton in Derbyshire (Dugdale, Monasticon, v. 132, 134).

³ A. de Kirkeby junior will probably be the son of Adam de Kirkeby, who was Official of Carlisle in 1220, see note 6 on No. 19.

⁵ Odard de Wygeton will be the third Odard (see note 5 on No. 72), the son of the second Adam, Baron of Wigton ; he died in 1238.

later date (see No. 234 and note 3 on No. 202), but probably the John Francigena, Parson of Caldbec, who (according to J. Denton, Cumberland, p. 55) was a kinsman of Gilbert Francigena, the Lord of Routhcliffe. This John, on payment of 20 marcs, got from the King, Henry III., in 1231, for the Church of the Blessed Kentigern of Caldebec, an inclosure in the border (costera) of Warnel in the Forest of Inglewood, formerly held by the Abbot of Holm Cultram. This led to difficulties which resulted in the King taking the property into his own hands, and then in John Francigena granting a defined portion of it to the Abbey of Holm Cultram. This grant was confirmed by Walter, Bishop of Carlisle, by the Prior and Convent of Carlisle, and by Henry III. on May 12th, 1232. See the references to this interesting case given in Calend. Doc. Scot., ed. Bain, i. 210, 217, and for the charters Register of Holm Cult., MS. pp. 166—168. For his portion, the parson of Caldbec still had to pay $\frac{1}{2}$ marc to the Exchequer. This parson of Caldbec may be the same John Francigena who appears from 1244 to 1254 as one of the King's clerks and as Canon of Lichfield "of defective sight" (Papal Registers, ed. W. H. Bliss, i. pp. 262, 278). At a trial in 1268, it was shewn that John, who was then dead, was presented to the living of Caldbec by Walter, Bishop of Carlisle (Coram Rege Rolls, 52 Hen. III., m. 13; Abbrev. Placit., Record Com. p. 169 b). But it is possible that this witness may be the John le Fraunceis, son of Hugo, to whom Robert de Veteriponte, the son of Ivo and nephew of Robert, Baron of Appelby, gave the manor of Meburn Matilda by charter in 1242—43 (see Coram Rege Rolls, 27 Henry III., m. 21; Abbrev. Placit. p. 120 a).

⁷ The date of this charter can be fixed; as, from No. 213, Bartholomew was Prior of Carlisle, who died in 1231, and as G. de Louthier was not yet Archdeacon, and Richard de Hampton had ceased to be Sheriff, the date will be 1230—31.

Noverit universitas vestra quod Ego pro salute animæ meæ et pro anima Magistri Petri Legat fratris mei et pro salute animarum Prædecessorum et Successorum meorum dedi concessi et hac præsentī carta mea confirmavi

217. CARTA PETRI LEGAT FACTA MONACHIS DE WEDERHAL DE QUADAM TERRA SUA IN MORLAND PROUT PRIUS.

UNIVERSIS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam hoc præsens scriptum pervenerit Petrus Legat Clericus salutem æternam in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra me Divinæ pietatis intuitu pro salute animæ meæ dedisse concessisse et præsentī carta confirmasse Deo et Abbachiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Domui Sanctæ Trinitatis de Wederhal et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus totam illam terram in Villa de Morland quæ jacet inter culturam dictorum Monachorum et terram Alexandri de Wyndeshour versus Aquilonem et abuttat versus Ortum dictorum Monachorum. Habendam et tenendam in liberam puram et perpetuam Elemosinam cum omnibus pertinentijs suis et libertatibus infra Villam [et] extra ad omnimodum commodum suum faciendum. Et Ego P. et hæredes mei totam prædictam terram dictis Monachis imperpetuum contra omnes homines warantizabimus acquietabimus et defendemus. In cujus rei Testimonium præsentī scripto sigillum meum apposui. Hijs Testibus, Domino R. Priore¹, Magistro R. Archidiacono², Domino W. Officiali Karliolensi³, Willelmo de Daker tunc Vicecomite, Ricardo de Herdres tunc Senede Moreville (see the ref. in note 4 on No. 204), concerning the lands of Walter de Lyndesay in 1271; also with John Mauchael (see the ref. in No. 207, note 3), concerning the lands of Helewysa de Levington in 1272.

217. ¹ Radulph, Prior of Carlisle from 1231 to February 1247; see note 2 on No. 97.

218. OBLIGATIO RECTORIS ECCLESIAE DE CLIFBURN DE PENCIONE DECEM SOLIDORUM PER ANNUM.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam præsens scriptum pervenerit Nicholaus Malveysyn¹ Rector Ecclesiae de Clifburn salutem æternam in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra quod Ego teneor solvere annuatim Abbati et conventui Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Monachis de Wederhal decem solidos nomine pensionis² prædictæ Ecclesiae de Clifburn: Scilicet medietatem ad Pentecosten et medietatem ad Festum Sancti Martini in yeme. Et ad hoc fideliter faciendum Sacramento meo me obligavi. In cuius rei Testimonium præsentī scripto sigillum meum apposui. Hijs Testibus, Magistris Roberto de Saham, Rogero Pepin, Johanne de Popelton, Gilberto de Lincoln, Waltero de Gaugy, Johanne Malet, Johanne de Yuetot, Henrico Teutonico, Roberto Supe et T. de Karliolo Clerico et alijs³.

218. ¹ Nicholas Malveysyn is no doubt the same as Nicholas Manneysyn in Nos. 206, 216, and as Nicolas, Rector of Clifburn, in No. 205.

² When this and other Churches were transferred to Walter, Bishop of Carlisle (Illustrative Doc. xvii.), and confirmed to Bishop Sylvester in 1248, these pensions to the Priory of Wederhal were specially reserved; see on Clifburne, note 4 on No. 16.

³ As we have Roger Pepin in 1246, 1247 (see note 4 on No. 26), and the three other charters in which the grantor occurs are between 1250—60, probably about the earlier date, 1250, is the date of this charter.

219. CARTA JOHANNIS FILIJ WALTERI DE RAVENS-

219. ¹ Walter de Ravensby was a juror in 1279 in an inquisition on the property of Peter de Brus, quoted by Sir G. Duckett from the Rawlinson MSS. B. 437, fol. 38. He was also witness to a deed of the Abbey of Shap concerning land in Renegill, dated 1263; see 10th Report Hist. MSS. Com. (iv) p. 324.

² Meburn Regis, so called to distinguish it from Meaburn Matildæ (see note 3 on No. 4), or Mauld's Meaburn, which was called also Meaburn Gerardi (see No. 228), was a manor in the parish of Morland. It was granted by King John to Robert de Veteriponte with the Barony of Westmoreland; and in the division of the property of the 2nd Robert between his two daughters, $\frac{3}{4}$ of the manor went to Isabella de Clifford and $\frac{1}{4}$ to Idonea de Leyburne; at that time the whole manor was valued at £50. 6s. 3d.; see some abstracts in Machel's MSS. iv. pp. 43, 46 and 173.

There is a judgment of Thomas, Official of Carlisle, in September, 1269, on W. de Leversdale in the Register of Lanercost (MS. xiv. 15), who may be the same.

² This is Walter de Ulvesby, afterwards Official, and about 1239 Archdeacon, see note 5 on No. 56. We find that he was Official as early as 1230—31 in No. 129.

⁴ For Robert son of Godefrid, see further on No. 223.

222. ¹ William de Goldington was Mayor of Appleby in the time of the younger Robert de Veteriponte 1241—65; see note 4 on No. 157, where he is a witness about 1252.

223. CARTA ROBERTI FILIJ GODEFRIDI DE UNO MESSUAGIO ET DUODECIM ACRIS TERRÆ IN APPELBY.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam hoc

³ The word Communitas has a variety of meanings in our English constitution. In the case of boroughs, "Communitas means sometimes the whole body of burghers, sometimes the governing body or corporation, sometimes the rest of the freemen, as in the form 'the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty'" (Stubbs, Constit. Hist., ii. 167). We have the name used on the seal of the borough :

+ SIGILLUM : COMMUNITATIS : BURGII : DE APPILBI.

See an engraving of the seal in the Trans. Cumb. Antiq. Society, vol. xiii., p. 6.

præsens scriptum pervenerit Robertus filius Godefridi¹ Salutem. Noverit universitas vestra quod Ego teneo unum Messuagium et duodecim acras terræ in territorio de Appelby de Abbate et Conventu Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Monachis de Wederhal, quod Messuagium et duodecim acræ terræ sunt pertinentes ad Ecclesiam Sancti Laurentij in eadem Villa. Ego vero pro prædicto Messuagio et pro prædicta terra teneor solvere Priori et Monachis de Wederhal annuatim quinque solidos, medietatem ad Festum Sancti Martini in yeme, et medietatem ad Pentecosten quamdiu placuerit dictis Priori et Monachis de Wederhale. Et ne aliquis meorum post decessum meum si in dicta terra me mori contigerit jus hæreditarium aliquo modo vindicare possit, hoc præsens tam in Comitatu² quam in Capitulo et in Burgamoto de Appelby³ coram omnibus pupplice lectum feci et sigillo meo signatum. Insuper

³ The Burgamote, or Burghers' Court, of the Community of Appelby, shews that they had now the firma burgi, and were free from the exactions of the Sheriff—Stubbs, Constit. Hist., i. 424. The burghers of Appelby appear in the Pipe Rolls for 1179 (Westmariland, 25 Hen. II.) as rendering "account of 40 marcs for having a charter of their liberties and customs the same as the citizens of York have in their city"; and in the year 1200, as rendering account of 100 marcs "for having their liberties and for having the town of Appelby to farm under the King." The two charters for which they thus paid are still in the possession of the borough of Appleby. A copy of them is given in Nicolson and Burn, Hist. i. 310 n. A copy of the latter, dated York, March 26th, 1200, and referring to the former, is in full in the Charter Rolls, 1 Joh. m. 19, ed. Hardy, p. 41; also in Machel, MSS., v. 519, and see also the Inspeximus in 14 Ed. I. at p. 533. Henry III. granted the borough a charter in 1232. The Burg of Appelby paid 40 marcs for tallage in 1197 and various sums for tallage later. We have no mention of a Mayor before the William de Goldyngton of No. 222. The Town Hall still bears the name of the Moot, or Mote, Hall, from A.-S. mótian, "to summon," mót, "an assembly."

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quorum notitiam presens scriptum pervenerit Alanus nepos Willelmi Russel de Appelby¹ Salutem. Noverit universitas vestra me tenere in feudo et hæreditate de Abbate et Conventu Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Monachis de Wederhal unum Burgagium in Villa de Appelby, illud videlicet quod jacet inter Burgagium Willelmi filij Bernardi versus Edene et Burgagium Willelmi Spirius. Reddendo inde annuatim Domui de Wederhal tres solidos Sterlingorum medietatem ad Pentecosten et medietatem ad Festum Sancti Martini in yeme. Et Ego et hæredes mei et assignati dictos Abbatem et Conventum et Monachos de Wederhal de omnibus oneribus dictum Burgagium contingentibus acquietabimus et defendemus imperpetuum. Illud autem sciendum est quod Prior de Wederhal retenuit de dicto Burgagio quandam portionem quæ continet in latitudine viginti pedes et in longitudine quantum dictum Burgagium se extendit versus campum ad exitum suum faciendum. ⁴ This is, probably, from the other witnesses, John de Warthwic, son of William son of Odard ; compare Nos. 58, 59.

⁵ The first two witnesses occur often in the charters of Robert brother of John, named above, as in No. 45, and the date is probably about the same time, 1220—30.

230. ¹ Idonea de Layburn, or de Leyburne, was the younger of the two daughters and co-heirs of the second Robert de Veteriponte, son of John, and third Baron of Appleby, and his wife Isabella Fitz-Peter. Robert died, it is said, in 1265, of wounds received at the battle of Evesham, leaving his two daughters, Isabella and Idonea, mere children. The King gave the guardianship of the two heirs and their great estates to Roger de Clifford and Roger de Leyburne respectively, who in 1266—67 came to an agreement as to the partition of the property. Not long after, Roger de Clifford married Isabella to his son Roger : and this Idonea became the wife of Roger, the son of Roger de Leyburne. (On Roger, the father, see note 15 on No. 13.) The estates were divided between them much according to the agreement before made (see the extracts in Machel MSS., iv. pp. 43, 46, and especially p. 173 from the Escheat Rolls, 11 Edw. I. No. 36, Westd.). Roger de Clifford died in 1283 (Pipe Rolls for Westd.) and Roger de Leyburne in 1284. The latter had no children, and his widow, Idonea, afterwards married John de Crombwell, or Crumwelle (she was his wife in 1299, see the Pipe Rolls for Westmoreland in ann.).

In cujus rei Testimonium dicta

About this time, in 1292, Idonea had to answer at Appleby to a plea de quo waranto, concerning her estates, Robert, the son and heir of Roger and Isabella de Clifford, being then under age. Idonea died without issue in 1309, when she ceases to appear in the Pipe Rolls as joint-Sheriff for Westmoreland; and her estates went to the descendants of her sister, the family of the Cliffords. For many of these particulars see Dugdale, Baronage, i. 349, Nicolson and Burn, History, i. 272 seq., most of whose information is taken from the collection in Machel's MSS., made mainly of extracts from Sir Wm. Dugdale's MSS.

² William de Tanefeld, Prior of Wederhal, was made Prior of Durham in 1309. There was another Prior of Wederhal of the same name admitted in 1341. See the reff. in Appendix E.

SCIANT omnes qui viderint vel audierint litteras has quod Ego Willelmus filius Gilberti¹ dedi et concessi et

⁷ The date is S. Martin's Day, November 11th, 1292.

Thursbñt. Prior versus solem, Vicarius versus umbram terræ et prati.

² Gilbert, Lord of the manor of Kirkebythore, was the son of Adam de Kirkbythore (see note 8 on No. 117). He confirmed the grants of his father Adam, and grandfather Waldiev, to the Abbey of Holm Cultram, and granted additional lands there in 1247 (Register, MS. p. 139). His wife's name was Eva.

232. ¹ Bishop Nicolson, in his MSS. vol. ii. p. 34, says: "These are divisions made (it would seem) by those Arbitrators directed to be indifferently chosen by the Bishop's Award in 1256." This was the award made by Bishop Thomas Veteriponte, or Vipont, and given in No. 27, with regard to S. Michael's, Appelby, whereby the Vicar was to have a moiety of the arable and meadow land divided by trustworthy men chosen in equal numbers on each side. Bishop Nicolson also remarks concerning the MS. of this Register: "There is this title in a somewhat later hand than that wherein the book is generally written, 'Divisio Terrarum nostrarum et Vicarii de.....Appelby.' After which follows in that elder hand (about the time of Edward the Third), wherein the grants are mostly registered." Then he gives the list of names. This blank serves to explain the omission of "S. Michaelis" before Appelby. Machel, MSS. iv. 465, makes a similar remark, and gives some of the names from another list later in the Register (fol. 197), e.g. Brakenbergh. Nicolson, an accurate copyist, has Bethalinghergh, Hulverber, and Langbelam.

² Robert de Morevill was presented before the Barons of the Exchequer as Deputy-Sheriff of Westmoreland on October 28th, 1287, by letters patent of Isabella de Clifford, Vicecomitissa Westmerlandia, for herself and sister Idonea, sharer of the hereditary right; see Machel's MSS. iv. 275. Robert was Deputy-Sheriff the following year, Edward the First's reign dating from November 20th. From the Pipe Rolls he appears to have been dead in 18 Edward I. (1290).

² These two Churches were confirmed to the Abbey of S. Mary by Gilbert son of Reinfrid in No. 209. This seems to shew that the property of Ketell passed on to Gilbert through William de Lancastre. The parish of Wirchington lies on the west coast of Cumberland immediately to the south of the river Derwent. The manor and the Church have long been (since 1563) in the possession of the family of Culwen or Curwen, who claim descent from Ketell through his son Orme who married Gunilda sister of Waldiev son of Gospatric; see the long account and pedigree by W. Jackson, Papers and Pedigrees, vol. i. p. 288.

unum torrentem vocatum Sawbeke¹ usque ad quandam crucem quæ vocatur Wederhal Gyrthcrosse² usque Occidentem et stantem super prædictum torrentem prius nominatum et ab hinc percurrit ad Holmemyr versus Carsike³ sicut Gyrthcrosse de Wederhal extendit et ab hinc ascendit usque ad Scotbybeke⁴ et ab eadem fossa usque ad Cumwhyntyngbeke⁵ et ab inde ascendit usque ad Mauriscum qui vocatur Wragmyre et ab eodem percurrit usque ad Meresyke⁶ et hoc ex parte Australi, et ab inde usque

236. ¹ Sawbeke, probably Saurbek, or Sorbek, like Saurby (No. 14, note 12), from Norse sògr, "swampy," runs nearly north, and into the Eden, just below the present Warwick Bridge, draining the swamp or marsh under the hill.

ad Sandewath⁷ et ab eodem usque ad Takyngate⁸ et ab inde pertransit per Stratam Regiam⁹ quæ vocatur Hee-Strette quæ ducit de Carlil¹ usque ad Appilby way et ab inde usque ad Drybeke, et a Drybeke descendit usque ad medium aquæ de Eden, et hoc ex parte Orientali; et sic descendit per medium aquæ de Eden usque ad prædictum Pontem vocatum Werwykbrigg versus Borientalem.

⁸ There is still Tackengate Stone on the edge of field No. 605 and near the field in which is Black Moss Pool (Map xxxi. 7).

240. CARTA ABBATIS EBORACI EPISCOPO KARLIOLENSI FACTA DE ECCLESIIJS DE ORMESHEVED MUSGRAVE BURGHE APULBY¹.

UNIVERSIS Christi fidelibus ad quos præsens Scriptum pervenerit Thomas² Abbas et Conventus Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci Salutem in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra nos unanimi assensu et consensu Capituli nostri dedisse et concessisse venerabili Patri et Domino Silvestro Dei Gratia Karliolensi Episcopo suisque successoribus jus Patronatus

240. ¹ This assignment to the Bishops of Carlisle of the Churches of Ormesheved (Ormside), Musgrave and Clibburne, and the Vicarage of S. Michael, Appleby, is given in full by Bishop Nicolson (MSS. vol. ii. pp. 17, 417), as being taken from the Register of Wederhal, fol. 21 a. For the last Church see note 1 on No. 3; and for Ormesheved and Clibburn see No. 16. This document, which has been most carelessly copied in Transcript C, has been corrected from these copies.

² Thomas de Wardhull, or Warterhille, was elected Abbot of S. Mary's at York in 1244. He died in December 1257 (Dugdale, Monasticon, iii. 538).

* These additions, probably from their later date or often doubtful character, are not found in the two Transcripts in the Dean and Chapter Library at Carlisle; but they seem to have been, at all events about 1702, in the ancient manuscript of the Register, which was formerly in the possession of the Dean and Chapter.

² Richard de Salkeld obtained the manor of Corkby by grant from Edward III. October 15th, 1335, confirming the gift of his father. The manor had been escheated to Edward II. on the attainder of Andrew de Hartcla in March 1323; see the Chronicon de Lanercost (ed. J. Stevenson, p. 251), whence it would appear that Richard de Salkelde was one of those who seized the Earl, for which he was rewarded with the vill of Magna Corkeby. He was succeeded, it is said, by his son John; but the account of his successors is not by any means clear (see Nicolson and Burn, History, ii. 336, and the inaccurate list of lords of Corby referred to before, given in a note by Hutchinson, Cumberland, i. 170). There was another Richard de Salkeld at Corby in the time of Edward IV. and Henry VII. He married Jane Vaux, the daughter of Sir Roland Vaux of Tryermain. In 1467 Edward IV. granted him the manors of Caldbek, Uldale and Wigton and other property for his eminent services in rescuing the city and castle of Carlisle from the rebels in the rebellion of James, late Earl of Wiltshire (Calend. Doc. Scot., ed. Bain, iv. 278). He died in 1503, and was buried in the Church at Wetherhal on February 18th. The effigy of himself and his wife in Wetherhal Church carries with it this legend, as Bishop Nicolson copied it in 1703 (Miscellany Accounts, p. 49, MS. p. 32), "over the Arch, betwixt the Quire and ye North Isle, in old characters almost obliterated".

"Here lyes Sir Richard Salkeld that Knight,
Who in this Land was mickle of might.
The Captain and Keeper of Carlisle was he,
And also the Lord of Corkby.
And now he lyes under this Stane,
He and his Lady Dame Jane.

In the copy given by Dugdale (Monasticon, iii. p. 584), from the MS. Reg. de Wetherhall penes D. Williel. Howard de Naworth an. 1638, it has the title Chronicon Cumbriæ. transcribed. It is here printed as in the Harleian MS. except a few manifest errors; some of the variations are noted below. It was evidently a late addition to the MS. Register, full of blunders; and far too much use has been made of it by some of the older local historians. There is a document curiously similar, and, if possible, more untrustworthy, in the Tower Miscellaneous Rolls, No. 459, quoted by J. Bain (Calend. Doc. Scot. ii. 15); he places it about 1275, and has the not improbable conjecture that it was a statement by the monks of Holm Cultram, which its last clause and reference seems to support.

247. CARTA ENISANDI FILIJ WALTERI DE TERRIS IN COLBY¹.

¹⁹ Cicilia (D., M.).

²⁰ Cokermouth (D., M.). There are considerable variations in the last clauses in the several copies.

247. ¹ This is the same charter as No. 251, and is the grant referred to in No. 14, made by Constantine (Enisant) son of Walter; see note 13 there, also note 1 on No. 227. His name is given as Enisant Musart in No. 248 and is so copied by Machel (MSS., iv. 474), but with some doubt; it is clearly an error, and the mistake in No. 252 (see note 3) shews that there was a difficulty in the MS.

Deo et Sanctæ Mariæ Eborum, et Monachis de Wedderhall, in puram et perpetuam Eleemosynam unam carucatam terræ in Colby, cum prato adjacente et cæteris pertinentiis et aisiamentis, Tenendam libere et quiete ab omni terreno servicio. Hanc donationem feci prædictis Monachis pro salute animæ meæ et uxoris meæ et omnium parentum meorum. Testibus, Warrino Capellano de Bogtres, Turgestio de Rusdall², Willelmo de HARRAIS, Odardo Vice-Comite, Odone Walisca, Petro de Venice et Astius fratre ejus, Hugone de Ancavilla, Roberto de Lauda, Ricardo Sanard, et Willelmo fratre ejus, et multis alijs³.

248. CARTA WILLELMI BRITTAN DE TERRIS IN COLBY.

[This is the same as No. 252, see page 392.]

249. CARTA GOSPATRICIJ FILIJ ORMI DE TERRIS IN FLEMINGBY¹.

GOSPATRICIUS filius Ormi² et Egelina uxor ejus, omnibus filijs Sanctæ Ecclesiæ salutem, Sciatis me dedisse et ² Turgest de Rusdall would seem to be the same as Turgis de Russedal, who, with Hugh de Morevil and Robert de Stutevill, is witness to the grant of Henry II. to Hubert de Vallibus in 1157 (see Illustrative Doc. XXII.). He can therefore scarcely be identical with Turgis Brundis (as Lysons, Cumb. p. 11), to whom, according to Testa de Nevill (p. 379 b), Ranulf Meschin gave the Barony of Lyddel before 1120. Robert de Stutevill founded the nunnery of Russedal, or Rosedale, in Yorkshire, and it will probably be learned that this Turgis de Russedal was connected with that place. He was certainly "Lord of the manor of Lydale" (Inquis. ad quod dam. 2 Edw. III. No. 3, Record Com. p. 288), and was not improbably the son of Turgis Brundis.

249. ¹ This is a grant to the Priory of Carlisle which has been inserted here.

² Gospatric son of Orm was the grandson of Ketell, or Chetell, who granted Morland and Workington to the Abbey of S. Mary at York (see on No. 235). Waldiev, the son of Earl Gospatric and Baron in perpetuam Elemosinam confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Carlioli et Canonicis ibidem Deo servientibus totam terram illam quam Aculphus de nobis tenuit juxta Flemingby inter duas Villas, cum bosco et pastura, et omnibus alijs rebus prædictæ terræ juste pertinentibus, pro salute animarum nostrarum et Parentum nostrorum, liberam et quietam ab omni servicio et terrena exactione of Allerdale below Derwent, had given to Orm with Gunilda in marriage Seton, Camerton, Flemingby (Flimby), and Graysothern (see No. 245, and on Waldiev in No. 1). Gospatric son of Orm attested the Charter of Earl Henry, son of David, King of Scotland, with Bishop Athelwold, to the Abbey of Holm Cultram in 1150 (Illustrative Doc. xxiv.); and to that Abbey he gave Flemingby, "excepta terra de Waytecroft, quam prius dederam Canonicis de Karliolo," which is probably the land mentioned in this Charter (see Register of Holm Cult. MS. p. 34). His son and heir Thomas and another son Alan are parties to the above grant. Another son Adam was parson of Camerton (see note 3 on No. 28). His wife's name is here given as Egelina. In the Register of S. Bees (Harleian MSS., No. 434, pp. 23, 24) there are charters of Gospatric, mentioning Egelina his wife, Thomas his son and heir, Gilbert and Alan his sons, and Ebreia his mother. His name appears in the earliest Pipe Roll of Henry II. (for Cumberland) in 1158, and frequently afterwards. In the Pipe Rolls for Westmoreland (which was then reckoned with Yorkshire) in 1176 and down to 1179, he appears as having to pay a fine of 500 marcs for having surrendered the Royal Castle of Appelbi to William the Lion, King of Scotland, in 1174. Others well known in the district were fined with him. He is spoken of at that time by Jordan Fantosme in his curious poem as "Cospatric le fiz Horm, un viel Engleis fluri" (Chronicle of the War in 1173—74, ed. Surtees Soc., xi. 66). He probably died in 1179. In the same Pipe Rolls for 1176, 1177, we find William son of William paying 30 marcs "ut habeat duellum versus Gospatricium fil. Orm," no doubt the same person. Thomas son of Gospatric was the Founder of the Abbey of Shap, or Heppe, and gave to that Abbey the Church of Shap. The grants are given in Dugdale, Monasticon, vi. 868. Thomas must have died in 1201, or very shortly before, as Roger de Bello Campo and Grecia the widow of Thomas are then put in the Pipe Rolls as owing 100 marcs for having custody of his lands and of his heir. Some of the local historians wrongly place his death much earlier.

WILLELMUS Rex Angliæ Archiepiscopo T. Eborum, Justiciarijs, Vice-comitibus et omnibus Baronibus fidelibus suis Francis Eboracishire et de Carliolo salutem, Sciatis me concessisse et confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ Eborum et Abbati Ricardo et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, Cellam Sancti Constantini cum Manerio de Wedderhall, et cum Capella de Warthwic, et cum exclusagio et stagno et piscaria, et de Molendino de Wedderall quod fixum et firmatum in terra de Corkby: Quas quidem terras habuerant ex dono Ranulphi Meschine Comitis Cumbriæ² in puram et perpetuam Elemosinam. Et confirmo eis ex Dono meo totam Pasturam inter Eden et Regiam Viam quæ ducit de Karliolo ad Appleby apud Wedderall usque ad Drybeck. Quapropter prohibeo ut nulli alij perturbent aut rident [violent] hanc nostram confirmationem sive donationem prædictis Monachis factam. Testibus hijs, Uxore mea Lucia, Henrico fratre meo, Odardo, Hildredo Militibus, Enesaunt Muserd, cum alijs.

251. CARTA ONISANDI DE TERRIS IN COLLEBY.

[This is the same as No. 247.]

250. ¹ This document is an absurd combination of the charters of Ranulf Meschin and the charter of Henry I. (No. 5). In the first edition of Dugdale's Monasticon (vol. i. p. 397) this is said to be ex collectionibus August. Vincent e registro de Wederhale, and is headed Carta Willielmi Regis Conquestoris dicti, though the name of the Conqueror does not appear in the text of the charter.

252. CARTA WILLELMI DE BRETON DE TERRIS IN COLLEBY¹.

OMNIBUS Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filijs tam præsentibus quam futuris, Willelmus Breton de Colleby² salutem: Sciatis me concessisse et hac mea præsentī carta confirmasse Deo et Sanctæ Mariæ de Eboraco et Abbati Clementi et successoribus ejus, et Monachis ibidem Deo et Sanctæ Mariæ servientibus in liberam et puram et perpetuam Elemosynam pro salute animæ meæ et Emmæ Sponsæ meæ et pro animabus Patris mei et Matris meæ et omnium Antecessorum et Successorum meorum totam illam carucatam terræ in Colleby quæ fuit Durandi cum omnibus pertinentijs suis et aisiamentis prædictæ Villæ adjacentibus, sicut carta quam habet de donatione ejusdem Durandi³ testatur. Quare volo ut prædictus Clemens Abbas de Eboraco et Successores ejus, et Monachi ibidem Deo et Beatæ Mariæ servientes, habeant et teneant illam prædictam carucatam terræ de me, et de hæredibus meis tam liberam et quietam ab omni servicio et exactione 252. ¹ This is the same charter as No. 248 and refers to the carucate of land given by Enisand in No. 247 (or No. 251).

² William Breton, or Brittan, de Coleby is, no doubt, identical with the William de Colebi who, in the Pipe Rolls for 1176, is fined 40s. for advising the surrender of Appleby Castle by Gospatric son of Orm (see on No. 249). He is spoken of in a trial about this property as consanguineus et hæres of Enisand, or Emsand, son of Walter, who granted it to the Priory (see below). He made a grant of land at Colebi to the Regular Canons of Carlisle, and there is a curious entry of the particulars in the Pipe Rolls for 1198 (Westmoreland). See also the Coram Rege Rolls, 11 Joh. m. 9, Abbrev. Placit. Record Com. p. 67 a, where more details are given. Machel (MSS., iv. p. 475) gives an abstract of two pleas with regard to this property, one at Westminster in 1362, and one at Appelby in 1370, where the names of these parties are brought forward.

sæculari, sicut aliqua datur liberius et quietius in tota Anglia. Hijs Testibus, Roberto Archidiacono Karlioli, Roberto Dristorell⁴, Murdaco Decano de Appleby, Wilhelmo de Louthier, Ada de Musgrave, Gospatricio filio Ormi, Thorstina de Battly⁵, Thoma de Hellebeck, Roberto filio Petri, Roberto filio Coleman⁶, Gamel de Sandford, Ada filio Uctredi de Botelton, Alano filio Torfin de Alvestain⁷, Waldevo de Kirkebythore⁸, Ulf de Apilby, Copsi Maurward⁹.

253. CARTA JOHANNIS REGIS FACTA ROBERTO DE VETERI PONTE SUPER CUSTODIA HEREDITARIA BALLIVÆ SIVE COMITATUS WESTMORIÆ¹.

JOHANNES Dei Gratia Rex Angliæ etc. Archiepiscopis, etc. salutem. Sciatis nos dedisse et præsentî carta Nostra confirmasse dilecto et fideli nostro R. de Veteri Ponte, Appilby et Burgh cum omnibus appendentijs suis, et cum Balliva et Redditu Comitatus Westmorlandiæ, et cum servicijs omnium inde tenentium de nobis qui non tenent per servicium militare: Habendas et Tenendas de Nobis et Hæredibus Nostris, sibi et hæredibus suis, qui de ipso et Uxore sibi desponsata exierint per servicium quatuor Militum pro omni servicio. Salvis, Nobis et Hæredibus Nostris placitis omnibus quæ ad Coronam Nostram pertinent, et salva dignitate Regali: et salvo quod dictus Robertus vel sui neque vastum neque exitium facere poterint in Brullijs de Winfell, vel in ipsis venari, quamdiu vixerimus sine corpore ipsius Roberti. Quare volumus et firmiter precipimus, quod ipse Robertus et hæredes sui post ipsum habeant et teneant omnia prædicta de Nobis et Hæredibus Nostris, ut dictum est in bosco, in plano, in vijs et semitis, in pratis et pascuis, in moris et mariscis, in stagnis et vivarijs, in aquis et molendinis et in omnibus locis, libertatibus suis et liberis consuetudinibus, sicut prædictum est. Datum per manum Hugonis del Wall. apud Trant xxviii. die Octobris Anno Regni Nostri quinto.

The date of the charter was after the death of Bishop Athelwold, and no narrower limits can be fixed than Abbot Clement, 1161—84 (see note 1 on No. 44).

253. ¹ This is the grant to Robert de Veteriponte, made by King John, of the Barony and Bailiwick of Westmoreland on October 28th, 1203, referred to in note 1 on No. 204. It seems to have been added here to the Register among other odds and ends in later times.

Translation. "Edmond (circ. A.D. 940), brother of Athelstan, gave to this Donald, King of Scotland, all Combirland, upon which the Scots laid claim as far as the Rere-Cross of Staynmore; but this donation was often conquered since then and released in making ofttimes peace¹."

V. MEMORANDUM TOUCHING THE FOUNDATION OF THE PRIORY OF WEDERHAL. [Copied by Bishop Nicolson (MSS. vol. iii. p. 141) from the Register of Wetherhal, fol. 26 a.]

Memorie merito commendandum quod Anno Dni M^oLXXVI^o² fundata fuit Abbatia Sancte Marie juxta Ebor. per Dominum

VI. PLEA AGAINST THE ABBOT OF S. MARY'S AT YORK FOR RAISING THE FISH POOL AT WEDERHALE AND CONTRACTING THE FISH PASS, 1293. [Assize Roll, Northumberland, No. 651. 21 Edw. I., roll 36.]

Placita de Diuersis Comitibus apud Nouum Castrum super Tynam coram H. de Cressingham et sociis suis, Justiciariis Itinerantibus in Crastino Sancti Hillarii anno xxj^{mo}. (Jan. 14th, 1293).

Cumbria.—Idem dies datus est Abbati beate Marie Eboraci per attornatum suum, de audiendo Judicio suo apud Nouum Castrum super Tynam de quadam libertate quam clamat apud Wederhale, etc.

Idem Abbas summonitus fuit ad respondendum Domino Regi de placito quare exaltauit quoddam stagnum apud Wederhale vltra debitam assisam, de altitudine vnus pedis, per quod cursus aque de Edene nimis artatur extra solitum cursum, et ingenium quod vocatur Baye similiter artatur, vbi solebat esse tante largitatis quod vna sus cum quinque porcellis suis posset transire¹, etc., ad nocumentum, etc.

Et predictus Abbas per attornatum suum venit, et dicit quod inuenit ecclesiam suam seisitam de predicto stagno. Et dicit quod predictum stagnum est in consimili statu in quo illud fuit tempore predecessoris sui; et quod predictum stagnum per ipsum non exaltatur nec artatur, petit quod inquiratur per patriam, etc. Ideo preceptum est, etc.

Postea venerunt coram predictis W. [de Ormesby] et J. [Wogan] apud Karliolum, die Mercurii proxima post festum Sancti Jacobi Apostoli anno supradicto, tam predictus Abbas per attornatum suum quam predicti Jurati, etc. Et Jurati dicunt super sacramentum suum quod predictus Abbas non exaltauit stagnum predictum de Wetherhale, nec predictum ingenium artauit. Et quod predicta stagnum et ingenium sunt in eodem statu in quo fuerunt ante tempus predicti Abbatis, absque aliqua exaltacione predicti stagni vel artacione predicti ingenij, et est in eodem statu quo fuit ante tempus a quo non extat memoria, etc. Consideratum est quod predictus Abbas eat inde sine die, etc.

VII. PLEA DE QUO WARANTO, THE KING AGAINST THE ABBOT OF S. MARY'S AT YORK TOUCHING THE RIGHT TO HAVE WRECK AND WAIF IN KIRKEBY, WHYTOHAVEN &C. AND CERTAIN PRIVILEGES IN THOSE TOWNS AND IN WEDERHALE, KRINGELDYK AND NEUBY. CARLISLE, NOVEMBER 3rd, 1292. [This is too long to print. A full abstract is given in Placita de Quo Waranto, rot. 11 d, ed. Record Com. p. 122 a, to which reference can readily be made².]

X. TAXATION OF THE VICARAGE OF S. LAURENCE, APPLEBY, AND AWARD BY BISHOP SILVESTER IN 1251. [Copied by Bishop Nicolson, MSS. vol. ii. p. 21, from the Register of Wetherhal, fol. 170 b.]

Omnibus S. Matris Ecclesie filiis Silvester Dei gratia Karl. Episcopus Salutem in Domino. Noverit Universitas vestra quod cum Hugo bone memorie predecessor noster quondam Karl. Episcopus Vicariam Sti Laurencii de Appelby ad sex marcas taxasset et nos ex officio nostro ad taxandam eam descenderemus, et ipsam insufficientem, habito respectu ad facultates Ecclesie predictae, inveniremus, de communi Assensu Dominorum Abbatis et Conventus Sancte Marie Ebor. quibus per predecessores

nostros in usus proprios fuit assignata, dictam Vicariam sub forma subscripta taxavimus. Imprimis, assignavimus dicte Vicarie totum Altaragium illius Ecclesie cum omnibus decimis ferii et molendinorum, et cum mansione et domibus sitis juxta Ecclesiam predictam, ex parte occidentali, cum tota placia vasta prejacente eidem Mansioni et cum viginti acris quas Walterus Alū. Capellanus ejusdem Ecclesie possidebat, et cum Communa totius Pasture et Bosci predictorum Abbatis et Conventus. Item, assignavimus dicte Vicarie omnes decimas de Hoff, scilicet, de farina decem eskeppas, de frumento quinque eskeppas et dimidiam et de braseo quinque eskeppas. Item de Crakanthorp, de farina quatuor eskeppas, de frumento unam eskeppam et de braseo tres eskeppas. Et quia hesitabatur utrum dicte eskeppe de Crakanthorp sint de parochia Sti Michaelis de Appelby vel de parochia Sti Laurentii, et pertinentes ad dictam Ecclesiam Sti Laurentii volumus quod si per Inquisitionem possit inveniri quod sint de parochia Sti Laurentii et ad eandem Ecclesiam dicti Laurentii pertinentes, stent per omnia quoad predicta nostra Taxatio. Si autem sint de parochia Sti Michaelis et ad eandem Ecclesiam pertinent, eidem Ecclesie, sicut de jure debetur, applicentur. Et quia ad eum spectare debet onus ad quem emolumentum et quedam terre, scilicet, quadraginta et octo acre cum pertinentiis que jacent in Campo de Appelby collate fuerunt Ecclesie predicte pro servitio faciendo singulis diebus per unum Capellanum in Capella Castelli de Appelby, et similiter triginta et septem acre cum pertinentiis que jacent in Campo de Hoff collate fuerunt Ecclesie predicte pro servitio faciendo in Capella de Hoff per tres dies in septimana, Volumus quod in optione dictorum Abbatis et Conventus sit, utrum velint terras predictas cum onere predicto per Priorem de Wedirhall retinere, an terras predictas cum onere Vicarie predicte assignare. Vicarii quoque qui pro tempore fuerint omnia onera Episcopalia et Archidiaconalia debita et consueta sustinebunt. Volumus autem quod Vicarii Sti Laurentii qui pro tempore fuerint sint penitus immunes a prestatione viginti solidorum qui debebantur Ecclesie Sti Michaelis tempore Willielmi Foliott Canonici Ecclesie Sti Petri Ebor. Rectoris dicte Ecclesie Sti Michaelis. Vicarii quoque in propriis personis decenter et honeste deservient Ecclesie supradicte, et fidelitatem dictis Abbati et Conventui qui pro tempore fuerint prestabunt corporalem. Hanc autem taxationem ita volumus perpetue firmitatis vices optinere, quod instrumentis predictorum Abbatis et Conventus a Venerabilibus predecessoribus nostris Ethelwaldo et Hugone Episcopis ac nobis et Capitulo Karliolensis Ecclesie optentis, quantum ad alios articulos in dictis instrumentis contentos, in nullo prejudicium generetur: Sed omnia instrumenta dictorum Abbatis et Conventus super omnibus concessionibus et confirmationibus aliis volumus et concedimus perpetuam habere firmitatem, instrumentis que de dictis Abbate et Conventu habemus in suo robore similiter duraturis. Item, volumus et concedimus quod predicti Abbas et Conventus habeant et possideant quiete et pacifice, quantum in nobis est, in usus proprios in perpetuum Ecclesiam Sti Michaelis de Appelby, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, in Dioces' nostra sitam, secundum tenorem Cartarum Venerabilium Patrum Predecessorum nostrorum, Ethewaldi et Hugonis, quondam Karl. Episcoporum, excepta Vicaria viginti marcarum in eadem Ecclesia taxanda per nos, et a nobis et successoribus nostris in perpetuum conferenda. Insuper, quia dicti Abbas et Conventus offenderunt, eo quod, nobis contradicentibus, Ecclesiam Sti Michaelis de Appelby per Ricardum Priorem de Wedirhall et quosdam monachos fuerint ingressi, dicti Abbas et Conventus in hoc supposuerunt dictos Priorem et monachos gratie nostre, et in arbitrio nostro sit utrum velimus a dicto Prioratu ipsos penitus hac vice tantum amovere, vel gratiam eisdem ibidem remanendi facere. In cujus rei testimonium presenti scripto cirographato residenti penes nos et Successores nostros qui pro tempore fuerint signum nostrum, una cum signis tam Capituli nostri Karl. quam dictorum Abbatis et Conventus, ad eternam rei memoriam, apponi fecimus; et parti residenti penes dictos Abbatem et Conventum signum nostrum, una cum signo Capituli nostri Karl., similiter apponi fecimus. Hiis Testibus, Magistris Sewalo Decan. Ebor., Godefrido de Ludham precentori Ebor. Ecclesie, Synone de Hevisham Arch. de Estring., Steph. de Eglesfeld, Galfrido de Eylesbyrie, Johanne de Aseby et Dominis Waltero de Rudham et Elya Capellano Domini Karl. et aliis. Datum die Conversionis Sti Pauli Apostoli, Anno Domini Millesimo ducentesimo quinquagesimo primo.

XI. PLEA DE QUO WARANTO, THE KING AGAINST THE ABBOT OF S. MARY'S AT YORK TOUCHING THE ADVOWSON OF THE TWO CHURCHES OF S. LAURENCE AND S. MICHAEL IN APPELBY. APPELBY, OCTAVE OF S. MICHAEL, 1292. Et ponit se in jurm. patrie loco magne Assise Domini Regis, et petit recognitionem fieri utrum ipse majus jus habeat in predictis advocationibus predictarum Ecclesiarum quam predictus Rex. Ideo fiat inde Juñ. Et Thomas de Culwenne, Hugo de Multon de Hoffe, Willielmus de Stirkeland, Johannes de Rossegile, Robertus le Englays, Ricardus de Preston, Milites, Johannes Mauschael, Willielmus de Crakenthorp, Ricardus de Musgrave, Ricardus de Warthecop, Johannes Fraunceys de Clibburn, Ricardus Tyrel, Juñ. dicunt super Sacramentum suum quod predictus Abbas majus jus habet in predictis Advocationibus quam predictus Dominus Rex. Ideo quoad hoc inde sine die &c.

XII. INQUISITION HELD IN APPELBY IN 1326 AS TO WHO OUGHT TO FURNISH THE CHANTRY IN THE CHAPEL OF BOLTON. [Copied by Thomas Machel, MSS. vol. iv. p. 497, from the Register of Wetherhal, fol. 105.]

Carta inquisitionis sive examinatio capta in Ecclesia Sancti Laurentii de Appelby, Quis debet invenire cantariam in Capella de

Bolton. Thomas Fibus de Bolton juratus et examinatus, de... existens in Bolton...quem (sic) fuit donata predicte Ecclesie et ad quid onerata. Dicit quod fuit donata per antecessores Dñi Johannis de Derwentewatre, Domini de Bolton, ad inveniendum Cantariam in Capella de Bolton sicut credit, et toto tempore suo vidit quod quando deficiebant Cantarie Vestimenta vel alia ornamenta, Dominus et Balivi sui Tenentes Prioris de Wederhal in Bolton per catalla et animalia sua destringebant et tenebant pro predictis. Et Tenentes Prioris conquerebant de hoc Priori, et Prior destringebat Vicarium ad inveniendum Presbiterum, et quicquid fuit inter Priorem et Vicarium, Dominus et Balivi sui predicti semper tenebant destrictionem factam quousque habuerint omnia predicta parata: Et sic audivit a patre suo et a senioribus de villa. Sed an terra illa fuit specialiter onerata in donatione prima ad inveniendum predicta nescit.

Requisitus, Quis invenit predicta, et quis debet invenire Prior vel Vicarius? Dicit, quod nescit.

Requisitus et An Dominus habet jus sic distinguendi? Dicit quod sic; et hoc scit quod semper usus est per tempus cujus contra' memoria non existit, et super hoc est fama communis in villa de Bolton et locis vicariis.

Adam prepositus de Bolton, septuagenarius et ultra juratus et examinatus et diligenter interrogatus super premissis omnibus et singulis concordat cum Thoma conteste suo supradicto: Hoc addito quod vidit totam carucam conjunctam constringi pro predictis.

Rogerus de Bello Loco quinquagenarius ut dicit, juratus et examinatus et diligenter interrogatus super premissis concordat cum Thoma conteste suo supradicto: hoc addito quod dicit quod Dominus Johannes de Gilling dudum Prior de Wederhal et post Abbas de Ebor. demisit eidem XLVIII acras de predicta terra Ecclesie de Bolton et predixit sibi in dimissione quod terra sua deberet distringi si deficerent necessaria Cantarie predicte, Et dixit sibi quod tunc deberet adire Vicarium de Morland, et ipse deberet deliberare eum, et ponere averia sua pro averiis suis, et palefridum suum proprium si necesse fuit.

et diligenter interrogatus super premissis concordat cum Adam conteste suo supradicto, Hoc addito quod requisitus an Dominus habeat jus sic destringere? Dicit quod sic ut credit et sic vidit fieri: Dicit etiam quod vidit Priorem per servos destringere animalia Vicarii ad liberandum destrictionem Tenentium suorum; et vidit Vicarium qui fuit an Vicarius qui nunc est invenire omnia necessaria et vestimenta predicta.

Adam Marshall de Kirkebythore, sexagenarius juratus exam. et diligenter inter. super premissis concordat cum Thoma primo conteste suo, quod ipse vidit talem destrictionem semper in tempore suo sic fieri, et teneri quousque inventa fuerint omnia vestimenta et necessaria Cantarie; et Prior semper solebat deliberare destrictionem ipsam; et dicit quod habet et habuit jur. sic destringere et hoc scit, et semper vidit et audivit; et pater uxoris sue ipsius juratoris qui fuit IX vigint. annorum sic sibi retulit, et multi alii; et super hec est communis fama in Patria.

Adam Clericus, sexagenarius jur. et exam. et diligenter inter. super premissis concordat cum omnibus et singulis contestibus suis supradictis. Et illa inquisitio capta fuit in Ecclesia Sancti Laurentii de Appilby die Jovis prox. post Festum Translationis Sancti Thome Martyris Anno Domini millo. ccc^{mo}xxvi^o et coram Offic. videlicet Magistro Roberto de Southake. Et Anno Pontificatus nostri 11^o.

XIII. THE CHANTRY IN THE CASTLE OF APPLEBY, ALSO REFERRED TO IN THE ASSIGNMENT BY BISHOP SILVESTER IN 1251 (No. x.). [From Abstracts made by Thomas Machel (MSS. vol. iv. p. 470) and Bishop Nicolson (MSS. vol. ii. p. 24) from an entry in the Register of Wetherhal, fol. 152sq.]

1359. In this year sentence was given at York against Sir William Colyn, Vicar of S. Laurence in Appelby, who had endeavoured to throw the charges of serving the Chantry in the Castle of Appelby upon the Prior and Convent of Wedirhal. The Abbot and Convent of S. Mary at York pleaded by their proctor that they were free and discharged from any burden of finding and supporting the said Chantry and have been so beyond the memory of man; and the Vicars of the said Church were wont to find the said Chantry and a Chaplain to celebrate every day in the Chapel of the Castle at their own proper cost: which being made appear sufficient to the Chancellor of York, definite sentence was passed against the said Sir W. Colyn, and the Abbot and Convent with the Prior and Monks of their Cell of Wedirhal were discharged on September 5th, 1359.

And on September 24th of the same year (1359) a decree, referring to the aforesaid sentence, sets forth the above privileges and immunity as having belonged to the Abbot and Convent time out of mind and the burden is wholly laid upon the Vicars, who though not ignorant by unjust ways and means endeavoured to secure it—Licet terre pro predicta Cantaria subvenienda predecessoribus et successoribus suis fuerint et sint assignate cum onere predicto. The Commissary at York considering the allegation of the Abbot sufficiently proved decreed it thus against the Vicar, that the Vicar of Appelby and his successors should support and find the said Chantry and a Chaplain to celebrate there every day &c.

In 1466 a difference arose between Sir Richard Appelby, Perpetual Vicar of the Parish Church of Appelby, and the Abbot and Convent of S. Mary at York about the provision of the necessary utensils for the said Chapel, Books, Chalices and Vestments, of which the then Chaplain was in need. But this was amicably settled by William Peteman, Doctor of Laws, and William Langton, Bachelor of Laws, arbitrators indifferently chosen, who ordered—Quod predictus Dominus Ricardus Vicarius quam alius comede poterit suis expensis unum vestimentum et unum calicem satis decentia pro usu Capellani predicti providebit: Et predicti Abbas et Conventus ad eundem usum Librum Missale etiam congruum competentem et decentem cum omni diligentia possibili suis sumptibus ordinabunt—which in case they fall into decay or happen to be lost by rapine or otherwise, the said Richard the Vicar was to replace and make them good during his stay in the said Vicarage. In quorum Testimon. &c. Datum Ebor. 7^o die Mensis Junii Anno Dmi 1466.

Carta Henrici Comitis Cumbriæ Davidis Regis Scotiæ filii.

H. Comes filius Davidis Regis Scotiæ, Episcopus, Abbatibus,

² The Register has in MS. i. 17 Osberto de Bocland.

Comitibus, Justitiis, Baronibus, Vicecomitibus, Ministris et omnibus probis hominibus totius terræ suæ Clericis et Laicis, Francis et Anglis, Salutem. Sciatis me dedisse et concessisse in perpetuam Elemosynam duas partes Holme Coltriæ Abbati et Monachis ibidem Deo servientibus, quas ego et plures probi homines mecum perambulavimus, in primis inter eos et Alanum filium Waldeff quando ego tertiam partem prædictæ Holmcoltriæ prænominato Alano ad venationes suas concessi. Præterea vero concedo et hac mea carta confirmo donationem ejusdem Alani filii Waldeff, et Waldeff filii sui de illa tertia sua parte Holmcoltriæ quam illi ad venationes suas concesseram, quam ipse in præsentia Patris mei et mea et Baronum meorum apud Carleolum prædicti loci Abbati et Monachis in perpetuam Elemosynam dedit et concessit et Carta sua testante confirmavit. Volo itaque ut Abbas Holmcoltriæ et Monachi ibidem Deo servientes habeant plenarie Holmcoltriam per suas rectas divisas in nemore et plano, pratis et pascuis, piscationibus et aquis, et Rabi cum suis rectis divisis, sicut ego et Barones mecum ipsas perambulavimus inter prædictos Monachos et Aschetillum filium Udardi. Concedo etiam eis materiam in Foresta de Engleswoda ad ædificia sua et ad omnia domui suæ necessaria facienda et pasturam porcis eorum sine pasnagio. Cum hiis autem prædictis infra terminos Abbatie Holmcoltriæ et divisas suas tantam pacem et libertatem constituo, quantam Abbatia de Maylros et Abbatia de Neubotla concessione Patris mei tranquillius et sanctius et quietius possident et possessionibus suis infra perfruuntur. Quod predictus Willielmus recognovit prædictam carucatam terræ cum pertinentiis et Pasturam esse Jus et perpetuam elemosynam predicti Roberti Prioris, habendas et tenendas sibi et successoribus suis de predicto Willielmo et heredibus suis in perpetuum per servicium viginti solidorum reddendorum inde annuatim, sc. decem solidos ad Pentecosten et decem ad festum sancti Martini pro omni servicio. Preterea predictus Willielmus concessit predicto Roberto Priori et successoribus suis totam Culturam quæ fuit Gilberti de Lancastre et jacet proxima Bercariæ predicti Roberti Prioris versus Austrum. Et quinque acras in Cultura sua de Witerich propinquiores predictæ Bercariæ versus Occidentem jacere incultas ad communem pasturam averiorum suorum et totius villæ de Tirneby in perpetuum. Preterea idem Willielmus concessit predicto Roberto Priori et successoribus suis exitum predictæ Bercariæ qui est versus orientem super terram suam ad latitudinem quinque Perticarum secundum quod longitudo totius curiæ predictæ Bercariæ extendit versus Austrum. Preterea Willielmus concessit predicto Roberto Priori et successoribus suis pascere bona sua de rivulo qui currit extra et per medium Curiae Grangiæ suæ pro voluntate et placito suis in quantumcunque ipse Willielmus vel heredes sui concedere possint. Et sciendum est quod predictus Willielmus vel heredes sui non possint a modo aliquid colere infra metas vastæ pasturæ predictæ de Tyrneby, nec ipse vel heredes sui possint attachiare alicujus hominis averia ad eandem pasturam nisi solummodo sua propria averia et hominum suorum de predicta villa de Tyrneby.

XXVII. CONFIRMATION OF THE PRIVILEGES AND CUSTOMS OF THE CHURCH OF YORK BY HENRY I., cir. 1110. [Registrum Magnum Album, apud Ebor. ii. 1. 62 b; Historians of the Church of York, ed. J. Raine, Rolls Series, iii. 34.]

Henricus Rex Angliæ archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, consulibus, proceribus, et universis fidelibus, Francis et Anglis, totius Angliæ salutem.

Possessiones et dignitates et libertatis consuetudines quas habuit Eboracensis ecclesia, concedo et regia auctoritate præsentis carta confirmo, sicut hic subscriptæ sunt.

Sub regibus antiquis et archiepiscopis, et, quod plerique meminisse possunt, Edwardo rege, et Aldredo archiepiscopo, fuit ecclesiæ Sancti Petri consuetudo egregiæ libertatis. Si quis enim quemlibet cujuscunque facinoris aut flagitii reum et convictum infra atrium ecclesiæ caperet et retineret, universali judicio vi. hundreth emendebat; si vero infra ecclesiam, xii. hundreth; infra chorum xviii. Pænitentia quoque de singulis, sicut de sacrilegiis, injuncta. In hundreth viii. lib. continentur. Quod si aliquis, vesano spiritu agitated, diabolico ausu quemquam capere præsumerat in cathedra lapidea juxta altare, quam Angli vocant friðstol, id est cathedra quietudinis vel pacis, hujus tam flagitiosi sacrilegii emendatio sub nullo judicio erat, sub nullo pecuniæ numero claudebatur, sed apud Anglos boteles, hoc est sine emenda, vocabatur. Hæ emendæ nihil ad archiepiscopum sed ad canonicos pertinebant.

XXVIII. AUTHORITY GRANTED BY EDWARD III. TO TAKE FOR MILITARY SERVICE IN SCOTLAND THE "GRITHMEN" OF WEDERHALE AND OTHER PLACES, 1342. [Rotuli Scotiæ, 16 Ed. III. m. 12, ed. Record Com. vol. i. p. 629 b: Rymer, Fœdera, new ed. vol. ii. Pt. 2, p. 1203.]

Rex omnibus ad quos &c. Salutem. Sciatis quod assignavimus magnificum principem et dilectum consanguineum et fidelem nostrum, Edwardum de Balliolo, Regem Scotiæ, ad omnes homines vocatos Grithmen, apud Beverlacum, Ripon', Tynemuth et Wederhale, et alibi in libertate ecclesiastica, pro immunitate ibidem, ratione feloniarum, per ipsos factarum, optinenda, existentes, qui ad ipsum Regem venire et ad custos suos proprios, cum ipso ad partes Scotiæ, in obsequium nostrum proficisci voluerint, ibidem, quamdiu nostræ placuerit voluntati, moraturi, ad pacem nostram recipiendum, et ad eos arraiandum, et in comitiva sua ad easdem partes ducendum. Et ad sufficientem

securitatem de eis super hoc capiendum, et ad cartas nostras de pardonatione quarumcunque feloniarum, per ipsos ante festum Sanctæ Trinitatis, proximo præteritum, perpetratarum, eis nostro nomine credendum. Quibus, ad certificationem ipsius Regis, nobis cum securitate prædicta factam, cartas nostras, de pardonatione feloniarum prædictarum, fieri faciemus absque mora. In cujus &c.

Teste Rege apud Westm. xv die Julii.

XXIX. LIBERTY OF SANCTUARY AT WETHERHAL, ASSIZE TRIALS, 1292. [Assize Roll, Cumberland, No. 135, 20 Edw. I.]

Placita Corone coram H. de Cressyngham et sociis [suis, Justiciariis itinerantibus,] apud Aldeyston, in comitatu Cumbrie, in Crastino Animarum anno regni Regis Edwardi vicesimo.

1. Roll 10.

Balliva de Cumberland' et Allerdale venit per xij Juratos.

Andreas filius Thome de Wardwyk' de die percussit Adam filium Andree Mangok' cum quodam baculo in capite, ita quod tertia die postea inde obiit. Et predictus Andreas statim post factum fugit usque Wetherhale, et ibidem [habuit] pacem in forma cuiusdam consuetudinis ibidem vsitate ab antiquo, ut dicitur; et malecreditur. Ideo exigatur et utlagetur. Catalla eius, v. s., vnde Vicecomes respondebit. Et quia nescitur quo waranto Prior de Wetherhale clamat habere huiusmodi libertatem, ideo preceptum est Vicecomiti, quod faciat venire predictum Priorem, et similiter Abbatem Sancte Marie Eboraci, ad ostendendum, etc. Et ipsi modo veniunt et dicunt, quod clamant ab antiquo habere talem libertatem apud Wetherhale infra banlucam¹, quod possint recipere quoscunque felones, et eos receptare infra libertatem predictam, prestito sacramento quod se bene gerent dum infra libertatem predictam moram fecerint, et illam non exierint, etc.

Et quod sic vsi sunt, et non aliter, a tempore quo non extat memoria petunt quod inquiratur, etc. Et Jurati dicunt super sacramentum suum, quod predicti Abbas et Prior et antecessores sui a tempore quo non extat memoria vsi sunt huiusmodi consuetudine in libertate predicta, in forma qua clamant. Ideo datus est dies de audiendo iudicio suo apud Nouum Castrum super Tynam, in comitatu Northumbrie, in Octabis Sancti Hillarii, etc.

2. Roll 13, d.

Willelmus prepositus de Wederhale, Matheus de Wymundham, caretarius, Willelmus del Fyrhus, et Adam Stubber' noctanter occiderunt Robertum de Shawyl de Magna Corkeby in piscaria de Wederhale, infra libertatem Prioris de Wederhale. Et predictus Adam statim [post] factum fugit; et malecreditur. Ideo exigatur et utlagetur. Nulla habuit catalla. Et postea predicti Willelmus, Matheus, et alii receptati fuerunt in predicta villa de Wederhale cum Thoma de Wymundham, Priore de Wederhale, qui obiit, per sex annos, ipso Priore sciente. Et post mortem ipsius Prioris predictus Willelmus prepositus per vnum mensem ante mortem suam cum Willelmo de Tannefeld', nunc Priore, receptatus fuit; et similiter Matheus caretarius per modicum tempus, et Willelmus del Fyrhus vsque adventum Justiciariorum nunc; ipso tamen Priore ignorante. Et tunc fugerunt. Et quia predicti Matheus et Willelmus del Fyrhus modo se subtraxerunt, et malecreduntur, ideo exigantur et utlagentur. Nulla habuerunt catalla. Et quidam Stephanus le Porter de Wederhale fecit inquisitionem de predicta morte, cum nullum ibidem habeant Coronatorem. Ideo preceptum est Vicecomiti, quod faciat eum venire, et Abbatem beate Marie Eboraci et predictum Priorem similiter, et Stephanum et totam vill[atam] de Wederhale. Post venit predicta villa, et finem fecit pro transgressione predicta per c s. Et Stephanus le Porter venit, et finem fecit pro transgressione per xx s., per plegium Willelmi de Wardwyk' et Simonis de Stuteuill'. Et predictus Abbas per attornatum suum dicit, quod nichil sciuit de predicta feloniam, nec de receptamento predictorum felonum, nec de Inquisitione facta per predictum Stephanum de morte predicti Roberti; et dicit quod nullum clamat habere Coronatorem in libertate predicta, nec clamat quod felones qui felonias fecerint in libertate illa aliquod habeant refugium, uel quod receptari poterunt in eadem. Et Jurati hoc idem testantur. Dicit tamen quod ab antiquo omnes felones venientes ibidem causa refugij receptari solebant ibidem, pulsatis campanis in ecclesia, et sic accepta pace, pacifice infra banlucam eiusdem libertatis commorari, prestito tamen sacramento quod bene se gerent dum in eadem moram fecerint. Et inde inuenit ecclesiam suam seysitam. Et quod talis consuetudo in libertate illa fuit ab antiquo, petit quod inquiratur. Et Jurati hoc idem testantur. Sed quia predicta consuetudo est contraria toti legi Anglie, et contra Coronam, etc., ideo datus est dies predicto Abbati apud Nouum Castrum super Tynam, in Comitatu Northumbrie, in Octabis Sancti Hillarii, de audiendo inde Iudicio suo, etc. Postea in Octabis Sancti Hillarii Abbas beate Marie Eboraci per attornatum suum optulit se, etc. Et datus est ei dies de audiendo Iudicio suo a die Pasche in v. septimanas apud Nouum Castrum super Tynam, etc.

3. Roll 17.

Villata de Karl[iolo] venit per xij Jur[atos].

Roll 17, d.

Ricardus Gener, Johannes Curur, [et] Clement Sutor venerunt prope domum Rogeri filii Martini carnificis, et predictus Ricardus percussit canem predicti Rogeri, et predictus Rogerus statim exiuit de domo sua et cum gladio percussit predictum Rogerum sub vmbiculo vsque ad cor, vnde statim inde obiit. Prima inventrix venit, et non malecreditur. Et predictus Clemens, qui presens fuit, non venit, et fuit attachiatus per Johannem et Adam filium Moryn, qui modo non habent ipsum. Ideo ipsi in misericordia. Et predictus Rogerus statim post factum fugit vsque ad libertatem Prioris de Wederhall', que est cella Abbacie Eboraci, et ibidem commorauit a die Purificacionis beate Marie anno vicesimo vsque festum Sancti Michaelis proximum sequens, quod propter adventum Domini Regis in partibus illis fugit in Scociam, et malecreditur. Ideo exigatur et utlagetur. Catalla eius, nulla. Et predictus Abbas venit per attornatum suum, et super hoc allocutus, dicit quod predictus Rogerus post feloniam factam accessit ad libertatem suam predictam, et ad ecclesiam libertatis predictæ pulsavit quamdam Campanam. Et coram Balliuis eiusdem libertatis iuravit quod in posterum bene et fideliter se haberet, et sic fuit admissus in libertate predicta pro voluntate sua commoand', ita quod non transiret terminos libertatis predictæ. Et ea consuetudine vsus est ipse [Abbas] et predecessores sui in libertate predicta a tempore quo non extat memoria. Ideo inquiratur qualiter predictus Abbas et predecessores sui vsi sunt libertate predicta, et a quo tempore. Et xij Jurati de Lyth[dale] et Esk[dale], et similiter xij Jurati de Cumbria et Allerdale, et similiter Hugo de Multon' et Johannes de Hodeleston' et socij sui, dicunt super sacramentum suum, quod predictus Abbas et predecessores sui a tempore quo non extat memoria, sine aliqua temporis interruptione, vsi sunt consuetudine predicta, quam idem Abbas modo clamat. Et datus est dies predicto Abbati apud Nouum Castrum super Tynam, in comitatu Northumbrie, in Octabis Sancti Hillarij, ad audiendum inde Iudicium suum, etc.

XXX. LIBERTY OF SANCTUARY AT WETHERHAL: BOUNDS OF THE SANCTUARY AND OPINION OF COUNSEL. [Copied by Thomas Machel, MSS. vol. iv. pp. 425, 429 from the Register of Wetherhal fol. 124, 198.]

Abbas Beate Marie Ebor. clamat talem Libertatem et consuetudinem: Quod omnes felones ad Libertatem suam de Wederhal, pro feloniam facta extra Libertatem suam predictam, et ad Ecclesiam predictæ Libertatis accedentes, et quandam Campanam pulsantes et coram Balivis ejusdem Libertatis faciendo Sacramento quod in posterum bene et fideliter se habebunt, Et sic in Libertate illa infra divisas ejusdem Libertatis pro voluntate eorum commorand'. viz. Inter () Crucem quæ est in ripa de Eden versus Corkeby, et () Crucem quæ est juxta Capellam Sancti Oswaldi ex parte aquæ de Eden versus Corkeby. Et inter () Crucem quæ stat juxta le Loge super ripam predictæ aquæ: et () Crucem quæ stat juxta Sicketam de Waryewyke et () Crucem quæ stat inter villam de Scotteby et Grangiam Prioris de Wederhale ; Et sic per istum rivulum usque ad.....ad (††) Crucem quæ stat super ripam predicti rivili juxta Cumquintyn. Et sic de predicta Cruce usque ad Divisas Prioris de Wederhale et villæ de Cumquintyn super Lytilthwait, et sic de Lytilthwait usque ad Lencraike, quæ est super ripam aquæ de Eden, Et sic usque ad Wederhale et ad predictam Crucem in ripa de [Eden versus] Corkeby juxta Grangiam Prioris.

Avisamentum Consilii temporalis Domini Abbatis Stæ Mariæ Ebor. pro Libertatibus et franchasiis...de Wederhale conservandis in quibusdam casibus felonix, et aliorum si contingant &c.

Fyrst. The Temporal Counsaill learned saythe that the warrant or precept that comes from the Justice of Pees or any other that haith the autorite, with this clause—Quod non omittas propter aliquam libertatem—You must obey it without disturbaunce.

Also the said learned Counsaill saith, That if there be ony man reseying and abideing within y^e Franches, and is no Chyrchman and he be a thefe and the Maynor with him ; ony man may take him and bring him to your Gauyll, and after that he may be brought befor the Justice of deliverance by writ, and so to be had out of the Franches.

Also they saye, that notwithstanding any Inditement, There shal no man be deliverd out of the Franches, without a non omittas, as is said afor.

Also they saie, That if siche a felony be don within franchises, the Felone must be justifiende in your Court ; for he may nought clame Church there, as he has done felone : But if that he com to the Kyrke there he may clame preveleg of the Kyrke, by the common law of y^e Kyrke.

Also the said Counsaill saith if ony Churchman that goos out and doth felone without, and cometh in agayn ; They thinke he should be punished within the Franches by emprisonment : for the Franches was never ordayned ne granted to be Spelunca Latronum. And in these poynts we counsaill ye demean yowe after owre old precedent and not begyne newe thyngs ; for the said Counsaill sayeth, That non of the Kynges offecers may enter your Franches in ony cas without warrant of Non omittas. But if you sew a felone That hath donne felone out of Franches, and freshely sewes hym into the Franches, than they may attache the felone and he aske no Church, and leve hym in your Prison to be sent for by writ.

XXXI. HERIOTS¹ NOT TO BE TAKEN BEFORE THE MORTUARIES ARE PAID, 1423-29. [Copied by Thomas Machel, MSS. vol. iv. p. 431, from the Register of Wetherhal p. 197*b*.]

Be it knowen to all manner of men that this present writynge shall see or here, That I Thomas Bampton of Threpland within the parish of T...[Torpenhow] 89 yeares and more of age saw and...knowledge That Robert Heggmore Lord of B...[Bowaldeth] presumptuously took in the name of a Heriot, a horse called a mare of the goods of John Oberhowse of Bowaldeth [a township of Torpenhow] affore the Kyrke took the mortuary. Wharfore he stode accursed thowre the Diocese of Carlil and was cited to apper at Aspatry affore Mayster William Barowe Bishoppe of Carlil and Doctor of both Laws, whar he asked penance and absolucion, and there he made Restitucion of the sayde horse to Sir Robert Ellergill, Vicar of Torpenhowe. And in remembrance the sayde Robert Heggmore gaffe to the sayde Vicar vj Akes beste in his wodde whilke the sayde Thomas Bampton fellid and carred to Torpenhowe; and there the Bishopp oppynly gaffe a decre and a sentence to all thayme that aftyrward and from thens forthe tooke the Heriot affore the holy Kyrke war possessed, God's curse and his and all holy Kyrkks.

XLVII. ENDOWMENT CHARTER OF THE CATHEDRAL CHURCH OF CARLISLE, DATED MAY 6TH, 1541. [This Charter is too long to print. The original with the broad seal attached is now in the "Chest" in the Dean and Chapter Registry. It sets out all the lands, properties &c. including those transferred from the dissolved Priory of Wetherhal. There is a copy in the same MS. volume as Transcript A. of the Register, and another among the loose papers in the Registry.]

XLVIII. ABSTRACT OF LEASE BY THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF CARLISLE TO JOHN BLAKLOCKE OF THE HOUSE AND LANDS OF THE LATE MONASTERY OF WETHERALL, DECEMBER 14TH, 1541.

The Indenture was made at Carlisle on the xiiiith day of December in "the thretty and thre yeare" of the reign of Henry VIII., "under God Supreme Head of the Church of England," betwixt Lancelot Salkeld, Dean of the Cathedral Church of the Holy and Indivisible Trinity in Carlisle and the Chapter of the same and John Blaklocke of Henryby (Harraby) in the County of Cumberland, yeoman.

The Lease is granted for a term of 37 years unto the foresaid John of the "House and site of the lait Monastery of Watherall" with all houses edifices barns orchards and land within the same site and compass circuity and "pertiguite" of the said lait monasterie, Also the three little closes &c. [The same as in XLVI.] The rents are £6. 14s. od. for the lands, £3. 6s. 8*d.* for the mill and £10 for the fishing, payable in equal portions at Lady Day and Michaelmas. [The same value as in XLVI.] The said John is to do the repairs, having timber allowed, also hedgeboote¹, fyreboote, ploughboote and cartboote².

XLIX. PARLIAMENTARY SURVEY OF THE RECTORIES OF WEATHERALL AND WARWICK WITHIN THE COUNTY OF CUMBERLAND MADE APRIL, 1650.

A Survey of the Mannour of Weatherall¹ with the Rights Members and appurtenances thereof lying and being within the County of Cumberland late parcell of the possessions or late belonging to the late Deane and Chapter of the Cathedrall Church of S^t Maries of Carlisle made and taken by vs whose names are hereunto subscribed in the Moneth of Aprill one thousand six hundred ffifty By vertue of a Comission to vs graunted vpon Act of the Commons of England assembled in Parliament, for the abolishing of Deanes Deanes and Chapters Cannons Prebends and other officers and titles of or belonging to any Cathedrall or Collegiate Church or Chappell within England and Walles vnder the handes and seales of fve or more of y^e Trustees in y^e said Act named & appointed.

The Rectorie of Weatherall and Warwick within the County of Cumberland. All that the Rectory of Weatherall and Warwick with thappurtenances to the same Rectory and Church of Weatherall annexed belonging or appertaining wth all manner of tythes oblacons obvencons pencons porcons fruites Emoluments and profitts whatsoever to the said Rectory and parish Churches of Weatherall or Warwick or either of them by any meanes or wayes belonging or appertaining All which said Rectory with all and singular the tythes belonging to the aforesaid Churches were late in the possession of S^r Ffrancis Howard of Corby Castle within the County of Cumberland Kn^t. but now sequestred, and in the possession of Thomas Sewelland and that the date should be 35 Henry VIII. (1543) and not 33 Henry VIII. (1541). But really the interval of the seven months between May and December, when the lease was granted, was a very natural time to have elapsed after the acquisition of the property. There is one lease existing, before the Priory of Carlisle was dissolved, of the tithes of S. Nicholas Church, Newcastle on Tyne, dated August 1st 1537, Lancelot Salkeld being then Prior of the Cathedral church of the Blessed Mary of Carlisle.

and others for the vse of the Comonwealth and is worth p. Annum one hundred eighty six pounds.

Memorandum that the aforesaid S^r Ffrancis Howard Son and assignee of William Lord Howard late of Nauorth within the County of Cumberland deceased, By Indenture of Lease dated the Twenty eight day of August in the fourteenth yeare of the late King Charles graunted by Thomas Cumber, Deane and the Chapter of Carlisle vnto the aforesaid Lord William Howard his Executors and assignes holds all that last menconed premisses from the date for the tearme of one and twenty yeares yeilding and paying therefore vnto the said Deane and Chapter and their Successors the annuall rent of fourteene poundes thirteene shillings foure pence at the feasts of S^t Michael and the annunciacon or within fforty dayes But are worth vpon improuem^t ouer and aboute the old Rent comunibus annis one hundred seauenty one pounds six shillings eight pence.

With Couenant to pay six poundes p. Anum to the Curate of Weatherall and six poundes to the Curate of Warwicke yearely, Provided, that if the aforesaid yearely Rent be behind and vnpaid at y^e ffeasts and dayes at which it ought to be paid then the Lease to be void.

There were to come of the aforesaid lease the Twenty eighth day of August last ten yeares.

APPENDIX A.

RANULF MESCHIN, HIS WIFE LUCIA, AND THE HONOR OF CARLISLE.

Ranulf Meschin, or Ranulf "Junior," was probably so named to distinguish him from his father Ranulf. This and not "le Meschin" is the form used in all documents to which he is a party¹. He is called Ranulf of Bayeux, or Ranulf de Briscasard, by Ordericus Vitalis (Lib. xi. c. 20; Lib. xii. c. 14 et al.) and Ranulf de Micenis, or de Meschines, by Matthew of Westminster (in ann. 1072) and Matthew Paris (Chron. Maj. ed. Luard, ii. 8 marg.). He was Viscount of the Bessin, or territory of Bayeux in Normandy. His father, Ranulf, was, there is little doubt, identical with that Ranulf of Bayeux who joined the Norman Viscounts in their rebellion against William of Normandy, and was defeated at the battle of Val-ès-Dunes in 1047 (Orderic. Vital. Lib. vii. c. 15; William of Malmesbury, Lib. iii. § 230; Freeman, Norman Conquest, ii. 250). His mother's name was Matilda or Maud (Mahald, in the Liber Vitæ of Durham, ed. Surtees Society, p. 78), the sister of Hugh, Viscount of Avranches and Earl of Chester (Orderic. Vital. Lib. xii. c. 28). His brother Richard is mentioned in the first charter of this Register and in the Liber Vitæ of Durham; and his brother William is a witness to the two following charters. He married Lucia, the widow of Roger de Romara and daughter of Ivo Taillebois (see below), and her name appears in three of these early charters. His sister Agnes married Robert de Grantmesnil (Orderic. Vital. Lib. viii. c. 16). By his wife, Lucia, he had a son, William Ranulf, who must have been born before 1108, as he was of age before 1129 when he succeeded his father. Other children are ascribed to Ranulf, but on no very good evidence.

The historical details about Ranulf Meschin are only scanty. It is not known how or when he came over from Normandy. But in 1093, we find him with his uncle, Hugh, Earl of Chester, the strong supporter of William Rufus. He then, as "Ranulph, nephew of the Earl," witnessed the charter granted by Earl Hugh to the monastery of St Werburgh, at Chester, when the Earl expelled the secular Canons, and placed there monks of the Benedictine Rule (see the charter in Dugdale, Monasticon, ii. 386, No. iv.).

Ranulf appears in these early charters of our Register as Lord of the district or power (potestas) or Honor of Carlisle and in possession of the castle of Appelby. He must have been placed in command here by William Rufus after the conquest of the country in 1092 (see below), or by Henry I. between 1100 and 1112, the limit of the date of our first charter. The former is by far the more probable; and if the reference to King William in the first charter be correct, it is beyond doubt. To protect his province against the Scots, he founded three Baronies—Lyddale, he gave to Turgis Brundis, Burgh by Sands, to Robert de Trivers (Testa de Nevill, p. 379 b), and Gillesland, to his brother William Meschin (Camden, Britannia, ed. Holland, p. 176). The last named does not seem ever to have got the land entirely out of the power of its original possessor, Gill son of Bueth, or Boet (see on William Meschin in No. 2, note 5). In the year 1106 Ranulf was in Normandy with King Henry I., and he commanded one of the three divisions of the army at the battle of Tinchebrai on September 28th, when Duke Robert was so signally defeated. He is then spoken of as a great Baron, and not one of the four Earls who were present (Orderic. Vital. Lib. xi. c. 20). In the same year, Osbert de Archis, Sheriff of York, made some attack on the liberties of the monastery of Ripon. Archbishop Gerard complained to the King, and Radulph le Meschines, as he is called in the Chronicle, was sent down with Robert Bloet, Bishop of Lincoln, Radulph Basset and others to investigate the matter (Illustrative Documents, 11.). Between the years 1108 and 1111 Ranulf was a party to a Convention¹ made at Doura, on May 17th, between Henry I. and Robert, count of Flanders. The deed is given in Rymer (Fœdera, new edn. i. 6), a portion of it in facsimile, and his name is there spelt Ranñ. Meschin.

In the year 1119, King Henry was in Normandy quelling a revolt, and among the nobles who were loyal to him Ordericus (Lib. xii. c. 14) specially mentions "Richard, Earl of Chester, and Ranulf de Bricasard, his cousin and successor"; and speaks of their fortresses of Avranches and Bayeux. In the same year, as Ranulf Meschin, together with his brother William Meschin, he attested the charter granted by Earl Richard to the Abbey of St Werburgh at Chester (Dugdale, Monasticon, ii. 387, No. v.).

In the year following, 1120, the fatal wreck of the "White Ship" made a great change in the fortunes of Ranulf. With the King's son, William the Ætheling, perished Richard, Earl of Chester, and his wife Matilda. Ranulf obtained the Earldom of Chester with all the patrimony of Earl Richard, being next heir in right of his mother, Matilda, sister of Earl Hugh (Orderic. Vital. Lib. xii. c. 28). But he had to give up the lordship of Carlisle to the King, and, perhaps, the Barony of Kendal held in right of his wife Lucia (see below). Ten years later the District or Honor of Carlisle appears in the earliest extant Pipe Roll, that of 31 Henry I., divided into the two Shires of Carlisle and Westmarieland. He was, moreover, charged with the payment of a heavy fine; of this fine a thousand pounds "due for the land of Earl Hugh" remained still to be paid by his son after his death (Pipe Roll for Lincoln, 31 Hen. I. ed. J. Hunter, p. 110).

Abbey of St Werburgh, at Chester, whither he had caused the body of Earl Hugh to be transferred, and he directed his own body to be buried there (Dugdale, Monasticon, ii. 387, No vi.). He died in 1129 (Dugdale, Baronage, i. 37) and was interred in the Abbey in accordance with his wish. He was succeeded by his son, the Earl Ranulf who played such an important part in the reign of Stephen (Orderic. Vital. Lib. xii. c. 28; Durham Liber Vitae). From these scattered notices, we get the outlines of a distinguished soldier and of a man of great influence with the reigning monarchs of England.

It does not appear that Ranulf Meschin ever had the title of "Earl" before he became Earl of Chester, or that the land of Carlisle was termed the "Earldom of Carlisle" in his time. We have seen above that he was distinguished by Ordericus from the four Earls who were present in Normandy. In this Register of Wetherhal he is spoken of as holding the "power" (potestas) or the "honor" of Carlisle (No. 1 and No. 8), not the earldom. In Testa de Nevill he is called "Lord (Dominus) of Cumberland," and elsewhere his district is called "his land of Cumberland" (see below p. 476). Freeman and others seem to have taken the title from Matthew of Westminster, who says of Ranulf (in ann. 1072) "regebat comitatum Carlioli comes Ranulphus de Micenis"; but the whole passage is so full of errors as to be quite devoid of authority. Dugdale (Baronage i. 37) quotes from the spurious charter of William II. (Additional Charter No. 250), and others from the equally valueless Distributio Cumberlandiæ (No. 245). The title occurs in no genuine charter.

The arms of Ranulf Meschin are given by Lysons (Cumberland, page lv.) as "Or, a lion rampant, gules."

We now turn to the wife of Ranulf, Lucia, or Lucy. She was the daughter of Ivo Taillebois, or Taleboys, who came from Anjou, and of Lucia, his wife. The identity of names has given rise to many difficulties. The elder Lucia was descended from one Torold, Sheriff of Lincolnshire, and from him she inherited large property in that county. This property Ivo enjoyed in right of his wife, as would appear from a grant by Ivo, in 1085, to the Priory of Spalding of the Church of St Nicholas of Angers and other privileges (Dugdale, Monast. vol. iii. pp. 216, 217). It was St Mary at York (Illustrative Documents, xvi.). This came to Ivo after the Domesday survey (1085—86) when the Barony was in the hands of the Crown, and was, there is little doubt, given to him by William Rufus about the time William put his son-in-law Ranulf Meschin in command of the frontier district. But this Barony, together with the land of Carlisle, passed into the hands of the Crown when Ranulf succeeded to the Earldom of Chester. With considerable difficulty and during the lifetime of Lucia, her son, William de Romara, obtained a portion of her domains which the Crown had taken, probably those in Lincolnshire (Orderic Vital. Lib. xii. c. 34). In 1130 Lucia paid to the King 500 marks that she should not be compelled to marry again within five years (Pipe Rolls, Lincoln, 31 Hen. I. ed. J. Hunter, p. 110). It is said that she was buried in the monastery of Spalding in the year 1141 (Dugdale, Baronage, i. 37 a). On the confusion of names and the opinions concerning her descent, see Freeman, Norman Conquest, ii. 682, iii. 778 and Pipe Rolls for Cumberland &c., ed. Hodgson Hinde, p. xvi. sq. Everthing that can be said as to the identity of the two Lucias is ably said by R. E. G. Kirk in an exhaustive set of papers in The Genealogist (New Series v. 60, 131, 153); but his evidence does not carry conviction against the great improbability of the case and the evidence on the other side.

The "lordship," or "power" (potestas, No. 1), or "honor" (No. 8) of Carlisle, over which Ranulf Meschin ruled, was not, we have seen, an earldom¹. It had formed the southern part of ancient Cumbria, or Strathclyde. The name Cumbria does not appear to be used before writers of the 11th century, or the term Cumbri to be applied to the Britons of Strathclyde². The latter designation first appears about the middle of the 9th century³. Cumbria, or its Saxon equivalent Cumbraland, was granted in 945 to Malcolm I., King of Scots, by Eadmund, King of the West Saxons, after the defeat of Donald, or Dunmail, King of Cumbria. Malcolm held it as a fief of the English Crown, for which he did homage, though it was not yet a part of England¹. The heir apparent, or one of the royal house of Scotland, seems often to have governed the land. In the year 1070, Malcolm III., Malcolm Ceanmor, held Scotland proper together with Cumbria; passing through the latter province, he invaded and laid waste Northumbria. William the Conqueror, who had ravaged Yorkshire in the winter of 1069, again came north in 1072, and advanced beyond the Forth, when Malcolm did homage to him as his vassal. It should be noted that William did not return through Cumbria, but by the eastern coast. At this time Gospatric, Earl of Northumberland, who had harried Cumbria in 1070, was deprived of his earldom by King William, and betook himself to Malcolm, who gave him Dunbar and other possessions². It would appear to be his son Dolfin who is found a few years later ruling the district of Carlisle under Malcolm.

We come now near the date of our first charter. In the year 1092, William Rufus went north with a large force and drove out Dolfin. He seized the southern part of Cumbria, to which the name of Cumbraland was soon applied, and made it for the first time part of England³. The northern part remained under the Scottish King, Malcolm, as the vassal of the King of England. He acknowledged the English supremacy both as regards northern Cumbria and as regards Lothian, which was then essentially a part, not of Scotland proper, but of England. At the date of the first charter of the Register, that is between 1092 and 1112, probably before 1100, we find Ranulf Meschin in possession of the land, and guarding at his castle of Appelby the road by which the Scots had so often invaded Teesdale and Yorkshire. No other lord of the land is mentioned. His grants of property in this district to the Abbey of St Mary at York are very natural in the son-in-law of Ivo Taillebois, who about this time was himself a benefactor to the Abbey, and a strong supporter of William Rufus. Moreover the King himself took much interest in the Abbey of St Mary, and laid the foundation stone of the new buildings in 1089. We have seen that Ranulf was often engaged with King Henry I. in Normandy early in the century, the beginning of Henry's reign; he could hardly have left this important command had he been lately appointed to it. We may, therefore, conclude that Ranulf was placed in charge when the land was conquered by William Rufus; and under that King the monastery of Wetherhal was probably founded.

The limits of this district have been pretty clearly defined. The boundaries of ancient Cumbria in the year 1069 are given on excellent authority. In the return made to the King's writ by the Prior and Convent of the Cathedral Church of Carlisle in the reign of Edward I. (1291) there is this statement, under that year, sent by the hand of Alan de Frysington, "Cocanonicus et Precentor Ecclesiæ nostræ," from their chronicles and writings—"A.D. 1069. Cumbria dicebatur, quantum modo est Episcopatus Karliolensis et Episcopatus Glasguensis et Episcopatus Candide case et insuper ab Episcopatu Karliol usque ad flumen Dunde (Duddon).....ibi in passu illo¹." Hence it can be shown that ancient Cumbria at that date stretched from the Firth of Clyde on the north to the river Duddon on the south. David, afterwards King of Scotland, who from 1107 to 1124 ruled as Earl over Scotland south of the Clyde and the Forth, made an Inquisition in 1120, or 1121, into the lands belonging to the Church of Glasgow. This Inquisition is given in full in the *Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis*². The inquiry was made "in each of the provinces of Cumbria which were under his dominion and power, for he did not rule over the whole of the Cumbrian region" (non enim toti Cumbrensi regioni dominabatur). It clearly shews by the places mentioned that the Bishopric of Glasgow stretched on the south as far as the Solway Frith and the Cheviots, the boundaries of England. The limit of Earl David's dominion towards the south at this time is further proved by another act of his, a grant of land in Anandale (Estrahanent) to Robert de Brus, the first of the line in Scotland. This grant speaks of the land "from the bounds of Dunegal of Strathnith (Stranit) to the bounds of Randulf Meschin.....with all those customs which Randulf Meschin had at any time in Carlisle (Carduil) and in his land of Cumberland" (Illustrative Documents, I.). This clearly points to the boundary of the Solway; and the date of the grant must have been shortly after David became King of all Scotland in 1124.

The southern boundary of ancient Cumbria towards the west in 1069 was, we see, the river Duddon; but shortly after, probably in the reign of William I., the boundary of England proper was advanced northward to the Derwent. Part of the intervening country, that lying between the Duddon and the Esk, is even found in Domesday Book in 1085—86 (ed. Record Com. vol. i. p. 301 b). The Derwent was the boundary in that direction of the Diocese of Carlisle when the See was founded, and was almost certainly the limit also of this district or "honor of Carlisle." On the south-east the hills, through which ran the passes into the valley of the Tees and into Yorkshire, marked the natural boundary of the "honor"; and these passes were well guarded by the castle of Appleby, and probably by the castles of Brough and Mallerstang (Pendragon). The Chronicles of the Picts speak of "Cumbirland," or Strathclyde, "as far as the Rerecross (Reir croiz) of Staynmore¹." There was again a natural boundary on the east, the hills of the Pennine range; this soon after became the boundary of the Diocese and of the Shires, excepting the peculiar parish of Alston in Northumbria. Even the Bishopric of Hexham, which ceased to be a See in 821, only claimed to reach westward as far as Wetherhala (Illustrative Documents, III.).

The limits of this district, or "honor" of Carlisle, were practically identical with those of the Diocese founded in 1133. When to this district were added the Barony of Kendal, the land between the Derwent and the Duddon, and the parish of Alston, the whole made up the two Shires of Carlisle and Westmoreland.

These shires must have been formed after 1120, when Ranulf succeeded to the Earldom of Chester and the whole district came into the hands of the Crown. The two shires, or counties, as well as "the mines of Carlisle" in the parish of Alston, appear in the Pipe Roll of 31 Henry I.; but Cumberland as the name of the shire, or county of Carlisle, I have not found before January 25th 1176, when it occurs in the appointment of justices recorded by Benedict Abbas (ed. Stubbs, i. 108); it is also given in the Pipe Roll of 23 Henry II. (1177). Benedict there names Coupelanda as independent of Cumberlanda.

APPENDIX B.

BISHOP ATHELWOLD AND THE FOUNDATION OF THE PRIORY OF CARLISLE.

It is generally asserted in the local histories that the Priory of Carlisle was founded in the year 1102 by Henry I. None of the early English Chroniclers appear to refer to the foundation. There is the following passage in the Scottish Chronicle of John de Fordun—"Henricus persuasione et consilio ipsius Reginae, anno MCII, constituit Canonicos Regulares in Kaerliel"—Scotichronicon v. 39. Even this is not a part of John de Fordun's Chronicle, but is an interpolation by his Continuator, William Bower, Abbot of Inchcolm, in the 15th century¹.

The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, Florence of Worcester, Simeon of Durham, Richard of Hexham and John of Hexham, William of Malmesbury, Ordericus Vitalis and Henry of Huntingdon do not mention the subject, although the first three speak of the restoration of the City of Carlisle and the building of a castle by William Rufus in 1092².

These Regular Canons were supposed to have adopted the Rule and name of S. Augustine, though the great Augustine of Hippo can have had little to do with the Rule. It is generally allowed that they had their origin about the middle of the 11th century, and were not introduced into England before the 12th century, in the reign of Henry I.³ The first Priory of Augustinian Canons in England was founded at Colchester, certainly not before 1105. Priority has been claimed for Nostell, but on no good ground. Probably in the North of England, the first Augustinian monastery was Hexham, due to Archbishop Thurstin, and therefore not before December 1114, for in that month he was enthroned, though not yet consecrated. There is no trustworthy evidence that the House at Carlisle was founded before that date.

There is a special interest for us about the Augustinian Priory of S. Oswald at Nostell, near Pontefract, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. It was the mother House from which came, undoubtedly, the first Bishop of Carlisle, in the person of Athelwold, the Prior of that monastery. It is alleged that he was also the first Prior of Carlisle. These points call for closer examination.

Athelwold, as he is called in this Register, or Æthelwulf, or Aldulf, for his name appears in many forms, was consecrated 1st Bishop of Carlisle at York, by Thurstin, Archbishop of York, on August 6th, 1133. He was at the time Prior of S. Oswald's at Nostell, or Nostla, in Yorkshire, and as such was a Canon of York, holding the prebend of Bramham (Hardy, Fasti Eccles. iii. 177), and he was confessor to King Henry I. Thus John of Hexham writes—"Anno MCXXXIII, mense Augusto, ante Assumptionem Sanctæ Mariæ apud Eboracum a Turstino archiepiscopo consecrati sunt episcopi Galfridus, cancellarius Regis Henrici, ad episcopatum Dunelmensem, Aldulfus, Prior de Nostla, ad urbem Karleol, quam Rex Henricus initiavit ad sedem episcopalem, datis sibi ecclesiis de Cumberland et Westmariland quæ adjacuerunt archidiaconatui Eboracensi" (i.e. of Richmond).—Memorials of Hexham, ed. J. Raine, i. 109. Also in the Annals of Waverley (in ann. 1133)—"Fecit Rex Henricus novum Episcopatum apud Karduil, in finibus Angliæ et Scotiæ, et posuit ibi Episcopum Adulfum, Priorem Canonorum Regularium Sancti Oswaldi, cui solitus erat confiteri peccata sua. Hic autem Canonicos Regulares posuit in Ecclesia sedis suæ."—Annales Monastici, ed. Luard, ii. 223¹. The date, August 6th, is the day on which Galfrid Rufus is known to have been consecrated, and, as we see, John of Hexham says before the Assumption, August 15th.

The Priory of Nostell was founded by Robert de Lacy in the reign of Henry I., and partly endowed by him; his charter is extant. It is not clear whether there was an earlier foundation or not; but the confirmation charters of Henry I. and Henry II. distinctly state that Regular Canons were placed there by Archbishop Thurstin. The date of foundation was probably in or shortly after the year 1121¹. It is asserted that Athelwold was the second Prior of Nostell. However that may have been, it is certain that he came from Nostell to Carlisle; and therefore, whether as Prior of Carlisle or Bishop, it must have been long after 1102. In fact it would be scarcely credible that, as he died in 1156, he should have held the important posts of Prior, and then Bishop, of Carlisle for the long space of 54 years.

But was Athelwold ever Prior of Carlisle? If so, at what date? He was certainly Prior of S. Oswald (Nostell) early in 1123, when he was sent by Archbishop Thurstin on a mission to William de Corbeil, Archbishop Elect of Canterbury². As Prior of Nostell he often appears in the history of that period in connection with, and as a friend of, Archbishop Thurstin³. It is remarkable that he is invariably spoken of in the older accounts Adulfus Ecclesiæ Carleolensis a Turstino Archiepiscopo Eboracensi consecrati sunt Episcopi." Matthew Paris, Historia Anglorum (ed. Madden, i. 245)—"Anno Domini M^oC^oXXX^oII^o (sic) rex Henricus novum fecit episcopatum apud Karleolum, in limbo scilicet Angliæ et Galwalliæ. Et posuit ibi primum episcopum, nomine Athelulphum, sancti Oswaldi priorem, cui peccata solitus fuerat confiteri. Hic autem creatus antistes, in ecclesia sedis suæ canonicos posuit regulares, et eam multis honoribus ampliavit." Similarly Chron. Major. ed. Luard, ii. 158. Thos. Stubbs (ed. Twysden, col. 1717) and John Bromton (ed. Twysden, col. 1019) also refer to the event in ann. 1133.

as Prior of Nostell or Prior of S. Oswald, and not as Prior of Carlisle. One important document, among the Duchy of Lancaster Records¹, is an exception, and speaks of Adelwald as being Prior of the Church of Carlisle at the time of his consecration. It is a return made Sept. 17th, 1343, by the Prior and Chapter of the Cathedral Church of Carlisle in reply to an inquiry of the Prior and Convent of Coningesheved in Lancashire, after a careful inspection of their chronicles and other evidences. This testimony should perhaps be received with some little suspicion. Even if Athelwold were Prior of Carlisle for a time before the foundation of the See, he could scarcely have occupied the position for 31 years and then be spoken of habitually as Prior of Nostell. Burton quotes a statement which, if correct, would explain the fact of Athelwold always being spoken of as Prior of Nostell². He says that Athelwold founded the Cathedral in Carlisle for Canons of his own order, which Pope Calixtus II.³ granted him the privilege of holding along with his Priory of Nostell for his life, but that it should cease at his death. Thus, although Prior of Carlisle, the better known title would be used, especially by the Yorkshire historians. It is worthy of note that the charter of Bishop Athelwold (Chart. Whitby, i. 38) confirming the Church of Crosby Ravensworth to the Abbey of Whitby is addressed to Elyas Archdeacon and the Chapter of S. Mary, but does not mention any Prior of Carlisle, yet we find that Walter was Prior in 1150 and attested the Foundation Charter of Holm Cultram with Bishop Adulph (Illustrative Doc. xxiv.). Hence it is quite possible that Athelwold, while holding the Priory of Nostell, may have gone to found or to confirm the Priory of Carlisle; and, when the See of Carlisle was founded in 1133, he may have joined, at all events for a time, the offices of Prior and Bishop of Carlisle with that of Prior of Nostell. This is supported by the fact that Savardus, the next Prior of Nostell, was appointed about the time of the death of Athelwold in 1156.

Let us now turn to the reputed founder of the Priory of Carlisle, Henry I. In the first year of his reign, on November 1117, 1100, he married the Princess Eadgyth, or Matilda, the daughter of Malcolm Ceanmor, King of Scots, and the "good Queen Margaret." The nominal Scottish Chronicler, perhaps naturally, spends a good deal of time in recounting the pious deeds of Queen Margaret and of her daughter. But he is in error when he gives Queen Matilda credit for persuading King Henry to place Regular Canons in Carlisle in 1102. Indeed, as Bishop Tanner says referring to another event, "this is not the only mistake he has made with regard to our English affairs." No doubt there was much communication between the English and Scottish Courts in the early years of Henry's reign. He was, however, at that time far too much occupied in the southern part of his kingdom to trouble himself about the ecclesiastical affairs of a northern border town, which ten years before had been for two centuries an uninhabited heap of ruins¹. Matilda had been, till the time of her marriage, in the Benedictine Abbey of Ramsey, in Hampshire. Her sympathies would not be with the new foreign order of Augustinian Canons, even if at that time she had ever heard of them.

¹ The following are some of the authorities.—Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, in ann. 1092 (ed. B. Thorpe, i. 359, trans.): "In this year King William, with a large force, went north to Cardeol, and restored the town and raised the castle, and drove out Dolfín, who previously had ruled the land there, and garrisoned the castle with his own men, and then returned south hither. And very many country folk, with wives and with cattle, he sent thither, there to dwell and to till the land." Simeon of Durham, Hist. Regum, ed. T. Arnold, ii. 220: "His actis Rex in Northimbriam profectus civitatem quæ Britannice Cairleil, Latine Lugubalia vocatur restauravit, et in ea castellum ædificavit. Hæc enim civitas, ut illis in partibus aliæ nonnullæ, a Danis paganis ante c. annos diruta, et usque ad id tempus mansit deserta." Florence of Worcester (ed. B. Thorpe, ii. 30) uses the same words, probably the original statement; and Roger de Hoveden (ed. Stubbs, i. 145) and Ralph de Diceto (ed. Stubbs, i. 217) copy from Simeon. The Annals of Waverley, in ann. 1092, here copy from the A.-S. Chronicle, the variations are to be noted: "Rex Willelmus ivit in Nord apud Cardeol, et burgum ædificavit, et castellum incepit, et Dolfinum fugavit, cujus terra illa fuit; et misit homines suos in castello, et postea reversus est Sud, et misit illuc multos villanos cum uxoribus et animalibus suis, ut in illa terra manerent."—Annal. Monastici, ed. Luard, ii. 202. Henry of Huntingdon writes (ed. T. Arnold, p. 216): "Succedente anno (1092) Rex reædificavit civitatem Carleol, et ex australibus Angliæ partibus illuc habitatores transmisit."

With the advent of the famous Thurstin, Archbishop of York, began a great increase of religious activity in the North of England. Though elected and enthroned at York, in 1114, he was not consecrated until October 19th, 1119. Thurstin, after many differences with the King, at length arrived at York, early in 1121, with his strong friendship and approval. The next year, in October, 1122, the King himself went down into the north. He turned aside from York, as Simeon of Durham tells us¹, towards the western sea, and having inspected the ancient city of Carleol, ordered it to be fortified with a castle and towers, giving money for that purpose. He then returned to York. We can scarcely doubt, when all things are considered, it was after this visit that Henry I., at the instigation of Thurstin, founded the Priory of Regular Canons at Carlisle. He made a grant by charter to S. Mary of Carlisle and the Canons there of the Churches of Newcastle-on-Tyne and Newburn, and the Churches then held by Richard de Aurea Valle on his death. Richard was his Chaplain; and the Churches were Warkworth, Corbridge, Whittingham, and Rothbury, all in Northumberland. From the charters², we gather that the grant to the Chaplain was made before January 10th, 1123, when one of the witnesses, Robert Bloet, Bishop of Lincoln, died; and the grant to the monastery certainly between 1116 and 1128, two of the witnesses being William de Giffard, Bishop of Winchester, and Bernard, Bishop of S. David's. It is worthy of note that the latter charter is dated from Rouen, where according to Ordericus Vitalis (Bk xii. c. 34) the King went in 1123 to quell the revolt which had broken out in Normandy³. Henry I., as appears from a charter of Henry II., also granted to the monastery, probably at a later date, a mill on the bridge over the river Eden and a fishery therein¹.

The interest felt by Archbishop Thurstin in the new Order is proved by the fact that during his tenure of the See of York at least eight other houses of Augustinian Canons were founded in the north, some of them avowedly at his instigation; and none were founded before his time. These were Hexham, Nostell, Drax, Embsay (afterwards Bolton), Giseburn, Kirkham, Wartre, and Bridlington, probably all before the foundation of the See of Carlisle in 1133. We can well understand Thurstin pressing upon Henry I. in 1122 the claims of Carlisle, which the King had lately visited, and those of his friend Athelwold, the Prior of Nostell, who was also the Confessor of the King. The anxiety of Thurstin to establish his jurisdiction over the Diocese of Glasgow, and the violent opposition at this very time of John, Bishop of Glasgow, may have also been a reason for fixing an ecclesiastical outpost of strong adherents, like these Regular Canons, upon the border. It was certainly one reason for the foundation of the Bishopric of Carlisle a few years later².

There is clear proof that, a little later, works were going on in connection with the Church of Carlisle, including, no doubt, the monastic buildings. In the earliest Pipe Roll extant, ascribed to 31 Henry I. (1130-31), there is the payment by Royal writ to the Canons of S. Mary of Carlisle of £ 10, ad operat. Ecclesie sue, also the remittance to them twice of 37*s.* 4*d.* of the noutgeld, of which more will be said below. The same Pipe Roll contains items of gifts by the King towards the works on the wall and the tower of the city. Coupling this with the statement of Simeon of Durham given above, we see the strong interest felt by the King after his visit to Carlisle in 1122, not only in the fortifications of the city, but in the works of the Canons upon their monastery buildings.

¹ There is a letter from Henry III. to Pope Honorius III. in the Close Rolls (3 Hen. III. m. 11) dated Feb. 17th, 1219, which says that these six Churches "ex concessione bonæ memoriæ Regis Henrici primi in prima fundatione Ecclesiæ Carleolensis eidem collatas fuisse, et in Episcopatu Carleolensi ecclesiam de Penret cum quibusdam aliis, et confirmatum fuit dictæ Carl. Eccles. per cartas Regum Angliæ scilicet predicti Regis Henrici primi et secundi, &c.," and that these had been alienated through the neglect of the Canons when the See was vacant, Bishop Hugh having been lately appointed (see also the Patent Rolls 3 Hen. III. m. 5). There is also a confirmation in the Papal Registers (Calend. ed. Bliss, i. 91) by Pope Honorius III. to Hugh Bishop of Carlisle of the bishopric and parish of Carlisle, dated May 2nd, 1223. The possessions of the See are set out and reference is made to the divisions settled between the Bishop and the Prior and Convent of Carlisle and certain arbitrators, several of whom are well known.

There is another statement which can be traced back as far as John Leland, the antiquary, who about 1540 wandered over England picking up strange traditions. The story was taken up by Bishop F. Godwin with variations, and is followed by Hutchinson, Lysons, and other local historians¹. It is said that Walter, a rich Norman ecclesiastic, who had come to England with the Conqueror, was set over the city by William Rufus, and that he began to build a religious House in honour of the Blessed Virgin Mary; but, Walter dying before his design was completed, Athelwold, Prior of Nostell, spent the wealth left by Walter in finishing the structure, and placed there Regular Canons.

It is possible that a monastery of some kind was commenced here in the rebuilt city before Athelwold had anything to do with Carlisle; but it would be years after the time of William Rufus. There would seem, however, to be some connection between the above tradition and the following fact. We have it on the good authority of the *Testa de Nevill*², that Henry I. gave to one Walter, his Chaplain, Linstoc and Carleton (near Carlisle) at a yearly cornage rent of 37*s.* 4*d.*, that Walter, by permission of the King, took the religious habit in the Priory of Carlisle, and with his consent gave all the aforesaid land to the religious House; and the aforesaid service was pardoned to the religious of that House by Royal charters. But this service of 37*s.* 4*d.* cornage is the exact amount of the noutgeld, or geldum animalium, which we saw, in the Pipe Roll quoted above, was remitted by Royal writ to the Canons of S. Mary of Carlisle. The item appears again long after, in the time of Henry II., in the Pipe Rolls for 1158 and following years. The reference is clearly to the same property¹. Here then we have another instance of the active interest taken by Henry I. about this time in the monastery at Carlisle.

We have seen that there could not have been a foundation of Regular Canons at Carlisle in 1102. It is well to note that the position of affairs in the district points altogether to a later date. Ten years before, in 1092, the Normans under William Rufus had taken possession of the land. The castle, which he had ordered to be built at this important military point, may have been completed. The city, long uninhabited, was being re-peopled, partly by settlers whom the King had sent from the south². Ranulf Meschin, the experienced Norman soldier, was set over the newly acquired district. The sympathies of Ranulf and of his family were with the Benedictine Monks, not the Augustinian Canons. They had been large benefactors to the Abbey of S. Mary at York. He had at once placed a Benedictine Priory, at Wetherhala, 5 miles from Carlisle, close to the great road which led from that city to Appleby³. At his "castle of Appelby," he ruled the district. In 1120 Ranulf succeeded as Earl of Chester. The lordship of the "honor of Carlisle" which he held passed into the hands of the King. And shortly, as we have seen, Henry I. came down from York to look over this part of his kingdom. The time would seem to have been opportune, and the place well fitted, for founding a House of the new order of Regular Canons.

We come therefore to the following conclusions. We have evidence that a House of Regular Canons was founded at

Carlisle by Henry I., not in 1102 but in or about the year 1123; that he acted to a certain extent under the advice of Thurstin, Archbishop of York; also that Athelwold, the friend of Thurstin, and Prior of Nostell, may have been made Prior of Carlisle not many years before his consecration to that new See; that he probably held for a time the two offices together, and may have continued to be also Prior of Nostell until his death in 1156.

The Priory of Carlisle was dedicated to S. Mary—a dedication which the Cathedral Church retained until the refoundation in 1541, and which has led to some confusion. There is not the slightest evidence of the existence at this period, 1123, or for some time after, of the two Carlisle parishes of S. Mary and S. Cuthbert. The circuit of 15 miles granted to S. Cuthbert by King Ecgfrid in 685 (p. 95 note) may have formed roughly an ecclesiastical district with a radius of from 2 to 3 miles; and it may have been worked from the monastery at Caerluel instituted by S. Cuthbert; for the existence of parishes, as now understood, before the 10th century is very doubtful¹. But we know that war and disorder prevailed generally until 875, when Eadred the Abbot fled away² and when the city was destroyed by the Danes and became deserted until 1092. No parishes could therefore be formed until near the date of the foundation of the Priory, when the inhabitants would at first be served from that centre. We cannot gather how long this ministration lasted; but in the 14th century we do find mention of ministers of those parishes. Then they appear as Chaplains, not Vicars, who were appointed by the Priory. We should have expected to hear of such long before. The charter of Henry II. does not mention the parishes or their Churches. However, out of the immediate district two parishes were constituted, probably in the 12th century, and were under the ecclesiastical superintendence of the Priory. A Church was built for the parish of S. Cuthbert. The nave of the Cathedral, a not unfrequent instance, was allowed for a Church of the parish of S. Mary, but their cemetery was the "cemetery of the Canons of S. Mary" and was regulated by the Priory and later by the Dean and Chapter. For the statement that the parish of S. Mary was constituted before the Cathedral, or that the nave, which was used as the parish Church, was independent of the Cathedral, there is no historical foundation, and all the reliable evidence is against it¹.

We may now consider the later history of Bishop Athelwold. In 1120 we find that Bishop Athelulf was witness, with Bishop Nigell of Ely and others, to the famous Charter of Liberties granted by King Stephen (Stubbs, Select Charters, p. 120; Richard of Hexham, ed. J. Raine, i. 74). Bishop Adthelwlfus accompanied Alberic, the Papal Legate, and Robert, Bishop of Hereford, in September, 1138, to Carlisle, where David, King of Scots, was then holding his court (Richard of Hexham, ed. J. Raine, i. 99, and see note 1 on No. 198). Adelulph, Bishop of Carlisle, attended an important council at Winchester in 1143 (W. Thorn, ed. Twysden, col. 1803). He was also one of the minority who voted for Henry Murdac, Abbot of Fountains, to be Archbishop of York, in opposition to the will of the King; and Murdac was consecrated by the Pope in December, 1147 (Chron. Mailros, in ann.; John of Hexham, ed. Raine, i. 155, 158). He was present at the coronation of Henry II. in December, 1154; and he died in 1156, on the morrow of Ascension Day, the second year of Henry II. (Annals of Waverley, vid. Annal. Monastici, ed. Luard, ii. 237; Benedict Abbas, ed. Stubbs, i. 349, who gives the date incorrectly MCLVII). The next year, 1157, the land of Carlisle, which had been held as a fief of the English Crown since 1136, was ceded to Henry II. by Malcolm IV., King of Scots. Bishop Athelwold would thus occupy a difficult position for almost the whole of his episcopate, a suffragan of York and yet his diocese under the rule of a Scottish King. His appointment was at first strongly objected to by John, Bishop of Glasgow; but John of Hexham, in his account of the Council held at Carlisle in 1138, under King David I., says of Alberic, the Papal Legate: "Aldulfum Episcopum in gratiam ejusdem Regis et in sedem suam de Karlel recipi impetravit" (ed. J. Raine, i. 121). A letter is given in Raine's Memorials of Hexham (vol. i. Appendix, p. xii) from Pope Innocent II. to King Stephen, urging him to complete the work of Henry I., and to arrange the affairs of the Diocese of Carlisle. Athelwold, besides being recognized as an English Bishop, is constantly in evidence as discharging the duties of his Diocese. Thus, in addition to the two Confirmations in this Register, we find Adhelwald confirming the Church of Crosseby Ravenswart in Westmoreland to the Monastery of Whitby (Chart. Whitby, ed. Atkinson, i. 38) and as witness to a charter of the liberties of the same Monastery, granted by Henry I. between 1133 and 1135 (i. 214). He also attests the charter granted by Earl Henry to the Abbey of Holm Cultram in 1150 (Illustrative Documents, xxiv.).

APPENDIX C.

THE SANCTUARY OF WETHERHAL.

The bounds of the Sanctuary of Wetherhal were marked by six crosses. One of these, which also stood upon the boundary of the manor, is called, Wederhal Gyrth Crosse or Gryth Crosse, "juxta sicketam de Waryewyke" (No. 236, Illus. Docum. xxx). Gryth, or grith, is the Anglo-Saxon word for "peace," but differs from frith, a general peace—"Grith is immunity from molestation, special frith or localised peace" (Bp Stubbs); it is peace or protection such as was given by the King to official men, also the privilege of sanctuary within a certain space. Hence we have also grithstole, a seat of peace, a sanctuary, grithbreke, a breach of the peace, and grithmen, or girthmen, men who had taken sanctuary and had obtained "grith" or "peace."

The privilege of sanctuary was granted to Wetherhal under the charter of Henry I., and confirmed by later Kings, the same as was enjoyed by the Church of S. Peter in York and S. John in Beverley—"et omnes easdem libertates habeant quas habent istæ duæ Ecclesiæ." These two Churches had liberty of sanctuary granted to them (it is supposed) by King Æthelstan (924—940) though the Revised Charters called Æthelstan's have no authority, but belong to the 13th century (see Dugdale, Monasticon, ii. 129). There is a charter of Henry I. to York about 1110, confirming a deed by Edward the Confessor and granting this liberty (see Illustrative Documents, xxvii.).

Three cases of considerable interest concerning the Sanctuary at Wetherhal came before the justices in 1292. Andrew son of Thomas de Wardwyk' struck one Adam on the head with a stick so that he died on the third day. Andrew at once fled to Wetherhale, and there had peace. The Prior of Wetherhale was called upon to shew quo waranto he claimed this liberty. The Prior and the Abbot of S. Mary's at York appeared and claimed that of old time they had at Wetherhale this liberty infra banlucam to receive any felons who had taken an oath that they would conduct themselves well within the Liberty, and would not go out of it. The jury found that they and their predecessors had had such a custom time out of mind. In the second case, four men, one of them William the prepositus of Wederhale, had killed in the night Robert de Shawyl of Great Corkeby in the fishery at Wederhale within the Liberty. They had been received for six years, but, before the coming of the justices, the survivors had lately fled. The matter was complicated by an informal coroner's inquest which had been held upon the body. In this case it was affirmed that no claim was made to have a coroner within the Liberty, or to receive felons who committed a felony within the Liberty. The jury assented to this, but said that by old custom all felons coming there had been received and, having rung the bell in the Church, and so accepted "peace," dwelt peacefully infra banlucam of the said Liberty, having sworn to conduct themselves well while they remained. In the third case, three men, Richard Gener, John Curur and Clement Sutor, came near the house of Roger son of Martin, and Richard struck Roger's dog, upon which Roger rushed out of his house and stabbed Richard to the heart with his sword. Roger at once fled to the Liberty of the Priory of Wederhale, and dwelt there for some months. The Abbot of S. Mary appeared by his attorney and allowed that the said Roger after the felony came within the Liberty and rang a certain bell in the Church, and swore before the Bailiff of the liberty that he would in future conduct himself well and faithfully; so he was admitted and permitted to remain so long as he did not go outside the bounds of the Liberty. The Abbot claimed that he and his predecessors had used this custom time without mind and without interruption. The jury found to this effect (Illustrative Documents, xxix.).

The bounds of the Sanctuary are set out in the Illustrative Documents (xxx.); also a curious opinion of counsel with regard to the liberties of Wetherhal, but at what date it was given does not appear.

We find that Edward III., on the 15th of July, 1342, empowered Edward Balliol, King of Scots, to take the "grithmen" at Beverley, Ripon, Tynemuth, Hextildesham (Hexham) and Wederhale; and if they would fight in Scotland, they should receive the Royal pardon (see Illustrative Documents, xxviii.).

An account of these sanctuary men at Beverley and Durham, and their offences, will be found in Sanctuarium Dunelmense et Sanctuarium Beverlacense (ed. Surtees Society, vol. 5). There is also an interesting account of a breach of sanctuary with an appeal to the Legate Otho and to the King, with the punishment of the violators in the Annals of Waverley, in ann. 1240 (Annales Monast. ed. Luard, ii. 325).

This liberty of sanctuary does not appear to have been common, if it was not unique, in the district. It has been claimed for the Nunnery of Ermynthwait, or Armathwaite, on the strength of an old stone having been found there with a cross and the word Sanctuarium cut on it (see Hutchinson, Hist. Cumberland, i. 192). The extant charters do not confirm it; and as I have pointed out the charter of William II. to Armathwaite is clearly spurious (see on No. 162). It is singular that in that charter is quoted the latter of two lines from Æthelstan's Revised Charter referred to above :

"And in all thyngges be als free as herte may thynk or eghe may see," which run, as given in the longer Revised Charter :

"Swa mickel freedom give I ye Swa hert may think or eghe see."

This helps to confirm the idea of its fabrication. A sort of claim has also been put forward for a sanctuary at Ravenstonedale in Westmoreland (see Nicolson and Burn, History, i. 520) on the ground of the manor belonging to the Gilbertine Priory of Watton, but there is no real evidence of its existence. At Hexham in Northumberland there was of course a very ancient and famous sanctuary, defined in Prior Richard's History of the Church of Hexham, Bk. ii. c. 14; see Memorials of Hexham, ed. Raine, i. 61.

APPENDIX D.

BERNARD, THE SECOND BISHOP OF CARLISLE.

It is generally affirmed, especially in the local histories, that Bishop Bernard immediately succeeded Athelwold, the first Bishop of Carlisle, who occupied the See from 1133 to 1156. Nothing is stated as to his consecration, but his death is frequently placed in 1186. The very existence of a Bernard, Bishop of Carlisle, has been doubted or denied by modern writers of eminence (see Hardy in Fasti Ecclesiæ, vol. iii. p. 230; Haddan and Stubbs, Eccles. Doc. vol. ii. pp. 34, 48). The error as to his existence arose, it is alleged, from the fact of the temporalities of the See having been given by King John to a Bernard, Archbishop of Slavonia, or Ragusa, early in the 13th century. There is, however, ample evidence of a Bernard, Bishop of Carlisle, who performed many episcopal acts in connection with the Diocese. The questions to be decided are—Did a Bernard, Bishop of Carlisle, ever exist? Was there a second Bernard, living in the 12th century, distinct from the Archbishop of Ragusa? During what period did Bishop Bernard exercise his episcopate? These questions are of no small importance to the history of the Diocese in those early times.

Bishop Athelwold died on the morrow of Ascension Day, 1156 (see page 488). For 20 years the District of Carlisle had been again an appanage of the Scottish crown with an English Bishop exercising jurisdiction in it. The land was reclaimed in 1157 by Henry II., and retained by him. No successor to Athelwold was appointed. We have proof that the Bishopric was vacant for a long period, and that no Bishop Bernard occupied the See. In the Register of Wetheral there is a document (No. 44) concerning a chapel at Corkeby, wherein Robert, Archdeacon of Carlisle, is addressed by Clement, Abbot of S. Mary, York (1161—84), as being the person in authority. Walter, Prior of Carlisle, is one of the witnesses, and the date of the document is almost certainly between 1161 and 1165. In the Chartulary of Whitby (ed. Atkinson, No. xxxvi) there is a confirmation charter of Bernardus Karleolensis Episcopus in regard to the Church of Crosseby Ravenswart (in Westmoreland) to which I shall have again to refer. The point here is that Bishop Bernard speaks in the charter of "Adelwold our predecessor" and Roger, Archbishop of York, as being both dead, also of Robert, Archdeacon of Carlisle, having instituted to the living, under the mandate of Archbishop Roger, "when the See of Carlisle was vacant." Roger de Pont l'Evêque was Archbishop from 1154 to 1181. In the same Chartulary (No. xxxiii) is a confirmation charter of Robert, Archdeacon, which speaks of Bishop Adelwold as dead, and of Robert having given seisin of the Church of Crosseby to the Abbot and monks of Wyteby by direction of Archbishop Roger. The first witness is Walter, Prior of Carlisle. In the Register of Holm Cultram (MS. p. 239) there is a charter of confirmation by Pope Clement III. (1187—91) of grants made to that Abbey. He therein speaks of the grant of the chapel of Flemingby by Gospatric son of Orm, and of an agreement between the Convent and Adam, son of Gospatric, ratified by Robert, Archdeacon, acting as Diocesan, the Bishopric being vacant (Agreement, MS. p. 36). The date of this agreement would be between 1170 and 1180. The same Archdeacon and Prior are witnesses to the Foundation Charter of Lanercost, about 1169, as the names of the other witnesses seem to shew (Illustrative Documents, xxii.). This is an important point. It is generally stated that the Priory of Lanercost was dedicated in 1169 by Bishop Bernard in the 12th year of his Episcopate. The reference given is to the 1st edition of Dugdale's Monasticon. This would seem to prove that Bishop Bernard filled the Bishopric at that time. By this many have been led astray. Dugdale gives as his authority the Register of Lanercost in the possession of Lord William Howard at Naworth.

Of this Register an old Transcript is now in the possession of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. The statement there is as follows, in the same hand as the Transcript—"Anno ab incarnatione Domini 1169, 16 H. 2, dedicata fuit ista Ecclesia a Domino Bernardo Episcopo Carl. anno Pontificatus ejusdem xii^o." But this is only a marginal note, due to the invention of the writer, who took the death of Athelwold as his starting point. The first witness to the charter is Cristian, Bishop of Candida Casa, a natural position if he were engaged in episcopal matters connected with the district of Carlisle, though he had no episcopal jurisdiction there. This appears to have been the case (see note 9 on No. 38). It would be difficult to understand the part he played in the Diocese, if Bernard or any other person were Bishop of Carlisle. The matter is quite simple, if he were acting for the Archbishop of York and the See were vacant at the time.

We learn from the Chronicles of Benedict Abbas and of Roger de Hoveden, that when Henry II. was at Carlisle in 1186, he granted the petition of the Canons Regular of the Church of S. Mary to be allowed to elect a Bishop. They chose Paulinus de Ledes, Master of the Hospital of S. Leonard at York. Paulinus refused the bishopric, although the King offered to add 300 marcs annually to the endowment from certain rents which he named from the Church of Bamburg, the Church of Scartheburg (Scarborough), the chapel of Tikehil and two manors of the King near Carlisle (Rog. de Hoveden, ii. 309). From this statement Bishop F. Godwin (De Præsul. Angl. p. 145) concluded that Bishop Bernard must have died about this date, 1186, and he has been followed by too many writers. Benedict, indeed, goes on to say that the election was received with great satisfaction, for the See of Carlisle had been vacant nearly 29 years (elsewhere "nearly 30 years") from the death of Adelwold the first Bishop (see Benedict Abbas, ed. Stubbs, i. 344, 349, 360).

The Pipe Rolls prove that the See was vacant and the revenues were in the hands of the King in the years 1187 and 1188 (Cumberland, 33 and 34 Hen. II.). The Sheriff renders a most interesting account of receipts from the Bishopric and of payments made by him, partly for oil for the Sacrament at Easter, and partly for works on the Cathedral and the Priory buildings. His receipts were from the Churches of Dalston, Carleton and Meleburn (Derbyshire) and the School of Carlisle. There is no similar account beyond these two years; and if the revenues were collected for the King, they were not accounted for by the Sheriff.

The attempt to fill the Bishopric failed, and the death of Henry II. in July 1189 probably led to the abandonment of all efforts in this direction. There were ecclesiastical difficulties in the reign of King Richard, especially those connected with the Archbishopric of York, which would no doubt stand in the way, besides the poverty of the See.

We pass on, and we still find that there is no Bishop of Carlisle. Two charters in the Register of Wetheral (Nos. 120, 123) are granted by Peter de Ros, Archdeacon of Carlisle, as "Custos Episcopatus," during the vacancy of the See. From the names in these charters it is clear that their date must be between 1180 and 1192. In 1196 Aumeric de Taillebois was Archdeacon, and certainly confirmed Churches and vicarages; and he held this Archdeaconry until 1203. From a confirmation charter by him in the Register of Lanercost (MS. viii. 2) of Churches belonging to that Priory, it is evident that there was no Bishop of Carlisle at the time.

Again, it admits of no doubt that the See was vacant in the year 1200, and the temporalities in the King's hand. In the Charter Rolls for that year there is the record—"Dominus Rex concessit Archiepis. Sclavoniæ Episcopatum Carleoli ad se sustentandum donec Dominus Rex ei in ampliori beneficio providerit" (Rot. Cart. 2 Joh. m. 35 d, ed. Hardy, p. 96 b). This grant was not carried out, for we find in the Patent Rolls for 1202 that the King commands the Bishop of Coventry to admit and institute Henry de Duly, chaplain to Hugh Bardulf, to the Church of Meleburn (in Derbyshire) "vacant and in our gift from the Bishopric of Carlisle being in our hands" (Rot. Pat. 3 Joh. m. 4, Rec. Com. i. 7 a, dated March 18). The next year, June 8th, 1203, he granted "Episcopatum de Carleol." (apparently only the temporalities) to Alexander de Lucy, and the Archdeaconry of Carlisle on the 18th of November following (Rot. Pat. 5 Joh. m. 9, m. 5, Rec. Com. i. 30 b, 35 b). But in answer to a pressing letter from Pope Innocent III., dated May 15th, 1203, on behalf of the Archbishop of Ragusa, the King gave him the Bishopric of Carlisle on January 10th, 1204. The Archbishop of Ragusa, or Sclavonia, was consecrated at Rome, November 19th, 1189 (Bp Stubbs, quoting Farlati, Illyricum Sacrum, vi. 83)¹. We learn from the Patent Roll, where the above letter is cited (Rot. Pat. 5 Joh. m. 4, Rec. Com. i. 37 b) that he had been absolved by the Pope from the care of the Church at Ragusa, as he could only live there at the risk of his life. The Pope begged King John to give him for the relief of his poverty the Bishopric of Carlisle, to which the Archbishop of York might collate him, and the Church of Meleburne (in Derbyshire). The Patent is addressed by the King to Geoffrey, Archbishop of York, commanding him to attend to this matter, as he had granted the Bishopric of Carlisle to the Archbishop of Ragusa (not by the Pope's authority) de munificentia et liberalitate Regia. Here then we have the distinct appointment of Bishop Bernard to Carlisle. This is further confirmed. In the Close Rolls (7 Joh. m. 13, Rec. Com. i. 52 b) under date March 23rd, 1205, there is an order from the King to W. Treasurer, to pay B. Bishop of Carlisle 20 marcs annually, the Church of Meleburne to remain to the said Bishop. Also we find in the Patent Rolls (9 Joh. m. 5, Rec. Com. i. 76)—“To the Barons of the Exchequer. We have given to our Venerable Father, Bernard, Bishop of Carlisle, 20 marcs yearly from our Exchequer as long as he lives.” On July 8th, 1214, the custody of the Bishopric of Carlisle was given to Aymeric (de Taillebois) Archdeacon of Durham (and Carlisle) who is mentioned above (Rot. Pat. 16 Joh. m. 15, Rec. Com. i. 118). At this time, therefore, Bishop Bernard must have been dead or have resigned the See. On May 26th, 1215 (it should be noted that May 26 occurs twice in the 16th year of King John), the custody was given to the Prior of Carlisle during pleasure (Rot. Pat. 16 Joh. m. 1, Rec. Com. i. 138 b); and on May 27th and May 31st letters were sent to Gerard de Rodes, also to all holding benefices in the Diocese, announcing that the Bishopric was vacant and the custody granted to the Prior of Carlisle (Rot. Pat. 16 Joh. m. 24, Rec. Com. i. 142 a; 17 Joh. i. 142 b). The vacancy continued until August 1st, 1218, when Henry III. gave his assent to the election of Hugh, Abbot of Beaulieu (de Bello Loco) in Hampshire (not in Burgundy as Chron. de Lanercost, p. 27, see Dugdale, Monasticon, v. 560). Bishop Hugh was consecrated at York on February 24th, 1218—19; and orders were sent to the Sheriff of Cumberland to give seisin to the Elect of Carlisle of lands and tenements belonging to the Bishopric, such as Bernard, Archbishop of Slavonia, formerly Custos of the said Bishopric had (Close Rolls, 2 Hen. III. m. 2, Rec. Com. i. 369 b). We have therefore, from January 10th, 1204, to July 8th, 1214, a period of about 10 years during which Bernard, Archbishop of Slavonia, may have been, and during part of which he certainly was, Bishop of Carlisle. He not only held the temporalities of the See, but we have abundant evidence that he exercised episcopal functions in the Diocese. Of the numerous charters and documents in which his name occurs, all fall within this period.

The following may be quoted:—

(1) In the Register of Wetherhal (No. 17) “B[ernardus] Dei gratia Karliolensis Episcopus” confirms to the Abbey of S. Mary, York, all the Churches and ecclesiastical benefices in the Diocese of Carlisle belonging to them.

(2) The next charter (No. 18) is a confirmation by Pope Honorius III., dated April 8th, 1226, of the concessions made to the Abbey of S. Mary, York, by Athelwold and Bernard, Bishops of Carlisle, of whom he speaks as being dead.

(3) No. 25 is a Bull of Pope Gregory IX., dated March 14th, 1239, concerning the Churches of S. Michael and S. Lawrence, Appleby, in which he speaks of B[ernard] and H[ugh], Bishops of Carlisle to whom the right of institution belonged, both now dead.

(4) There is an interesting series of charters in the same Register about the Church of Nether Denton, in Cumberland. A controversy having arisen concerning this Church between the Monks of Wederhal and the Canons of Lanercost, they entered into an important Composition (No. 119). Among the names which appear in the document are those of men well known in the history of this period (see the notes there). From these names, the date of the Composition must be from 1198 to 1214. But there is a confirmation (No. 117) of this Composition by Bernard, Bishop of Carlisle, with the assent of his Chapter; among the witnesses are those who can be proved to have lived in the first few years of the century.

(5) The next charter (No. 118) is a confirmation by Bishop Hugh (1218—23) of this concession to the Houses of Wederhale and Lanercost made by his predecessor B[ernard], formerly Bishop of Carlisle.

(6) We then have (No. 122) the assent of Chapter, referred to above, or confirmation of John, Prior and the Convent of S. Mary, Carlisle, of the concession made by "B. Episcopus noster" to the Convent of S. Mary, York, and the Houses of Wederhal and Lanercost concerning the Church of Denton "as is more fully contained in the instrument of the same which our Bishop executed in this matter."

(7) In the Register of Lanercost (MS. viii. 3) there is a confirmation charter of "B[ernardus] Karleolensis Episcopus." Among the witnesses are John, Prior of Carlisle, and Alexander de Daker, whose names appear in the charter of Bishop Bernard in the Register of Wetherhal.

(8) The next charter (MS. viii. 4) is the confirmation by the Prior and Convent of Carlisle of the above concession of "Venerabilis Pater noster B[ernardus], Karleolensis Episcopus," the witnesses being nearly the same, including John, the Prior of Carlisle.

(9) There is in the same Register (MS. xiv. 21) the confirmation by Odard, son of Adam (de Wigton, died 1208—9), of a grant of land in Ulveton to the Canons of Lanercost. The first witness is "Dominus Bernardus, Karliolen. Episcopus"; another witness, among several of the period, is Walter Beinin, who often appears about this time and in the Pipe Rolls as late as 1214.

(10) In the Chartulary of Whitby (ed. Atkinson, No. xxxv) "Bernardus, Karleolensis Episcopus" confirms to the Monks of

S. Peter and S. Hylda of Wyteby the Church of Crosseby Ravenswart (in Westmoreland). The first witnesses are Symon, Dean of York, and Hamund (or Hamo), Treasurer of York, witnesses to the Composition (No. 119) referred to above. Another witness is Laurence, Prior of Gyseburne, who occurs in 1211.

(11) and (12) The two next charters (Nos. xxxvi, xxxvii) are similar confirmations by Bishop Bernard about the same time and with nearly the same witnesses.

(13) Then follows (No. xxxviii) a charter which speaks of "Venerabilis Pater noster Bernardus Karliol. Episcopus" as being then dead. It is a confirmation by H. the Prior and the Convent of Carlisle of Bishop Bernard's concession of the Church of Crosseby Ravenswart referred to above. H. the Prior is probably Henry de Mariscis, who became Prior in 1214 (Chronicon de Lanercost, p. 14).

(14) Another charter in the same Chartulary (No. cclxx) is the confirmation of the Church of Engleby in Cleveland to the same monastery by Gaufrid, Archbishop of York (1191—1207). The first witness is B[ernard], Bishop of Carlisle.

(15) There is also an Inspeximus (No. cccxiii) by Radulf Irton, Bishop of Carlisle, dated 1281, recapitulating the several grants and confirmations referring to the Church of Crosseby, among which, in full, is that of "Bernard our predecessor" quoted above.

(16) In the Register of Holm Cultram (Dean and Chapter MS. p. 14) there is a confirmation by B[ernard], Bishop of Carlisle, of the grant by Hugh de Morevilla of the Church of Burgo. The only witness given is Thomas, Prior of Wederhall. Hugh de Morevilla died in 1202—3, and his grant (MS. p. 13) is attested by Thomas, son of Gospatric, who died in 1201 (p. 390*n.*), and Thomas de Brumefeld who is witness to the first charter of Bishop Bernard mentioned above (No. 17).

(17) Another confirmation of the same grant (Harleian MS. p. 304) by B[ernard], Bishop, is also given, in somewhat different terms and with no witnesses.

(18) In the Register of Archbishop Walter Gray there is the confirmation (No. ccxlviii. ed. J. Raine, p. 58) in the year 1233 of the grants made by B., H. and W., Bishops of Carlisle, to the Abbey of Fountains, of the Church of Crosthwayt (in Cumberland). These are evidently Bernard, Hugh and Walter, successive Bishops of Carlisle, Bishop Walter being then alive. Although these confirmation grants of the Bishops have not been found, we have the copy of the original grant of this Church to the Abbey (MSS. Cotton, Tiberius C. xii. p. 97) by "Alicia de Rumely, daughter of William, son of Dunecann." This grant she makes "in mea viduitate et ligia potestate." This was her first widowhood in the years 1193 to 1196, as is shown by the grant being confirmed with others in a charter of Richard I. (Dugdale, Monasticon, No. lxxvi. vol. v. p. 310), who died in April, 1199.

(19) There is a deed of the institution, by Gaufrid, Archbishop of York (1191—1207) of Robert de Langar, Clerk, to the Church of Langar, Notts. This is given in Raine's edition of Archbishop Gray's Register (p. 73 n.). The first witness is B[ernard], Bishop of Carlisle, others of the witnesses also belong to this period.

(20) Among the Duchy of Lancaster Records (Box A. No. 393) there is the original deed of Confirmation by B[ernard], Bishop of Carlisle, of a grant by Anselm de Furness to the House of the Blessed Mary which he founded between Castlerig and the water which is called Lauther. Anselm de Furness appears in the Pipe Rolls for Westmoreland in 1198; he also attests a confirmation by Robert de Veteriponte, dated April 24th, 1211, of the grants of Thomas, son of Gospatric and his son Thomas to the Abbey of Heppe (Shap). His daughter Helena married Ralph D'Aincourt. There is no date, and there are no witnesses to the confirmation of Bishop Bernard; but his seal is appended, bearing the legend—BERNARDUS: DEI: GRACIA: CARLEOLENSIS: EPISC: (Illustrative Documents, XXI.).

(21) Among the same Records (Box A. No. 416) there is a document dated September 17th, 1343—a return of the Prior and Chapter of Carlisle (Illustrative Documents, XX.). They state among other things: "Cui quidem Adelwaldo postea immediate successit Bernardus, et post Bernardum, Hugo."

(22) Bishop Nicolson says in his Manuscript Collections (vol. iii. p. 127; vol. ii. pp. 379, 402, 487) that it appears from original grants in his possession Bishop Bernard confirmed the grant of the Rectory of Shap, or Heppe, and certain lands, to the Abbey of Heppe, made by Thomas, son of Gospatric, the Founder. This Thomas died in 1201. He names some of the witnesses to the confirmation, among them John de Hardcla, parson of Moreton (Long Marton in Westmoreland), who is also witness to the charter of Robert de Veteriponte in 1211 referred to above on No. (20). These original documents of Bp Nicolson's are not forthcoming.

(23) and (24) Two similar charters of Alicia de Rumely, daughter of William, son of Duncan, are given by Dugdale (Monasticon, vi. 271), in which she grants in her widowhood the Churches of Bridekirke and Derehame in Alredale (Cumberland) to the Church of S. Mary of Gyseburne and the Canons there. The former is given more fully from the Dodsworth MSS. in the Chartulary of Gyseburne (ed. W. Brown, ii. 319). The first witness is B[ernard] then Bishop of Carlisle. This was in her second widowhood; for her two husbands Gilbert Pipard and Robert de Curtenay are mentioned. The former died in 1193, the latter in 1209—10: and she appears as a widow in the Pipe Rolls for Cumberland in 1210. The date of the charters therefore lies between 1210 and July 1214, when we know that the See was vacant. Other witnesses are J. (John de Ebor), Abbot of Fountains 1203 to 1211, Alexander de Dacre, Adam de Aspatric, Dean of Alredale and others of the period.

(25) and (26). Among the Regesta of Pope Honorius III. are two confirmations to the Prior and Canons of Giseburn, under date April 27th, 1218, of the grants to them of the Churches of Bridekirke and Deram in the Diocese of Carlisle made by B[ernard] sometime Bishop of Ragusa, when Bishop of Carlisle, with the assent of his Chapter and the consent of A[licia] the patron (Calendar of Papal Registers, ed. W. H. Bliss, i. 54). These Papal Letters are important as proving the identity of the Archbishop of Ragusa with Bernard, Bishop of Carlisle, who confirmed grants made in that Diocese. They also shew that he issued deeds of confirmation of the two charters, No. (23) and No. (24) mentioned above, to which he was also witness.

(27) In an Inquisition held at Carlisle in January, 1328—29 (Inquis. ad quod damnnum, 2 Edw. III. No. 3), it was shewn that the Church of Arturethe (Arthuret) was granted to the convent of Geddeworthe (Jedburgh) in Scotland by Turgis de Russedale, Lord of the manor of Lydale, and appropriated with the consent of Lord Bernard, second Bishop of Carlisle, and his Chapter.

We see from this long series of documents that Bishop Bernard, formerly Archbishop of Ragusa, discharged episcopal functions in his own right in the Diocese of Carlisle. He was recognised as Bishop of Carlisle by the Prior and Chapter, by Popes, and by his successors in the See, and as being of equal authority with his predecessor Bishop Athelwold and his successor Bishop Hugh. He was also recognised as Bishop of Carlisle in the Diocese of York. It is clear from some of those deeds in which his name appears that he must have been collated in 1204, soon after the Letters Patent were issued; and from others that he retained the Bishopric for some years, probably until very nearly the time of the vacancy which is noted in July, 1214. No evidence is yet forthcoming as to whether he vacated the office by death, or resignation, or deprivation.

It seems therefore to admit of no doubt that Bernard was not Bishop of Carlisle in the 12th century, but that he filled the See in the reign of King John, probably from 1204 to 1214.

APPENDIX E.

THE PRIORS OF WETHERHAL.

1. Richard de Reme is said by Leland to have been the first Prior of Wetherhal ("primus inter Priores ibi numeratus," Collectanea i. p. 25). Todd also says, "Primus qui Prioratui præfuit erat Richardus temp. Willi. II." (Notitia, MS.). Leland gives no authority and is not reliable. Todd puts Reg. Wed. in the margin, but as there is no such statement in the Register of Wetherhal, no reliance is to be placed upon him.

2. Radulph, Prior of Wederhale, occurs in a Concession in the Register of Wetherhal (No. 72) of some land and wood by Hildred de Carlel, from the names of the many witnesses about 1130.

3. Thomas, Prior of Wederhall, is witness to a charter, in the Register of Holm Cultram (MS. p. 14) of Bernard, Bishop of Carlisle, between 1204 and 1214, confirming the grant by Hugo de Morvilla of the Church of Burgo (Burgh) to the Abbey of Holm Cultram.

4. Suffred, Prior of Wederhala, is witness to a Charter in the Chartulary of Whitby (ed. Atkinson, No. xxxix) of Hugh, Bishop of Carlisle, between 1218 and 1223, confirming the Church of Crosseby Ravenswart to the Abbot and Monks of Wyteby. This Charter is also quoted in an Inspeximus of the Official of the court of York (No. cccxiii) dated 1281. In the Register of Lanercost (MS. viii. 8), S. Prior of Wedderhall is a witness to the Assent of the Prior and Convent of Carlisle to the Confirmation by Bishop Hugh of certain Churches to the Prior and Convent of Lanercost. The said Confirmation (MS. viii. 7) is witnessed by G. Prior of Wederhal, an evident error of the copyist for S., the other witnesses being identical in the two documents.

5. William Rundel, Prior of Wederhal, is witness to a Charter of Nicholas Legat in the Register of Wetherhal (No. 212) concerning certain land in Morland. The Charter refers to Walter, Bishop of Carlisle; and its date must be between 1223 and 1239 when this William Rundel, or Runndele, was made Abbot of S. Mary's, York. As Abbot of S. Mary's, he appears in a Final Concord in the same Register (No. 226) dated November 8th, 1241. He died November 29th, 1244 (Dugdale, Monasticon iii. 538). W. Prior of Wederhal appears as Proctor in a Form of Peace (No. 225) entered into between the Convent of S. Mary's, York, and the Burgesses of Appelby, dated October 2nd, 1225; also in two Agreements (Nos. 46, 210) the same W. is found, and William in a third (No. 116); all clearly about the same period. In the Register of Lanercost (MS. ii. 21) William, Prior of Wederhal, is witness to a Charter of Rolland de Vallibus together with Bishop Walter and several of the witnesses to the first Charter (No. 212) referred to above.

6. Thomas, Prior of Wederhal, is party to a Convention with Alan faber of Gringeldic in the Register of Wetherhal (No. 171) dated Pentecost, 1241. This cannot be the same with Thomas de Wymondham (see below) as two Priors clearly came between.

7. Richard de Rotomago (Rouen), Prior of Wederhal, is witness to a charter of Beatrix, widow of Robert de Neuby, in the Register of Wetherhal (No. 87) concerning her land at Wederhal. From the names, the date is evidently about 1250 or a few years later. Richard, Prior of Wederhal, occurs in an Assignment by Bishop Silvester (de Everdon) of a taxation of the Church of S. Laurence, Appleby, for the Vicar of the same, dated January 25th, 1251 (see Illustrative Documents, x.).

8. Henry de Tutesbiri (Tutbury, Staffordshire), Prior of Wederhal, is party to a Convention with John Spendlime in the Register of Wetherhal (No. 66) concerning some land at Wederhal, dated November 11th, 1257. Henry, Prior of Wederhal, also occurs in a Charter of Adam son of Roger de Karliol in the same Register (No. 76) and about the same date.

9. Thomas de Wymundham, Prior of Wederhal, is party to a Convention with Symon, Master of the Hospital of S. Nicholas, near Carlisle, in the Register of Wetherhal (No. 96) dated Monday before Ash Wednesday 1270. The Assize Rolls for Cumberland (see Illustrative Documents, xxix. 2) shew that in November, 1292, Thomas de Wymundham had been not long dead, that he had been Prior of Wederhale for the six previous years, and had been succeeded by William de Tannefeld.

10. William de Tanefeld, Prior of Wederhal, is a party to a Convention with Lady Idonea de Layburn, in the Register of Wetherhal (No. 230) concerning a pasture near Appleby, dated November 11th, 1292. From the note on the preceding Prior, we see that he had not been long appointed. At an ordination held at Hautwysell (hodie Haltwhistle) on December 18th, 1293, W. Prior of Wederhale, presented William de Morlund, the Bishop of Carlisle ordaining vice the Bishop of Durham (Register of Bp Halton, MS. p. 12). In the same Bishop's Register (p. 7 b) there is the following: "Memorandum, quod xv Kal. Aprilis A.D. MCCC tercio (March 18th, 1303) admissus fuit Dominus Will. de Tanefeld ad Prioratum de Wederhal et commissa fuit (eidem) cura ecclesiarum parochialium pertinentium ad Prioratum antedictum." There seems to be an error here as to the date or more probably the name, as at this time John de Gilling was Prior (see below). It would appear that W. de Tanefeld had resigned the office, but there is no record of the date of his resignation or when John de Gilling succeeded. As Abbot of S. Mary's, York, the latter nominated William de Tanefeld as his proctor to attend the Parliament held in Carlisle on the Octave of St Hilary, 35 Edward I. (January 20th, 1307) and calls him "Fratrem Will. de Tanefeld monachum meum" not "Priorem" (The Parliamentary Writs, ed. Sir F. Palgrave, vol. i. p. 186: Rolls of Parliament, Record Com. vol. i. p. 188). William de Tainfelde, formerly monk of S. Mary's, York, and Prior of Wederhall, was appointed Prior of Durham by Papal provision, dated February 22nd, 1308 (Papal Registers, ed. W. H. Bliss, ii. 40) and installed September 14th, on the Feast of S. Cuthbert. Durham was also a Benedictine convent. A contemporary writer, Robert de Graystones, who was also Sub-Prior, asserts that the collation was purchased for 3000 marcs to the Pope and 1000 marcs to the Cardinals. He thus describes William de Tanefelde—"Erat statura procerus, vultu decorus, moribus placidus, sumptibus largus, sed in providendo minus sciens. Lætabatur in magnitudine familiæ, in multitudine et frequentia conviventium; et unde talia sustineret non satis provide cogitabat." Two of the Durham monks formally waited on him at Wetherhal begging him to accept the provision. He is spoken of as if he were then the Prior of Wetherhal, though John de Thorp had been nominated to the office after the promotion of John de Gilling to be Abbot of S. Mary's. The large sums mentioned above had to be found by the Priory. These with other debts seriously impoverished them, and they had to have recourse to the money-lenders. The whole account gives a good idea of the rapacity of the Papal Court. The new Prior was not one to consider the poverty of the House "sed sumptibus excessivis debita domus auxit potius quam diminuit" (Hist. Dunelm. Scriptores Tres, Surtees Soc. vol. 9, pp. 85—89).

William de Tanefeld resigned the Priory of Durham in 1313; and is said to have died in February, 1342 (Dugdale, Monasticon, i. 230), but so late a date seems improbable. In the Registrum Palatinum Dunelmense (ed. Hardy, i. 355, 361 seq.) there is given the petition of the Sub-Prior and Convent of Durham to elect a Prior in place of William de Tanefeld, their late Prior, who had resigned; it is dated June 14th, 1313; also the form of resignation and the provision made (the cell of Jarrow and other property) for him on account of his age and infirmities. In the Depositions of the Court of Durham (Surtees Society, vol. 21, p. 9), also in the Registrum Palatinum (i. 476), there is a Licence to William de Tanefeld, late Prior of Durham, "declinans in senectam et senium," to be excused fasting at Advent, dated December 2nd, 1314.

11. John de Gilling, or Gylling, Prior of Wederhal, was made Abbot of S. Mary's, York, and received the temporalities, August 19th, 1303; he died May 24th, 1313 (Dugdale, Monasticon, iii. 538). In an Inquisition made in 1326, we find it stated—"Rogerus de Bello Loco dicit quod Dominus Johannes de Gilling dudum Prior de Wederhal et post Abbas de Ebor. &c." (see Illustrative Doc. XII.).

12. John de Thorp was nominated to be Prior of Wederhal on November 10th, 1303, by J. (John de Gilling) Abbot of S. Mary's, York, in the following form:—

“Venerabili in Christo Patri ac Dño suo semper reverendo, Dño J. Eþo Karliol. suus devotissimus J. permissione Divina Abbas Monasterii beate Marie Ebor. Salutem cum omni reverentia et honore tam debitis quam devotis. Quia Prioratus Celle nostre de Wederhal cujus nuper Prior existimus (sic) vestre Diocesis per creationem vestram in Abbatem dicti Monasterii jam vacat ne Cella predicta in spiritualibus et temporalibus per defectum regiminis ulterius detrimentum patiatur, dilectum nobis in Christo fratrem J. de Thorp nostri monasterii commonachum quem ad regimen dicti prioratus idoneum reputamus, vobis in Priorem dicti loci tenore presentium presentamus; devote supplicantes quatinus ipsum in Priorem dicti loci sine difficultate velitis admittere, secundum formam compositionis ultimo inita inter vestros et nostros predecessores, ac ulterius exercere circa eum, cum gratia et favore, quod vestrum fuerit in hac parte. Vos ad regimen Ecclesiæ sue conservet Deus in prosperitate jocunda per tempora diuturna. Dat. Ebor. iij Id. Novembris A.D. mccciii” (Register of Bp Halton, MS. p. 73).

The Composition here spoken of is that entered into with Bishop Chause in 1266 and given in the Register, No. 34.

13. Robert de Gyseburgh was appointed to the Priory of Wetherhal by Papal provision in 1309, but John de Thorp, as we see above, being nominated by the Abbot of S. Mary's, York, was already in possession and opposed him. Writs from the King to the Bishop followed, prohibiting John de Thorp from obeying any Papal mandate until the matter should have been heard in the King's Court. John de Thorp appears to have resigned, for in 1313 we find Robert, Prior of Wederhal, was in possession. Prior Robert would seem to have been early familiar with debt. In April, 1309, he obtained a licence from the Pope to contract a loan of 2000 gold florins to meet his expenses at the Apostolic See. A mandate was issued in March, 1312, by the Pope to warn Robert de Giseburn, Prior, and the Convent of Wederhale “who have been allowed to contract a loan up to the amount of 2000 florins and have borrowed from a firm of Florentine merchants a sum of 100 marcs, to repay the same" (Papal Registers, ed. W. H. Bliss, ii. 53, 94.) In 1313 Prior Robert was excommunicated, and the Convent was put under a Papal interdict for not paying the 100 marcs to certain merchants of Florence; Robert then resigned (see Illustrative Documents, ix. and Register of Bp Halton, MS. pp. 125, 131, 168).

14. Gilbert de Bothil was instituted Prior of Wederhal on March 22nd, 1313, on the resignation of Robert de Gyseburgh. Upon him was also laid the above debt of 100 marcs with interest and expenses amounting to another 100 marcs. He was called to the office of Prior of S. Mary's, York, in 1318 (Register of Bp Halton, MS. pp. 168, 214).

15. Adam de Dalton, monk of S. Mary's, York, was presented by the Abbot to the Priory of Wederhal in 1318 (Register of Bp Halton, MS. p. 214). Dugdale (Monasticon, iii. 581) gives a reference to Harleian MSS. 6971, fol. 165 (Ex Registro penes Dec. Capit. Ebor. R.). There he is said to be Prior de Wederhale in 1340. In 1341 he seems to have been engaged in a great controversy with the Chapter of York (see Register of Bp Kirkby, MS. pp. 421, 422), and in the same year to have died or resigned.

16. On November 19th, 1341, William de Tanfeld, a second evidently of the name, was admitted into the Priory of Wederhal (Regist. of Bishop Kirkby, MS. p. 428). This cannot be the same as William de Tanefeld who became Prior of Durham. We saw the latter was an old man broken with infirmity 28 years before. He had received a valuable pension from Durham, and would not in any case have been allowed to return to the Priory of Wetherhal. In the Register of Bishop Welton (MS. p. 6) there is a record of the institution of this second William on June 21st, 1354; but it does not appear what was the cause of this delay or second institution. He is a party to a Convention with Richard de Salkeld, Lord of Corkby, concerning a fishery, dated Monday, August 5th, 1342 (Register of Wetherhal, No. 244). Dr Todd (MS. Notitia) calls him incorrectly William de Santfield, giving the authority of the Bishop's Register. A copy of a seal of this Prior, said to have been appended to a deed of 1342, is given in Hutchinson, History, Cumberland, i. 348.

17. William de Brudford, or Brydford, "sacræ paginæ professor" and Monk of S. Mary's, York, was admitted into the Priory of Wederhal in August 1373 (Register of Bp Appleby, MS. p. 258). He was made Abbot of S. Mary's, York, in 1382, and he died in August, 1389 (Dugdale, Monasticon, iii. 539).

18. Richard de Appilton, Monk of S. Mary's, York, was instituted to the Priory of Wederhale in 1382, there being at the time some dispute about the Churches of Wetherhal and Warwick (Register of Bp Appleby, MS. p. 342).

19. Thomas Pygott, or Pigot, was admitted to the Priory of Wederhale on October 12th, 1386 (Register of Bp Appleby, MS. p. 362). He appeared in court at York in 1392, being Prior of Wederhale, as Proctor for the Abbot and Convent of S. Mary at York, in a trial concerning the repairs of the chancel of the Church at Brumfeld (Register of Bp Appleby, pp. 365—367). He was confirmed Abbot of S. Mary's, York, on May 24th, 1399 (Dugdale, Monasticon, iii. 539, quoting Pat. 21 Ric. II. p. 1, and Harleian MS. 6961, fol. 253).

20. John de Stutton, Prior of the Priory of Wederhale, is party to an arrangement concerning the Chapel of S. Mary in Le Wyth in the Parish of Morland dated April 15, 1405 (see Illustrative Documents, xviii.).

21. Thomas Stanley, Abbot (sic) of Wederhill, was returned by the Commissioners in a List of Gentry of the County of Cumberland in 12 Henry VI. 1434 (S. Jefferson, Leath Ward p. 495).

22. Robert Hertford, Prior of Wederhal, is a party to an agreement with John de Warthwick, September 21st, 1444 (Extract from Carlisle Dean and Chapter Registers).

23. Thomas Bothe, Prior of Wederhale, appears in an Account of the lands of Morehouse, in the lordship of Warthewyk, belonging to the Priory, dated January 26th, 1455, and given in the Register of Wetherhal (No. 239). He was elected Abbot of S. Mary's, York, Oct. 16th, 1464, and his name occurs as late as 1481 (Dugdale, Monasticon, iii. 539, quoting Pat. 4 Ed. IV. p. 1); his successor, William Sever, afterwards Bishop of Carlisle, was appointed in 1485.

24. Robert Esyngwalde, Prior of Wedyryhall, occurs in an original Parchment Rental dated October, 1490 (see Illustrative Documents, XLIV.).

25. In the Carlisle Dean and Chapter Minute Books (vol. ii. p. 11, also in vol. i. p. 16^a) there is a lease of the tithes of Morland, dated January 25th, 155⁸/₉, which refers to the grant of a lease by W. (William Thornton), Abbot of S. Mary's, York, on October 17th, 1535, at the expiration of a lease for 41 years granted by Robert Allonbye, Prior (of Wederhal). This would bring the date of the Prior to about 1494.

26. William Thornton, Prior of Wederhale, was made Abbot of S. Mary's, York, in March, 1530 (Dugdale, Monasticon, iii. 539, quoting Orig. 22 Hen. VIII. MS. Lands. p. 62). Over the south window of the chancel of Wetherhal Church is the inscription

27. Richard Wederhall, Prior of Wederhall, appears in the Valor Ecclesiasticus, 26 Hen. VIII. 1534—35 (Illustrative Documents, XLV.). Over the chancel door of Wetherhal Church is the inscription

28. Radulphus, or Ralph, Hartley was Prior of Wetherhall at the surrender of the Priory on October 20th, 1538. The Surrender, signed by him, has a seal with the initials R. H. (Illustrative Documents, XXXIX.). He was party to a lease dated June 20th, 1538, and referred to in a lease dated January 25th, 155⁸/₉ (Carlisle Dean and Chapter Minute Books, vol. i. p. 16). He received a pension of £12 per annum, but beyond this he had a life interest in the Rectory of the Churches of Wetherhal and Warwick together with the tithes of the Chapels of S. Anthony and S. Severin. These were secured to him by Royal Letters Patent under the seal of the Court of Augmentations and were valued at £26. 13s. 4d. (Illustrative Documents, XL.). He was alive in 1555 for in the Roll of Payments to the Religious in 2 & 3 Philip and Mary his name appears—“Wetherail, nuper Mon. Annuit. Edwardi Waller, per annum xls. Penc. Radulphi Hartley, per annum xij li."
